OREGON STATE GRANGE.

Continuation of the Session at Hillsboro—Reports of Secretary and Lecturer.

Thursday morning the secretary read his annual report. It showed the Oregon state grange to be in a more flourishing condition than it has been for ten years past. Five new granges have been organized, at Balston, Polk county; Lone Rock Wasco county; Fairmount, Benton county; and Saver, Polk county. Five granges have been re-organized, Charity, No. 76, in Lane county; Helix, Unatilla county; Fairview, Coos county; Wasco, Wasco county; and Mill Creek, Polk county. Six hundred copies of the proceedings of the state grange of last year have been circulated. It was found that 86 paid up grangers were on the roll, with a membership of 3040. A proposal to reduce the initiation fees from $3 for men and $1 50 for women to $1 for men and 50 cents for women was submitted, and remotes to be acted upon. The state grange lecturer for this year, Mr. Wm. Holder, of Grass Valley read his annual report, which was referred to the committee on division of labor. Mr. A. F. Dewey, of the Pacific Coast Rural Press, San Francisco, and secretary of the California state grange, was present as visitor. The attendance was very satisfactory, granges being represented by about fifty delegates and quite a number of visitors, in addition to the local grange which has over 100 members of its own. The hotel accommodation was inadequate for so many visitors, but the citizens vied with each other in entertaining the strangers in a way which seems to merit their appreciation. Thursday afternoon almost the whole delegation and visitors were treated by the citizens to a drive through Tualatin plains in order that these representatives of the different sections of Oregon's farming country might see some of the beautiful farms in Washington county.

Vernona Jarbeau.

Miss Vernona Jarbeau is a wonderfully versatile little woman. She can sing a more or less naughty chansonette with Parisian chic, dance the Spanish caduca with the grace of a Maifrid flower girl, render Verdi's "Il Balco" in his native Italian with a wealth of florid coloring; play a boydenial gum-chewing American school girl to the life, and imitate a French opera bouffe struggling with an English pastoral ditty with inimitable skill. The skit in which Miss Jarbeau and the company of very clever people she has got together which appear at the opera house in this city Monday evening, is simple a vehicle for the introduction of the specialties of the star and her support. There is no pretense of a plot to "Starlight," but endless opportunities are naturally made for the introduction of rollicking fun, music of the varied character indicated above and dances of almost every nation and period, from the state-of-the-art breakdown of the plantation, or the lively jig of the north-loving Irishman. There is a snap and go to the piece from the beginning and Miss Jarbeau and her clever people are at full feision while the curtain is up.

Be Careful Boys.

The other day a Salem lady was out in the yard of her residence and while there she discovered a bird of peculiar color sitting in a bush near by, and upon going near she found the bird quite tame, and was allowed to pick it up. She took it to the house and placed it in the cage and a few mornings after was surprised to hear it singing even sweeter than many fine new set songster canary birds. Her new pet seemed to thrive well for several days, until one morning it was found dead in its cage. Examination revealed the fact that the bird was one of the imported German nightingales, and that it had been injured by a stone from one of those slingshots used so maliciously by the ubiquitous small boys. These songsters were brought to this state at a cost of over $2,000 a few years ago, and it is unlawful for anyone to molest them. Boys who are in the habit of trying to kill every bird they see should desist—before they are in the hands of the law.

House Burned.

Two families in a house occupied by two families situated near J. C. Simpson's warehouse, was entirely destroyed by fire. The fire was probably caused by a defective flue, as the roof caught fire first. The families were recent emigrants to this state, the heads of whom are employed by the railroad company. As they were newcomers they had but little furniture, and consequently the loss was light. The loss of the building which was totally destroyed. The loss though small in value, was considerable to the losers as they lost all, or nearly all that they had.—Scio Press.

Nearly a Fatal Accident.

Edwin Strasser, who is an employe in Kottman's sawmill 1 1/2 miles east of Scio, who was unfortunate on Monday evening as to slip when passing near the saw, and fell so that one of his hands came in contact with it, also his breast was so near the saw that his shirt was cut and tore by it. As it was some of his fingers were cut to the bone, he came within an inch of losing his life.

STATE W. C. T. U. CONVENTION.

The ninth annual convention of the Oregon Woman's Christian Temperance Union met in Portland May 25th. Saturday was devoted to a recreational meeting. The representation was very good on Saturday, and when the business meeting was called to order Monday morning the largest and most influential gathering of W. C. T. U. women ever convened in Oregon was in the convention.

We were fortunate in having with us Mrs. Sturtevant Pett president of Northern California, and Mrs. Spencer, her corresponding secretary, as well as Mrs. Emily Pitt Seavens of Alameda California who has been doing much to entice and strengthen the Unions in the valley; and also Mrs. Adams of Cleveland Ohio who has been doing some very hard journeying for the white ribbon cause.

Mrs. Uruth and Mrs. Cox of Kansas told of the triumph of prohibition in that state. Committee on Credentials report 105 delegates present. The report of Henrietta Brown corresponding secretary showed 80 Unions reporting an increase of 20 Unions during the year. The report Miss Gotschall and Miss Proctor, of the Oregon White Ribbon was received with enthusiasm and subscriptions were received. Mrs. White Ribbon is worthy of, and will receive the cordial support of every temperance woman and man of Oregon.

Mrs. Narcissa White-Kinney of Astoria, as conductor of school of methods followed the reports of superintendents with bright, helpful suggestions as how to best do our work. The reports of superintendent showed some work in nearly all departments and very good work in some of them. The reports of the county presidents showed that the work of county organization had been well advanced during the year.

Tuesday morning the officers for the new year were elected. Mrs. A. R. Riggs, president; Mrs. Susie Foster, of Portsmouth, corresponding secretary; Mrs. L. A. Shyne of Portland, recording secretary; Mrs. M. Bilyen, of Eugene, treasurer. It was voted to give our president a salary. She has given her time and strength all these years for love of the work, and we are more than glad to be able to take an advance step.

The increase in the number of unions, the increase of more than 700 to our membership, the success of "the Oregon white ribbon" being assured, and our ability to satisfy our president, mark a work of '91 as very encouraging and stimulating. Wednesday morning, after electing Mrs. Narcissa White-Kinney, of Astoria, Mrs. L. A. White, of Moro, Mrs. Norris, of Ashland, Mrs. Henrietta Brown, of Albany, to represent the Oregon unions in the Pacific conference, in connection with our state officers, the convention adjourned to meet in Astoria in the spring of 1892.

Natural Gas.

While at Lebanon, says the San Francisco Mining Review, your correspondent went with some enterprising gentleman of that town to inspect some prospects of natural gas. Near a small stream is a bar, partially covered with alluvial soil. Between the soil and the water is a strip of sand, loam, more or less damp and quite soft. By pushing a rod into the soil earth and withdrawing it, a small hole is left, from which gas escapes, and which is readily ignited with a match. The gas continues to burn until the soil subsides of the whole close together, and so out of its escape. It burns sometimes over a minute with a flame a foot or more in height. The flame is blue and is very hot. Coal lies in the hills not far distant, and it is said that the iridescent effect of oil on water is constantly seen on the surface of the stream in the neighborhood of the gas wells. At the time of the visit here spoken of it was raining, the creek was high, and the ground full of water and very soft. Yet, on pushing a cane into the earth, gas escaped in sufficient quantity to give light enough to see the water seep into the hole and close it.

Quite a Step.

The Grant's Pass Courier says that on Tuesday night's north bound train, which stopped near tunnel 9 to take water, being dark, a passenger thought he would step off for a moment, not knowing the train was on a high trestle. He stepped off and landed fifty feet below in a canyon. Strange to say his cries for help were heard and he was carried back to the train he was carried and was taken on to Roseburg where he received medical treatment.
