The interest in base ball lies in the hope to see the pitcher content himself into the guise of a work screw and then deliver his shot with the force of a catapult; to see the catcher, nuzzled like a Roman gladiator, crouch to receive the blow; to see the mighty bat make its whirr, the ball soar upward and the exile on the base come merrily home—Pendleton East Oregonian.

Will Build a New Mill. Max Friendly will at once get to work in the construction of a new saw mill in Corvallis on the bank where the old one stood. He has already ordered the timbers for the building and was at Portland this week where he purchased the necessary machinery for the same. The new mill will be first class in every particular and will run out about the double amount of lumber daily that the old one did. Mr. Friendly says that he expects to have the new mill in running order in about six weeks.

Alliance Officers. The following are the officers elected by the county alliance at Lebanon yesterday: President, T. M. Stunkers; vice-president, Mr. Steen; secretary, Mr. Jackson; treasurer, C. B. Barkham; chaplain, B. H. Irvine; lecturer, James Marks; agent, B. H. Irvine.

The Pic to Rural Press has this to say of a Citizen of Linn County.

Hon. R. A. Irvine, of Albany, Linn county, is one of the most prominent men in affairs among the farmers of Oregon, whose efficiency he has enjoyed in many official positions for a decade or more. He is not a political farmer nor a professional politician, but a hard-working man of the soil who owns his property, is industrious and frugal, and his security in the confidence of his fellow-men is his ability, integrity and ever-earnest, well-directed efforts in their behalf.

Mr. Irvine was born in Todd county, Kentucky, September 9, 1824. In 1838 he moved to Missouri, where he remained until 1852, accumulating in the meantime a little property. With 100 head of cattle and a number of fine horses, he set out on a great journey across the plains to far off Oregon. The oft-recounted hardships and dangers of that wearisome five months' traveling were fully realized by this sturdy pioneer. One by one his stock died from exhaustion or disease, and when at last he landed in eastern Oregon, he found himself in pecuniary straits, and the means of necessary expenses left him $250 in debt. He immediately took up a donation land in Linn county, 24 miles east of Albany, where he lived until 1868, when he sold the land and bought 150 acres of choice land in the heart of the Willamette valley, which farm he still owns. In 1868 he was made sheriff of the county, and at the expiration of his term was re-elected. In 1890 the farmers of Linn county sent him to the state senate, where he served them faithfully for four years. He also filled the position of chief marshal of the Oregon state fair for eight years; agent of the Linn county patrons of husbandry five years; deputy of the Oregon state grange for twelve years, and is now state organizer of the Linn county grange. His opinion on all public questions are thoroughly sound, and while he makes no pretensions to oratory, his plain, straight-forward statements are convincing to his hearers, and account for his popularity and strength.

Mr. Irvine occupies a prominent position in the business branch of the order in his own state. This good judgment, earnest and liberal work, Linn county business men all owe much of their success, and Linn county is acknowledged by all to hold a leading position regarding the business welfare and progress of the order. He is a thorough worker, and has long had a share of the confidence of fellow patrons. He has repeatedly declined to accept important official stations in the state grange, seeming to prefer to devote his time and attention closely to his own county.

Breaking Culverts. This county pays out about $3000 a year to repair bridges and culverts broken down by steam threshers. The county court has sent out a circular to road supervisors, calling attention to the fact that the law in this respect is as follows:

"Sec. 1229. It shall be unlawful for any person to drive any steam traction or portable engine over any bridge or culvert on any public street or highway within this state without using on such bridge or culvert, for the purpose of securing its safety, four stout pieces of plank, each of which shall be at least ten feet in length, one end in width and ten inches in thickness, two of said pieces of plank to always under the wheels of said traction or portable engine while it shall be crossing said bridge or culvert."

Prizes for the Young Folks. Prizes are offered this year at the Oregon state fair, near Salem, to nurses under 16 years, for bread, cakes, butter, dried fruits, preserves, and to boys under 16, for carved wood, drawing, penmanship, best specimens of mechanism, grass in sheaf, etc. Every article must be entered for competition in the name of the owner and maker, whose number must be indented on the entry card. Anyone trying to deceive the committee in regard to the ownership, or who shall purchase articles or borrow them and exhibit them in their own name as if their own manufacture, shall forfeit all claims as an exhibitor.

A Big Radish. Perhaps the largest radish grown in the country this year was sent to the News office recently by Mrs. W. W. News. It is ten inches in circumference and is illustrated in every particular and will run out about the double amount of lumber daily that the old one did. Mr. Friendly says that he expects to have the new mill in running order in about six weeks.

Joseph Tall, of this city, is the possessor of a peculiar variety, in the shape of a half grown crow. The bird was taken from the nest when it was a young one, and was around the yard seemingly contented with its new home.

The story of "A Royal Pass" is one of much interest, and full of action says the New York Herald. The emotional is really shaded by every clever comedy. The drama is well worth seeing. Mr. Staley as Andreas Hoffer, a Swiss Guide, was natural. His humor quiet and effective, and his singing sweet and expressive. In his moments of dramatic force he evidenced the accomplished actor.

George William Langley, who owns a farm near Eugene, has fallen heir to a large estate in the East.

Weston announces that that city has two physicians and there is no need of sending to neighboring places for medical assistance.

Pendleton has a curiosity in the form of a burglar alarm that really did sound an alarm when, a few nights ago, thieves tried to enter a store where one of these appliances was in use.

The discovery has been made at Baker City of a band of youthful brigands, none less than 13 years old. Their cache was also discovered and a wagon load of plunder, the result of their robberies, recovered.

J. H. Logan has a nest of wild cats on his ranch, four miles up Pine creek, near Weston. His dog ran an old one up a sapling a few feet away from him recently, but he had no gun and decided not to tackle him bare handed.

The Chinamen of Baker City were greatly excited a few evenings ago over the arrival at that place of a Portland highbinder, who threatened to clean out Chinatown. He was induced to refrain from doing so, however, by the winks.

Since the water has been turned off the mill race at Salem hundreds of fish and eels that used to sport in its swift current are dying from the effects of the lack of water. Just below the cannery's water wheel there seems to be a colony of eels, and a number of boys engaged in picking up both the live one and those that were dead for the purpose of selling them to the Chinese.

There is something strangely deceptive about the Willamette river, says the Salem Journal, and for bathing purposes the main channel is a dangerous place for bathing. This was learned by a party of young men who were indulging in a swim about half a mile below the big bridge Monday evening. Under the water in the dark blue stream one of them was fatigued before getting across the swift current and had great difficulty in reaching the other bank. His clothes had to be carried to him across the bridge.

Headings of the Lumber Kings. The census department bulletin on the lumber industry states that in the year ending May 31, 1890, nearly 144,000 persons were employed in Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota lumber districts, receiving over $3,000,000 in wages.

The investigation of the census bureau indicates that the industry in those states will cease within six years, so far as it depends on lands held by individuals. Already employers have begun to prepare for the future by buying large areas of timbered lands in other states. In Montana and Idaho they have become owners of over a million acres of fir and cedar, which it is estimated will yield 5,000,000,000 feet board measure of merchantable lumber.

In California, Oregon and Washington they have acquired over 1,200,000 acres of fir and redwood, and the estimated yield is nearly 28,000,000,000 feet. In Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas and Missouri their holdings amount to 1,400,000 acres of yellow pine and cypress, which it is estimated, will yield a total of 1,300,000,000 feet.

These figures seem prodigious, and yet they make an aggregate of less than 45,000,000,000 feet, which is less than five times the aggregate output of white pine lumber than from the mills of the northwestern states in the year 1890, and less by 18,000,000,000 feet than the estimated amount of merchantable lumber standing on private or corporate holdings in the states of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota. On May 31, 1890, the census bureau had been unable to ascertain how much land still in these states belongs to the United States, and how much to each of these states respectively, and the opinion is expressed that the lumber thorow conprises substantially the entire reserve upon which dependence can be placed for future supplies from the Northwest after the year 1895. Nearly all of the merchantable white pine in the United States is found in the three states mentioned.

It is Well Worth Seeing. The story of "A Royal Pass" is one of much interest, and full of action says the New York Herald. The emotional is really shaded by every clever comedy. The drama is well worth seeing. Mr. Staley as Andreas Hoffer, a Swiss Guide, was natural. His humor quiet and effective, and his singing sweet and expressive. In his moments of dramatic force he evidenced the accomplished actor.

The Board of Agriculture Offers Some Special Premiums.

*Heretofore the farmers' organizations have made objections to the state fair, because the state board of agriculture offered them no encouragement to prepare exhibits. But things are changed this year, and the old objection is obsolete, says the Salem Statesman. The board this year offers to agricultural organizations Oregon special premiums amounting to $300 for the best exhibits of grains, grasses, fruits, and vegetables.

Best exhibit of grains, 1st, $50; 2d, $25.

Best exhibit of grasses, 1st, $50; 2d, $25.

Best exhibit of fruits, 1st, $50; 2d, $25.

Best exhibit of vegetables, 1st, $50; 2d, $25.

Every indication is that the fair will be the largest and best of the year thus far. Already an unusually large number of booth privileges have been constructed, that it is only July.

A. F. Miller, of Portland, has been appointed superintendent of the fruit division, which is divided into eight classes, viz: Fall apples, winter apples, peaches, pears, plums and prunes, quinces, grapes and sweetpeaks.

Notice to Water Consumers. Water is being wasted to such an extent that it is necessary that we are obliged to enforce a strict observance of the rule in regard to hours for sprinkling, viz: From 5 to 9 A. M. and from 6 to 10 o'clock P. M., and to caution all users of water to guard against the loss from faucet or other fixtures. The continuous running of water through closets or other fixtures, or permitting hose streams or sprinklers to run all night, will be deemed sufficient cause for shutting the water off from premises where allowed without further notice.
