THE OREGON NATIONAL GUARD.

The conduct of some of the regimental officers in charge at the encampment at Eugene, in enjoying the comforts of their quarters, surrounded by luxuries in the way of a well filled refrigerator and other aristocratic belongings, while the privates are subjected to severe discipline on poorly cooked rations in the hot open, will not have a tendency to promote the welfare of the Oregon National Guard.

The various companies are composed of energetic young men of spirit and good sense, and they should be treated as such.

There is little doubt that as soon as the time of enlistment expires many of them will decline to continue in the service, where the regimental officers, with swelled heads, treat them as common loafers.

Great ignorance was displayed by Col. Lovell in the first place in locating the encampment in an open field without the least shade and no water, except what is drawn from a distance in wagons, when so many suitable locations could have been found.

The exposure inflicted by such severe discipline under unfavorable conditions is simply folly, is absolutely dangerous to health of the members, who are not accustomed to such hardships, being surrounded by comforts at home, and there is danger that the result will be a demoralization rather than the promotion of the welfare, good order and effectiveness of the companies, which is supposed to be the objects of the encampment.

It is time the business men of Albany stop quarreling over the bridge location, and go to work together and build it.

Next week leave your orders for the same at C. E. Brownell's.

As a table and medicinal water, the Coronado can't be beat.
