YAQUINA BAY.

Oregon's Charming Summer Resort is Visited by the Teachers of the State.

Newport, June 30.—The summer excursions to this place have commenced, having opened with an excursion of 500 persons, comprising the principal teachers in our public schools and colleges.

They will attend the State Teachers' Association to be held at Newport, commencing to-day (Tuesday) and continuing until the 4th of July, when there will be a grand celebration, concluding with a magnificent display of fireworks on the bay at night.

As a summer resort Yaquina Bay naturally has no superior. Nature seems to have exerted herself in combining every feature desirable in making it a place of recreation and rest, and an Oregonian correspondent recently here says of it:

Newport's most urgent and immediate demand is for a bank and more hotel accommodations for the thousands of people who want to visit the shores of the wonder, fully exhilarating atmosphere, the healing properties of the pure spring water so remarkable to this section, and the scenic beauty combining romance and poetry, that furnishes an inexhaustible portfolio for art, and an unlimited laboratory for science.

Yaquina bay is situated about midway of the Oregon coast, 110 miles south of the mouth of the Columbia, and about 45 miles north of San Francisco. It is a port of entry, and the proposed terminus of a continental railroad that is almost completed that will be between 400 and 500 miles shorter than any other road across the continent.

The completion of this road will be of great importance and benefit to Nebraska, Wyoming, Idaho and Oregon, but especially to Oregon. In the eastern portion of the state it will hasten the settlement of large tracts of hitherto unoccupied lands. It will make accessible the inexhaustible supply of timber in the Cascade mountains. It will furnish quick and cheap transportation for the thousands of tons of wool, and give the stockman and farmer their supplies at one-half the usual prices. In the Willamette valley, it will furnish a more direct and shorter route, both for imported and exported products, and a quicker and more commodious route for travel.

Although the road has already cost millions of dollars, the saving to the producers and consumers within the reach of this line will soon equal the cost of the road. The facilities for handling freight, the difference in distance to market—being 200 miles nearer, the saving of time, of towage and insurance, the safety of the harbor, all contribute to the grand result. This difference in freight alone realizes to the producer from 10 to 15 per cent. more than could be had were it not for this direct and shorter route.

Oregon City Enterprise: There will soon be an opportunity to remedy the gigantic evil of contract prison labor in the Oregon state penitentiary. The contract was held by Messrs. Goldsmith & Leowenberg, the stove foundrymen, whereby they control the working force of the state penitentiary, expires by limitation. There will now be no valid excuse of not getting rid of this obnoxious arrangement. Contract prison labor in the Pacific states is working a hardship to manufacturers as well as skill d labor. In the states of both California and Washington, grain-bag manufacturers control the labor of the penitentiaries, making it impracticable for that industry to be carried on in Oregon. A well-known capitalist, who foresaw that the soil of this country was admirably adapted to the production of flax, and that the straw could be used in the manufacture of grain-bags to good advantage, seriously contemplated the establishment of a bag factory in Oregon City, but found it was impossible to compete with the penitentiary made bags of Washington and California.

More Mining Claims. Interest in the Santiam and Calapooia mines is growing daily, and many new claims are being taken. The following new claims have been recorded in the county recorder's office: Conductor—Located in the Calapooia mining district on June 4, 1891, by F. M. Cumming; claim filed June 26. Mail—Located in the Calapooia mining district on June 4, by G. W. Hunt; claim filed June 26. Cyclone—Located on June 10, 1891, in Calapooia mining district, by Richard Batten.

Will Make a Few Remarks. Salem Statesman: Those who visited the lower house of the Oregon legislature last winter will be interested to know that Dr. E. W. Barnes, a member of that body from Wallowa county, has purchased the Border Signal, of his county, and will hereafter inflict the "dear public" of a small radius with a democratic newspaper. Barnes will be able to make a few remarks' no without being sat down upon by the speaker as out of order.

A Correction. In an article recently published in the HERALD from Mr. J. P. Galbraith, concerning the Albany Woolen mills assessment, the printers made the figures giving the amount of the bonus to the mills yet unpaid to read $15,000, when it should have been $1,500. Printers are often careless about a thousand dollars or so, but when it comes to overlocking $15,000 it is time to call a halt.

A POLITE HIGHWAYMAN. How He Performs His Jobs With Neatness and Dispatch. "The modern highwaymen doesn't understand his business," said an old traveler as he looked up from an account of a man being "held up." "He's brutal—unnecessarily so."

"Do you want him to take off his hat when he stops you?" he was asked. "Do you want him to beg your pardon?" "O, no; you quite misunderstand me. I'm not an admirer of Paul Clifford. But why jar a man's nerves or mar his beauty? Why hit and quick transit on a sand-bag or scorch him to death by jumping out at him from an alley?"

"I was held up once in a way that I admired. No force, no serious snook to the nervous system, and no affected courtesy. I've been in a good many different countries and heard of read of all the different methods, but for the quiet and quick transit on a sand-bag or scorch him to death by jumping out at him from an alley?"

"I was sauntering along the street ahead of me, quietly humming a tune. He wasn't keeping in the shadow of the buildings and he wasn't doing anything but take his snook. He was just sauntering along with his arms folded on his breast. I was walking faster, and so I had to overtake and pass him. I passed him on the left—that is, I started to pass him on that side. When I got even with him he said: 'I say?'"

"I was said quietly and didn't even startle me. None of this absurd courtesy and noting and sensational in it. Of course I looked toward him, and I saw the tip of a revolver resting on the crook of his left elbow. His arms were folded, but I had an idea that his right hand was on the other end of the revolver.

"Just take it easy," he added. "So I sauntered along with him, and at his suggestion transferred my watch and money to his pockets. Then he said: 'Go on and don't look back. But I have always considered him a man who would do a job with neatness and dispatch, and without unnecessary trouble and excitement. That would have hurt a man with heart disease.'" A Bad Blunder. Visitor (in gaol—to prisoner)—What are you here for? Prisoner—For stealing. Visitor—What did you steal? Prisoner—I stole a girl's affections. Visitor—Well, that is no infraction of the law. Prisoner—Item, I carried 'em off with her father's horse and buggy.—Epoch.

Greater Than G. W. "Do you think Blinks is a clever man?" "Yes, in one point, at least, he excels George Washington himself." "What do you mean?" "Why, Washington couldn't tell a lie."

A JOURNEY ENDED.

As the western sun was setting, Sad hearts had a fond farewell. Unto one they held most dear, Hand clasped hand of brother, sister, Friend and all with one accord, Wished the voyager safe journey, Wished it both by thought and word.

Light of heart no thought of trouble Or of sorrow caused a sigh, Little thought he of the night, Save the scenes he might desire Of the grandeur of the mountains Of the beauties all unseen, Of the bright and sparkling fountain Of the clear and purling streams.

He was going to a country, Of its fame, he'd often heard, There was health and life for bounty, Better far to him than gold, Just across the mountain hold, There're oft green tints of a summer.

Day by day their lights unfold, That he said would be his haven, He would make his home there, Journey there and to the sea, Homeland came a letter saying, "Safe arrival here to-day," But, alas, ere it had reached us, Scarcely had found its way, Scarce three days when husband, father, Crossed that mountain hold before Leaving wife and children helpless Far out on the western shore, Oh what anxious care and trouble On our loved ones now befall, I am ready now to go, Who their home sick thoughts can tell, Scarce they'd laid away their com.

In the cold and silent tomb, Ere our loved one's strength had failed him, I felt was a cold iron doom, Came to chill that tender heart Trying still to keep up courage, Thinking not so soon to part, With his loved ones, many of them, Waiting anxiously for news, Praying that he might recover, Hoping God would not refuse to restore the loving brother Ever tender, kind and true, Of a gentle disposition Given only to but few, But the prayers were unavailing Nearer to that mountain brow Silently his spirit wandered, Naught could save our brother now Friends there in that far country, Kindly caring for him now, One his kinsman lonely watching Sees the death damp on his brow.

One a man of God is with him Standing close and bending low Listens now to the faint words, "I am ready now to go, Tell them all—the voice grows fainter, "That for them in heaven I'll wait." One more hand clasp and all was over He had passed the pealy gate.

Swift the message to his loved ones "He is gone, What shall I do?" Sadly came in answer to him "From the brothers kind and true, "We would have him rest near by us, Near his home for many years, So they said, the brother, sisters, While their eyes were filled with tears Swiftly now the silent sleet'er Gilding o'er the mount or plain Coming daily nearer, nearer, To the hearts so full of pain; Not is home again, ah, heaven! 'Tis the end of all bright dreams, 'Tis tears swell from hearts o'erburdened, No ne again, how strange it seems, There he lies their grief unheeding With their pain he has no part, He is safe beyond the shadows, Shielded now from sorrows smart, Naught to him are earthly sorrows; Naught to him are vale or mountains; Naught to him are grief or tears, He is happy, he is blest, He's received his just reward, He is with the happy angels, Round the throne of Christ our Lord M. PRINEVILLE NOTES.

From the Ochoco Review: It does ones heart good to hear the farmers tell what excellent prospects they have for abundant crops. No matter from what part of the country the farmer comes he will tell you his yield of hay and grain will be the largest he has ever harvested.

Last week John and Dave Elliott were rusticated in the Ochoco mines, and discovered a ledge of decomposed quartz near the head of Watkins gulch which is about the richest prospect that has been struck in Crook county. An assay of the rock from the top of the ledge showed $100.04 of gold to the ton.

Peter Kalama, leader of the Wild West Brass Band, of Warm Springs, has written to George Summers that he will be in Prineville with his company of musicians on the Fourth, and that the band will be prepared to furnish music for the celebration. This band is composed entirely of Indians belonging on the Warm Springs reservation, and they are said to be accomplished musicians.

An infant cyclone visited Combs Flat on Friday afternoon of last week, and gave the school house in the Gray district quite a severe shaking up, lifting it off its foundation and moving it about three feet. Charles Lewis, teacher, was hearing a recitation at the time the wind struck the house, but had no time to dismiss the class before the pupils deserted. Fortunately neither teacher nor pupils sustained any injuries by the accident.

Important to Housekeepers. It gives Julius Gradwohl great satisfaction in selling his fine Golden Rule Teas and baking powder, with elegant prizes, without them, that his customers who have purchased invariably return and say they are well pleased, that the tea is No. 1 and the baking powder is as good as the best. All his teas and baking powder bears the name of Julius Gradwohl's Golden Rule Bazaar, and are expressly put up for his business, and he still continues to give with each pound of tea or baking powder an elegant piece of glass-ware.
