THE AMERICAN FIRE INSURANCE.

A Company That Is Staunch and True.

It is seldom that a more attractive or newsy paper falls into one's hands than the edition of March 14, 1891, of the Philadelphia Times, a copy of which came to us yesterday. It is superbly illustrated and full of solid reading matter, a larger share of which is devoted to that oldest and most reliable of fire insurance companies, the American.

This old Philadelphia company commemorated its eighty first anniversary on the date of the above-named paper, and on that account was given the space and importance it there occupies.

The names connected with this company as its stockholders and officers shows that it was made up of the patriotic, solid men of the early days of the republic. For instance its first president was Captain William Jones, whose name is indissolubly connected with the early military achievements of our nation, both on land and sea. He was followed in the office by Guy Bryan, James Vauxem, Chandler Price, Joseph Reed, William Davidson, Samuel C. Morton, George Abbott, Thos. Ross Marris and Thomas H Montgomery.

Its record all through shows that it has been under the management of the most staunch and substantial citizens of the old Quaker city, and has always met every loss and claims upon it. It has always met its losses promptly and fully, and built up a magnificent business, as well as being a factor in giving great impetus to other business enterprises. Brown, Craig & Co., of San Francisco, represent it upon this coast, and it is the assumer of the business of the Pacific Insurance company. Its early and progressive history, as given by the Times, forms interesting and instructive reading.

An Oregon Railroad Inventor.

The Pendleton East Oregonian says that Dr. J. E. Mahana has returned to Freewater from his tour of the East in the interests of the single rail and saddle car system, of which he is inventor. Dr. Mahana's visit was more successful, even, than anticipated. The feasibility of his plan, which has rapid transit, light equipage, heavy grades and reduced cost of operation, to recommend it, was admitted wherever explained. The first road on the new system will be built in Vermont between Montpelier and Rutland, a distance of 70 miles. A bonus of $3000 a mile, or $210,000, will be donated by these two cities and intermediate points, a line being badly needed on the route proposed. Vermont newspapers received by the doctor since his return show that $157,000 of the subsidy has now been secured. The people in the places mentioned are enthusiastic over the system. Through the assistance of able attorneys at Washington, Dr. Mahana succeeded in securing four patents, which cover the principal points of his invention. He has substituted steam for electricity as the prime motor, and will use the latter power as an auxiliary. Trains will be drawn by a steam motor and will have at the rear an electrical appliance for retarding speed on down-grades and for assistance in climbing up-grades. A test road of three miles will be first built in Vermont by the company organized at Union, Oregon. Should it prove successful, which there is no reason to doubt, it will be the first step toward revolutionizing railroad building in America.

Queer Notions.

The liking of some people for peculiar pets is hard to account for. The Oregonian, for instance, relates: "Charley Whitcomb, who resides on Sherman street, has had for two years past a beautiful pet in the shape of a pine marten, which has been as tame and as playful as a kitten. It broke its chain a day or two since, and as soon as it was at liberty endeavored to escape. Its master chased it into a corner and grabbed it, and before he could get it secured it had made fourteen wounds on his hand. One hand is severely injured and is covered with bandages. The little animal is so pretty that Charley can't think of parting with it, but he will file off the sharp canine teeth for which it has no use so long as its food is provided for it. The marten got loose a short time ago and waltzed through a chicken house like a destroying angel, killing enough poultry in a few minutes to keep it a year." One cannot help thinking that a less dangerous and destructive pet would be preferable.

After Ten Years.

Ten years ago to-day Clint Brown was lodged in the Oregon Penitentiary under a life sentence for killing a man named Walker, in Lane county, who had been endeavoring to break up Brown's home and happiness. To-day he was pardoned out and went forth a free man to reunite himself with his two children. A strong petition and recommendation of the district attorney caused the cessation of a sentence which is now said should never have been imposed. Brown has been a trusty almost the entire time of his incarceration.—Salem Journal.

A LETTER FROM PORTLAND.

Notes of Interest from Oregon's Big Metropolis

PORTLAND, Or., April 27, 1891.
To the Editor of the Herald.

In a city like Portland, there are a great many curious scraps of history to attract a person of an enquiring mind, especially on subjects that pertain to the social as well as business affairs of this city whose wealth is greater per capita than any other city of Uncle Sam's dominions. So claimed by those who pretend to be posted.

Now the question naturally arises is it because the people are piously inclined and because the lofty spires of the numerous churches pierce the heavens with propitiating power toward the ruler of the universe where the church going bell recalls the hour of prayer and reminds the Christian, and the wayward, that an hour spent in meditation is not altogether lost. Are they the wealthy ones, and are they prosperous because of their goodness. Strict inquiry reveals the fact that the richest men are rather lacking in piety while many of them are absolutely rich and they don't care who knows it. This is better however to be known as a bad man because then there is no hypocrisy in it, and you know where to find him and what to expect of him, he is honest in his professions. While the pious elder or deacon masquerades as a man of model piety while in reality, he is only a vile hypocrite—and there are plenty of them here—only their wealth shield them from such exposures as would consign them wealth and all to the hell they so justly deserve.

Now these wolves in sheeps clothing are not a few by any means, these pious frauds are met within all the churches, dishonest treacherous wretches that wear the livery of heaven that they may serve the devil their master more efficiently. White haired old reprobates with one foot in the grave, and meek mannered sleek appearing rascals in close companionship, wholly intent on deceiving each other and robbing the unwary whose confidence they have gained. These are they who make long prayers and give sparingly of their wealth, who cheat the widow, and swindle the fatherless, who insult and drive to desperation unprotected women and innocent girls, till their footsteps take hold on hell—I cannot understand why such men are allowed to cover their iniquities by the cloak of religion. Portland is a wicked adulterous city, but all prosperous cities are wicked, saloons, gambling dens, and bawdy houses rear their damning habitations on the principal street and in the shadow of the house of God, but the chief of police and other good business men say that such places are a business necessity, therefore they stand out prominently as an index to Portland's character and success in the future. The mayor is an active successful business man, owns fast horses, fast houses, and is fast enough to keep in the front rank himself, as banker, broker, farmer and miner, distinguished for his wealth as the position he occupies as mayor, without which however he is only an ordinary man, as many of his acts and utterances indicate.

I saw Gov. Pennoyer yesterday, he seemed to be feeling badly, he was leaning meditatively against a telegraph pole and no doubt was regretfully thinking of the perfidious way of political demagogues and unfair newspaper reporters. Now is the winter of our discontent, the rain is coming down, the streets are flooded with mud and water, and the umbrella brigade tramps up and down regardless of the mist that permeate the clothing if it does not dampen the ardor of the restless pedestrians, and notwithstanding this, a curious crowd are idly hanging around a gun store on 2d street where a burglar met his death from a load of buckshort fired by the clerk who had been aroused from his slumbers by the breaking of a window through which the burglar incautiously ventured—while his partner kept watch on the outside. In a little room on 4th, street called the morgue the burglar lies unconscious of the curious crowd that anxiously scan the features of the unfortunate young man who seems to be a stranger, and unknown.

"Vice is a monster of such hideous mien
That to be hated needs but to be seen
But seen too oft, familiar grows its face
We first endure, then pity, then embrace.

Off for the Sea Island.

Frank C. Baker, the state printer, left last evening for San Francisco on his way to the Sandwich Islands, where he goes to visit Charles Baker, his brother. They have not met since 1872, and Mr. Baker expects to be absent about five weeks. Upon his return he will attend the convention of the International Typographical Union, to be held at Boston June 8. Mr. Baker states the work of the last legislature nearly cleared up, and during his absence the state printing office will be looked after by George Hibbert, of Astoria.—Salem Journal.

FROM LANE COUNTY.

Safe Blowing Burglars—A Bad Canvasser—Eugene Street Railway

Eugene Register.

Last Thursday night J. H. Whiteaker's store at Creswell was broken into and the safe robbed. The burglars drilled into the safe and blew it open with powder. They first covered the floor around the safe with trash so as to deaden the sound of the explosion. They were successfu in their efforts and secured about $500 in cash. Of this amount about $40 belonged to Mr. Whiteaker and $360 belonged to B. B. Scott, he having placed it there for safe keeping, as he supposed. The officers were notified early Friday morning and commenced a search for the burglars but have been unable to find any clue of them. The country is full of suspicious characters and there was nothing about what was stolen by which to identify it.

The editor of the Springfield Gazette mourns the loss of a canvasser and several big dollars. A nice appearing young man struck Springfield a few days ago and the editor of the Gazette hired him to canvass for subscribers. He purchased a horse and outfit and sold them to the young man on time. After canvassing a few days the young man sold his outfit for cash, which he pocketed along with the subscripton money he had collected, and skipped out without leaving his future address.

W. Saunders' store at Drain was robbed Saturday night. The burglars entered through the back door and having plenty of time took away all they could carry. They carted off the cultery, a lot of clothing, tobacco, and other things to the value of about $300. there is no clue to the robbers, but they are probably the same ones who robbed Whiteaker's store at Cresswell a couple nights previous.

The commencement exercises at the State University in this city will begin Sunday, June 14. Rev. C. L. Cowin, of Salem, has been engaged to deliver the baccalaureate sermon. Arthur L. Frazier, of Portland, of the class of '82, will deliver the address before the University, June 17th, at 7 P. M.

The members of J. W. Geary Post G. A. R. of this city are arranging to hold a reunion of old soldiers here on or about July 4th, to continue two or three days. An effort will be made to have a reunion of all old soldiers in Lane, Linn, Douglas and Benton counties.

BAKER WILL NOT BE DOWNED.

He Has Abplanalp Arrested on Another Provision of the Law.

Justice Wood rendered a decision in the case of the state vs. M. Abplanalp, the dairyman arrested for violating the "cubic air" law, yesterday afternoon and found for the defendant. He saw that the omission of the word "each" after the words "such cows so contined shall be allowed at least 800 cubic feet of air" in section 3 of the law, making the production or sale of adulterated or unwelcome foods a misdemeanor, punishable by fine or imprisonment, defeated its object, and that the defendant could not be held on the complaint sworn to by State Food Commissioner W. W. Baker.

Mr. Baker, however, was not to be outdone, even by a defect in the law, and when he heard the decision he straightway made out another complaint. This complaint is based on the same law, but not on the same provision. It charges AbPlanalp with keeping cows in a stable which is not properly ventilated and is not in a healthy condition. Mr. Baker is of the opinion that he can secure a conviction on the new complaint. He firmly believes that Abplanalp does not give his cows the amount of air necessary to good health, and that the milk he sells consequently is unwholesome. Abplanalp will be re arrested some time to-day and then he will have to go through the mill once more. In regard to the law under which Abplanalp was prosecuted for depriving his cows of a reasonable amount of air, Food Commissioner Baker yesterday said:

"While I assisted in gathering the provisions on which the law is based, the law itself was framed by one of the ablest jurists in the state. The original copy is in his own handwriting, but whether it reads as it appears in the book I can't say. I don't think he would overlook a defect in the law in framing it. The 300 cubic feet of air provision is a good one. In Canada, England, and many of the Eastern states the amount of air required for each cow is 1000 cubic feet, but in view of our mild climate, and the fact that most of our stables are well ventilated, we concluded that the 800 limit was high enough."

Their Last Game of Cards.

By a singular coincidence William Hayes, the burglar, and Jack Harris, the gambler, ended their earthly career on the same day. There may have been a fatality in the game of cards they played together the evening before. They were in the Elite saloon. Neither had a cent in his pocket. One suggested a game of cards for the drinks. The other accepted the invitation. Each thought the other had money and strove to win. Luck was against Hayes and he lost the game. Harris was considerably put out because Hayes played for drinks when he had no money, but said nothing about his own financial condition. Neither of them got the drink he played for so hard. The following noon Harris heard of the killing of Hayes and said he would, just for luck, go and take a look at the corpse of the man who beat him out of a drink. An hour later he was a corpse himself.—Oregonian.

Call early and secure the best pantaloons to order at cost. Zaches, the tailor, opposite postoffice.

COAST NOTES.

A dispatch from Sprague, Wash., says that Jake Griswold alias Jake Young, accused of horse and cattle stealing, was arrested on Monday in Egypt precinct. While going from the place of arrest to Fort Spokane, the prisoner leaped from the buggy and made for the timber, in the endeavor to escape. The deputy called to him to halt, and the command not being heeded the deputy pulled his gun and fired, the shot taking effect in the left leg of the prisoner. The prisoner was then recaptured and taken to Fort Spokane. It will probably be necessary to amputate the limb.

Professor John LeConte of the California State University, at Berkely, died Wednesday night, aged 73 years.

The Ladies of the presidental reception committee of Portland have decided to tender Mrs. Harrison, and the other ladies of the party, a reception at the Hotel Portland, on the evening of May 5. The members of the chamber of commerce will march in a body to receive the president.

The Salem Statesman says that City Surveyor Alonzo Gesner, desirous of attending to a surveying contract for the government of lands on the Alsea river in Benton county, has been granted a leave of absence by the city council and he has appointed E. J. McCaustland, a first-class civil engineer, to act as his deputy. Mr. Gesner will go to the Alsea county about Wednesday, and will remain away from Salem about five months. County Surveyor Culver is doing government surveying in Clatsop county, and John Newsome acts in his capacity in this county.

The notarial appointments by the governor Thursday were Thos. Flinn and R. E. Bryan, of La Grande; J. H. Mansell, Astoria; J. T. Donnelly, Baker City; and C. H. Lombard, Portland. In connection with this it may be information to all that a law passed by the last legislature requires all notaries public to register their commissions with the county clerk and unless they do so they forfeit their commission.

Oregon Prune Growing.

The name and fame of Oregon prunes is spreading as the months roll on and they are most thoroughly introduced throughout the states of the East, North and South. Many acres in the Willamette valley are being planted to prunes this year. At Corvallis companies have been formed for the purchasing of lands and starting prune orchards. The same thing has been done at Eugene, and at Albany many acres have been set out. At The Dalles 200 acres have been planted to prunes within the past few months and more are being put in now. Another company has just been formed at Corvallis and 100 acres of prunes will be planted forthwith. In the vicinity of Salem the land companies are selling small tracts and planting prunes on them for non-residents who wish it. Columbia county fruit growers are also making a specialty of prunes, while some are of the opinion that there is danger of overdoing the matter in this line, we are glad to see many of them arranging for larger orchards, and improving the old ones.—Oregonian.
