RESETTING PALESTINE.

It is announced that the Rothschilds are willing to contribute to the fund for colonizing the expelled Russian Jews, and that instead of having named any specific sum as their contribution they practically stand in the position of having guaranteed to make up whatever deficit there may be after all others have subscribed.

But what disposition shall be made of the exiles? Baron Hirsch's plan was to colonize them in South America, but Baron Rothschild favors the colonization of Palestine.

In considering such a question we must discriminate between sober fact and the romance and enthusiasm of Hebrew poetry. A "land flowing with milk and honey" would be wonderfully attractive to a band of exiles after forty years of wandering in the desert, but it is easy to see that milk and honey were the only staple products of the country there would be but little inducement to resettle it at the present day.

Sentiment, tradition and national pride may operate strongly in favor of Palestine, but when it comes to finding a home for exiled Russian Jews, and forming them into a self-supporting community and something more, tradition and sentiment must yield to the stern logic of facts.

SECRETARY RUSK, in speaking of the presidential excursion on their return to Washington said: It was a wonderful one. Especially gratifying was the reception in the South; but the great American public was enthusiastic from start to finish, and if the good folks on the route omitted any courtesy, it would be more than he could do to discover the gap.

SECRETARY OF THE Interior Noble says it is true he demands young Raun's resignation, because of his selling offices and making false returns of civil examination.

CONSIDERABLE fuss has been kicked up over the assault upon the future czar of Russia while on a visit to Japan.

On the Czarowitz the more reason we have for the suspicion that his highness got into the scrape by indulging the natural desire of a prince to see the sights incognito.

One object of the new tariff law is to induce manufacturing in this country. As an evidence that it accomplishes that design we have but to allude to the following from an influential English paper: "Undoubtedly the McKinley tariff bill operates to encourage this emigration. The machinery of many English mills is being removed en bloc to the States with English operatives to set it going."

Some peculiar situation arise in our governmental affairs that puzzle the officials. An interesting question has arisen at the treasury department, in connection with the present silver law.

The consolidation business in Portland is the important question in that burg and is making quite an interesting canvas.
