MITCHELL IN OREGON

He Expresses His Opinion on Various Topics of Interest.

WHAT CONGRESS WILL DO.

The Next Presidential Business—The Effect of the Third Party Movement in the Election of 1892.

PORTLAND, June 6.—United States Senator John H. Mitchell arrived in this city at 1 o'clock today. In an interview he said: "I am still decidedly in favor of a boat railway at The Dalles, as a permanent improvement. I regret very much that the Raley bill, making an appropriation by the state to build a portage road, was not passed, as it would have afforded temporary relief, and it is probably impossible to obtain appropriations from the general government for temporary improvements in the shape of a portage road, but I am willing to do all in my power to expedite the project for temporary improvement in the shape of a portage road, but think it could be done if it might tend to delay if not defeat the more necessary permanent improvement. I believe a boat railway is entirely practicable. It is no longer an experiment, and the government engineers have reported that it is entirely feasible. The full estimate of the cost of a boat railway is $2,000,000, and my bill making an appropriation of that amount for this purpose passed the senate at its last session. With that amount available, the opinion of the war department is that the work can be completed in eighteen months. The senate at its last session appropriated a sufficient amount to complete the improvement at the mouth of the Columbia, and also the locks at the Cascades. It was also recommended in addition to these appropriations that we expect to secure sufficient appropriations to continue the work at Yaquina, and we hope to complete the works at Coos bay, Siuslaw and Tillamook. Of course, a special effort must be made by the Oregon delegation to secure appropriations for the improvement of the Willamette river from Corvallis to Portland, and the lower Willamette and Columbia rivers from Portland to Astoria.

"What will be the probable action of the next congress on the question of silver coinage? There was undoubtedly a large majority of both houses of the last congress in favor of the free coinage bill. What the next congress may do on that subject I am unable to say.

"Whether either of the two great political parties will declare for free coinage in its next national platform is somewhat doubtful, especially if Cleveland should be the democratic and Harrison the republican nominee, as I believe they will. In that event, inasmuch as President Harrison is decidedly in favor of the double standard and of giving large recognition of silver, although not to the extent of free and unlimited coinage, and as Cleveland has shown himself by his record, but while president and in his recent letter on the subject, to be decidedly a monometalist, and in view of the tariff issue, which, in my judgment, will be the leading issue of the next campaign, Harrison will be re-elected. If, however, the democrats nominate Hill, of New York, or some Western man, and should have a coinage platform in their platform, they would have great doubts as to Harrison's election.

"What will be the probable effect of the third party movement in the next presidential campaign? One effect, and a very salutary one, will be put both the old parties on their good behavior. That there are some just grievances upon the part of the many of the men engaged in the new party movement there can be no doubt, while many engaged in it are only looking to the promotion of their individual interests. The effect of a third ticket will be decidedly in the interest of the democratic party, and hurtful to the republican party, as I do not believe the third party can carry a single Southern state. The Southern alliance men are almost unanimously democratic, and while they might support an independent movement in state or local elections, they will vote for the democratic nominee for president. The only hope of the third party for any electoral votes is in Nebraska, Kansas and perhaps Wisconsin."

CENTRAL AMERICA'S LUMBER.

Good Trees Few and Far Between Chance for Lumbermen.

"The construction of the Nicaragua canal ought to bring a good deal of business to the Puget sound lumber mills," said Colonel E. H. Morrison yesterday. "A vast amount of heavy timber will have to be used in the work, and Puget sound fir will be both the best and accessible supply. There is no lumber in Central America suitable for the purpose. The hard woods indigenous to that country are not found in such quantities as to be cheaply logged. A mistaken impression is abroad in regard to the forests of that section. People have a general idea that great tracts of country are covered with splendid trees, so that one can go into the forests and cut good logs suitable for lumber. The fact is that, though the forests are thick, the majority of the trees are too small to be worth cutting. Here and there a large mallogany tree is found and a man chops it down. In order to get it out he has to cut a trail through a quantity of worthless timber and run it down to the nearest river. There will probably not be another tree worth cutting for a long distance. It is by the slow collection of logs cut from isolated trees in this way that the shipments are made. The cost of logging and of holding a stock of logs until there is enough to ship make these kinds of lumber so expensive.

"Many people have been fooled by the expectation of immense fortunes in lumbering in Central and South America. A friend of mine took a complete sawmill and logging outfit with a party of skilled men to one of the south American rivers, expecting to do wonders. He found the ground swampy, swarming with reptiles, and covered with such a dense jungle that traveling through the Puget sound woods is a picnic by comparison. He also found that there was only a tree here and there worth cutting, and by the time he had cut a trail to it, the beginning of his trail was so thickly grown up with brush again that he could hardly find it. After one night's rain and brush would grow up to a height of six feet in a day. He was glad to get out of it again. There is one tree down there called the snakewood which grows to a great thickness, but when you come to chop it down you find that it is nearly all soft bark. When you do finally come to hard wood, it is extremely hard, but there will be only about four inches of it in a tree as many feet in diameter. It is used mainly for canes, which cost $3 or $4 in South America and several times as much in this country.

"There are a number of good kinds of lumber down there which would be useful, but have never been brought into use. I suppose they happen never to have become fashionable. Yet they are of fine shades, and beautiful, fine grain, and would look well in furniture and interior decoration. The grow thicker than the better kind hardwoods, and would be much cheaper."

AN ATROCIOUS DEED.

TRAMPS COMMIT A TERRIBLE CRIME ON A BOY.

A Possie Is In Pursuit of the Scoundrels—They Will Surely be Hung if Captured.

WATERLOO, Ia., June 6.—Yesterday afternoon Joseph Brannon, aged 19, was a work for a farmer and would look well in furniture and interior decoration. The grow thicker than the better kind hardwoods, and would be much cheaper."

A FREAK OF NATURE.

A Child Born Without Eyes in New York.

NEW YORK, June 6.—An extraordinary freak of nature, a child born without eyes, is attracting attention among the neighbors of the afflicted family, and also among physicians and scientists. The child is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Zuker, and was born two weeks ago last Sunday, without eyes. Both father and mother are good specimens of humanity physically. Their sight is normal and neither has ever worn glasses. Where the eyes of the child should be are only two sunken hollows. The eyelids were originally closed as tight as if they were glued together. Otherwise the child was perfectly developed. A few days afterward a line began to make its appearance across the hollows, as though the lids were getting ready to part.

The line began to expand until finally the lids could be parted with the fingers, disclosing sightless sockets, in the center of which could be discerned a tiny blue spot which it was supposed to have been substituted by nature for the pupil.

Sir John MacDonald Dying.

OTTAWA, June 6.—Sir John MacDonald is still sinking rapidly at 12:25 this morning. He is now unconscious and the doctors concur in the opinion that life will be extinct before morning.

WILL SHE COME BACK

United States Officers Have Possession of the Itata.

HER CONDITION DISCUSSED.

The Insurgents Ask that the Arms Be Left in Chile Until the Difficulty is Settled.

NEW YORK, June 5.—A special from Iquique, Chili, says: Captain Manzum, commander of the Itata, is the hero of the hour and was given a rousing reception by the citizens when he landed and reported his arrival to the insurgent authorities. He was warmly received, too, by his superior officers, though they gave him, officially, the unwelcome tidings that his running away had been of no avail, and that he was to return to San Diego as a prize of the Charleston. The captain took the matter philosophically, and soon returned to his ship to prepare her for the surrender. In the meantime the United States consul has been officially notified that Admiral McCann could have possession of the late fugitive whenever he chose. He at once informed the admiral of this fact, and a boat's crew in the steam launch, in charge of an officer, was sent to the Itata with a request to the captain to repair aboard the flagship Baltimore, with a view to discussing the condition of his vessel, and the stores and repairs needed to enable her to make the return trip, and to officially inform him that he was to regard his vessel as being subject to orders from the American admiral. Of course Captain Manzum accepted the invitation and stepping into the launch, was soon on board the Baltimore. In the admiral's cabin he found Admiral McCann and Brown, Captain Schley and Captain Remy, of the Charleston, who had previously been summoned to take part in the interview and to hear what Captain Manzum had to say about the condition of his ship, his run from San Diego to Iquique and the manner in which he evaded the Charleston. As a result of the conference it was arranged that a prize crew from the Charleston should go aboard the Itata this morning and take formal possession of the ship. Just what led the insurgents to surrender the ship and arms is not known definitely, but the general opinion is that Admiral McCann informed the authorities that unless the cargo as well as the ship were given up to him, he, in conformity with his instructions from the navy department, would take action to get them. The rebels have all they want on their hands now with Balmaceda's forces and had no desire to bring down on them the enmity of Uncle Sam's naval forces, here, including, as they do, such powerful ships as the Baltimore, Charleston and San Francisco. The representatives of the congressional government have issued a statement in which they say: "The congressional party has acted in strict honesty in making every statement for having violated the laws of the United States." There prevails here, nevertheless, the impression that its action, while strictly complying with the words of the compact, even exceeded it in spirit, since the letter of Errazuriz considered exclusively that the offense was committed in San Diego, and that the arms provided to be restored had been taken on board at San Diego. It is a fact that the Junta de Gobierno, in a communication addressed to Secretary Blaine, has called his attention to the fact that the Itata did not embark the arms at San Diego, but did so after she had sailed from that port and at an uninhabited island far from the coast. The Junta appeals to considerations of equity and humanity, and has asked that while the Itata goes to San Diego the arms may remain here in custody of the American admiral until judgment is rendered by the California courts.

An Elephant in the Queen.

LONDON, June 6.—Queen Victoria has presented an elephant to the sultan of Morocco as a mark of appreciation of his promises to alleviate the evils of the slave trade in his dominions. The sultan has sent a large force of troops to the western provinces to subdue the periodical rebellion in that quarter.

Swelling of a Monument.

NORRISTOWN, Penn., June 6.—Six thousand soldiers, 5000 veterans and 20,000 civilians to-day took part in unrolling a monument to Major General John F. Hartman, erected by subscription by the national guards of the state.

Aid for the Missions.

MADRID, June 6.—Owing to attacks made on the missions in China, the Spanish government has ordered a man-of-war to proceed to China for the purpose of protecting subjects of Spain, whose lives are threatened by these raids.

Was Considered Honorable.

Yet an Appropriation to His Own Use of $50,000 Was Made. RALEIGH, N. C., June 6.—No case of its character in the state has

THE BIG WHEAT CROP.

There Will Be Plenty of Ships to Remove the Surplus.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 6.—"There will be no difficulty about removing our large wheat crop this year," says W. W. McNear. "There is plenty of tonnage here plenty to arrive. The number of ships on the way here is larger than is usual at this time of the year. By October there will be plenty of them. Crop reports from the Sacramento valley are very good, but reports from San Joaquin valley are not very encouraging. There is a general feeling that wheat will bring a good price this year."

"Do you think the establishment of a line of steamers direct from Chicago to Liverpool would affect the price of grain here?"

"Not very much. There are so many steamers now plying between New York and Liverpool that wheat is frequently taken as ballast."

ANOTHER UPRISING.

Guatemala is Very Likely to Have Another Revolution.

ST. LOUIS, June 6.—A dispatch from the City of Mexico says: "Advisors are received there from the city of Guatemala to the effect that secret meetings are being held in the upper districts of Guatemala at which revolutionary plans are being formulated for the overthrow of Balmaceda's government. Some small garrisons at various towns are ready to join the separatists, and many rich coffee plantation planters are ready to secede and furnish money to start a new republic. The people openly declare they will no longer endure Balmaceda's despotism. An early outbreak is expected."

HER LAST RACE RUN

HAGGIN'S GREAT MARE FIRENZE IS LAME.

Every Endeavor Will be Made to Patch Her Up Later in the Season. NEW YORK, June 6.—It is more than probable the racing public has seen the last of J. B. Haggin's great mare, Firenze. She was being prepared for her numerous engagements this season, including the New York Jockey Club handicap Suburban handicap, Monmouth cup, West Chester cup, Coney Island cup, and Champagne stakes at Mount Morris Park and her trainer, Matt Byrnes, who had charge of her during her entire racing career was more than pleased with the way the queen of the turf was taking her work. On Thursday morning, he worked her for the New York Jockey Club handicap, which is to be decided at Morris park today. She went splendidly, but pulled up a trifle lame, forward. Byrnes was worried, but hoped nothing serious had occurred. The leg became worse, and Dr. Hall, the veterinarian in charge, called at Haggin's place. He found that the cannon bone and the tendons were injured, the mare having struck herself very hard during her gallop. He did not give Byrnes much encouragement, and yesterday he was loath to admit that Firenze was gone for the last time. He would not give in, but trainers who have had lots of experience say that the mare will never see the post again. Her starting in the Suburban handicap for which she was an equal favorite with Tenny, is now of course out of the question, and the money bet on her is lost. Every endeavor will be made to patch the mare up later in the season, as she could win a great deal of money. But with the best kind of luck the chances of success are so remote as to be almost beyond hope. It will be the middle of July or the first days of August before she should face the flag. It is altogether likely that Mr. Haggin will have her sent to his ranch at Del Paso and bred to Salvador or Sir Mordred.
