The Killing of Harris. A letter received from Mr. Fred. L. Harris, of Minnville, makes some corrections in the published account of the accidental killing of H. G. Harris near Marion recently He says: In the first place no letter was found becaling the boy's character or damaging to it in any respect or particular, on or near he body. Second, that from the fact that he was supplied with money as found near the body, he was not a tramp, and again that he was not from Albany, but on the contrary, had bought a ticket at Woodbarn for some point in Jack son county. In view of these facts it is perhaps pardonable in me to suggest that a correction of that statement be made in your journal should you so condescend, and for your information would submit the follows: His name was Holmes George Harris, and was a son of Wyatt Harris of this place aged 22 years. Had for a few days been working in a narsery at Woodburn, Oregon. Was well liked and a favorite with all who knew him and possessed an exceptionably good character. Was well educated and of a respectable family. It is supposed that he fell between the platforms of the cars and was crushed under the wheels. No facts beyond the immediate cause could be descovered concerning his death.
