The Paltimore American is inclined to think that these reports selfish sources-persons who have been disappointed by not being the enterprise, or those who have delays and long discussions over preliminary steps, but they have the vastness of the undertaking and the details necessary to make it a success. The project is developing all the time, and had the Glorious Fourth management rashly begun work with an imperfect knowled, e of their responsibilities much of it would have to be undone, with a greater loss of time and money than delay will cause. In matters of this sort a comprehensive grasp of the scheme, combined with an accurate knowledge of details, is absolutely necessary, and this can only be gained by patient and persisted study and labor. When this is once mastered, the execution of the plan can go on with agers, for instance, had not until Will be in session at Eugene recently an idea of the part to be played in the exhibition by foreign countries or the individual states of our own country, and it would have been felly to unfold a plan in which these factors were not ascertained with some ap proach to accuracy.
