THE CITY'S SEWERAGE

The City Authorities Are Not Performing Their Duties.

OLD SEWERS NOT UTILIZED.

Thousands Expended in New Sewers, While Connections Are Not Made With the Old Ones.

The HERALD believes in public improvements, and approves of the expenditure of the $25,000 or $30,000 in new sewers as a profitable outlay of public money, but while the city authorities have been arranging for this new work, they have seemingly ignored the very purpose for which all this money is spent. It is a startling fact that a large per cent of property owners adjacent to sewers already completed have made no connections whatever, and have been allowed to create and use foul cespools, which destroy the value of the city's sewerage system and dot every ward of the city with reeking disease-breeding nuisances. The attention of the city authorities has been repeatedly called to this matter and they have been urged to compel property owners to connect with the sewers already constructed and rid the city of these plague spots, which are everywhere recognized as chief factors in producing diphtheria, scarlet fever and all sorts of diseases. The city council has ordered the connections made so many times that the order has became a very stale chestnut, but still the wrong is allowed to go on, seemingly like Tennyson's "Brook," forever.

While the city authorities have this sewerage matter in hand they should now complete it thoroughly. To do this they must not allow the importance of the new work to overshadow the value of the sewers already in operation. There is no use of expending thousands of dollars for new sewers unless property owners use them. Many, of course, will gladly connect, but others, at least in the case of the old ones, will not do so until they are compelled to, which the city thus far has neglected to do. Several blocks in the best residence portion of Albany can be pointed out where the sewers are completed and three-fourths of the property owners have made no connections or even an effort to do so. This is not only a shameful waste of the people's money in constructing sewers that are not utilized, but it is an abuse which the health of the city demands be corrected, and the city authorities if they wish to perform their duties and serve the public as they should will see that these sewer connections are made and the cesspool nuisances abated. They will not be difficult to find; they can be pointed out in every direction, in almost any block.

Death of F. F. Croft.

Mr. F. F. Croft, one of the heaviest stockholders and superintendent of the Albany Woolen Mills, died at his home in this city on Saturday morning, August 22, 1891, of Bright's disease, after a severe illness of about a week. He was born in England 51 years ago, and removed when a lad to Massachusetts, from which state he came to Oregon with Thomas Kay and others in 1870. He was engaged in the Brownsville woolen mills, also in the mercantile business. He was a successful business man and a good citizen. A wife and two children survive him. The remains were conveyed to Brownsville for interment on Sunday at three o'clock. He was a member of both the Masonic and Odd Fellows orders.

NEWS OF THE COAST.

Interesting Items from Exchanges Throughout the Northwest.

Hon. L. Bilyeu, of Eugene, has been appointed a member of the State Board of Equalization, instead of T. R. Sheridan, who declined.

Dr. Patterson is of the opinion that his hop yard of forty acres on the island near Eugene will produce one-third more than in any previous year. Hop lice are present, but in far less numbers than several weeks ago.

At Scio last week there died Mrs. Sarah Duncan, who has lived on this earth long above the generally allotted time of man. The old lady lacked but seven months of being a centenarian being over 99 years old at the time of her death.

Umatilla Indians are preparing for their annual hunt to provide their winter's food, and soon their will be an exodus of able bodied braves from the reservation. They will scatter in every direction, to John Day, Malheur, Walowa, Snake river and all places where good hunting grounds are offered.

A laborer on the farm of Willard Herren, at Gravis, came near being suffocated Tuesday. In going down an old well, the damps were so strong as to put out the light which he was carrying and to render him insensible. He was brought to the top with much difficulty and lay unconscious for some time.

Monday evening two Roseburg girls were walking on the railroad track near Farquar's Park when they observed a young man approaching, against whom they had a grudge, and as he drew near they each armed themselves with a club and proceeded to chastize the young fellow. The latter did not propose to submit to such tratment and resented it by knocking the girls away and relieving them of their weapons At this juncture, another young fellow appeared on the scene to take the part of the girls; he rushed in to attack young man No. 1 and was met with a blow on the head with a club. As close fighting was bad for the eyes, and the fellows separated and fought with rocks. One of them received a bad gash on the head and the other was knocked down several times with body blows. While they were making targets of each other in this manner, the mother of one of the girls and young man No. 2 took a hand in the fray, and at once brought the facas to a termination. The girls claimed the young man had insulted one of them.

ABOUT THE ORPHAN'S HOME.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

Not long since a communication appeared in your paper, signed citizens, reflecting upon the management of the Albany orphan's home and hospital building, in other words upon the Albany Ladies Aid Society.

Allow a few words in vindication of the ladies of that society who are devoting their time and energies to this philanthropic enterprise, with only the reward of criticism and the knowledge of duties performed with fidelity and care. In the first place the $3000 donated by the state, can be used only for support of the home and not as a building fund, and can be drawn only in quarterly installments. It is therefore unavailable for completing the building.

In the second place, though repeated and continued efforts have been made to secure a loan for the purpose of finishing the building, so far none could be obtained. The society has voted that the contract shall be let to the lowest responsible bidder, but the ladies consider that it is not right to invite bids until they know where they can procure the funds with which to meet the payments, and while they are more anxious and solicitous to have the building completed and ready for use than any other persons can be—for they have almost daily applications that call for its use—they can do nothing until means to meet the paymgnts are within right at least. Let any of our citizens indicate where the loan can be procured—and I would suggest that such action is not only commendable but is actually called for in consideration of the welfare and best interest of our city—and the building will be speedily completed and promptly occupied and put into full use.

Another Drowning at North Beach.

The cruel waters of North Beach near Astoria has claimed another victim. H. T. Bingham, a prominent attorney of Portland, and Joseph Knott were out fishing Friday upon the rocks that jut out seaward. They were caught by the high tide and both were washed off. Mr. Bingham drifted into a dangerous place, known as "Dead Mans's Hole" and was drowned. Knott reached the shore. Hugh T. Bingham was one of the best known lawyers of Portland. He was familiarly known as "Todd" Bingham, and was an intimate friend of Thomas A. Sutherland, editor of the Sunday Welcome, who was drowned Wednesday evening. He was a native of Massachusetts and 45 years old. His uncle was United States Minister to Japan at one time. "Todd" came west with the United States officials who took possession of Alaska, when it was purchased by Secretary Seward. He came to Portland about 1870 and was closely allied with Hon. Charles B. Bellinger, ex-circuit judge.

A PROHIBITION PARROT.

He Smells a Visitor's Breath and Administers a Severe Rebuke.

Mrs. M. T., a well-known lady of Norfolk, owns a parrot known as Markoe, of which an amusing story is told, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Mrs. T. bought the bird a year or so ago from a sailor, whose pet he had been for several voyages, and shortly after purchasing him, became aware that Markoe had shared the convivial tastes of his first owner, and had a decided weakness, for wine, and even something stronger.

She endeavored to break the parrot of the habit, by allowing him to have no stimulants, but Markoe, when under their influence, and so clever and amusing that visitors often begged to give him a glass of wine for the pleasure of hearing him talk. The servants also often entertained themselves by making him drunk on beer, etc., so that Markoe, was very often intoxicated in spite of his mistress' disapproval.

On one occasion he had some champagne from the lady's nephew and was very hilarious when she said to him: "You're drunk, sir, and had better go away. I don't want to see you till you're over it." Upon this he slunk away and hid himsel feeling he was in disgrace, and also to sleep it off.

In a short time a gentleman coming to call upon Mrs. T. was ushered into the room in which Markoe lay concealed. Presently the visitor heard a severe, displeased voice saying, "You're drunk, sir, and had better go away. I don't want to see you till you're over it."

He caught up his hat and was in the act of rushing from the room when Mrs. T. entered it, so he only made her a hasty bow and left the house. The lady had heard her words to the parrot repeated, and understanding that the caller had mistaken the voice for hers, was overwhelmed with dismay at what the gentleman must have thought of her discourteous assertion, or rather, accustation.

She looked for and soon discovered Markoe under the folds of a portiere which hung across the door by which she had entered the room. She was then about to write a note to her friend apologizing for the occurrence and explaining to him, though she feared he would scarcely credit the story, when to her amazement a servant brought her a note from the gentleman she was writing to, in which he stated that he acknowledged with humility that he had perhaps taken to much wine with his dinner, but had hoped in calling on her that she would not have detected it. As she had done so, however, he offered his most abject apology and a prayer for forgiveness.

Mrs. T. declares she never told the story, but it leaked out in some unaccountable way, being really too good to be lost, and it is considered rather dangerous to mention parrots to the gentleman in question.

FIRE, FIRE, FIRE!!
Are You Ready For the Cry?

There seems to be an error in the statement that only foreign insurance companies lost in the recent Lebanon fire, for one of Julius Gradwhol's companies, the Oakland Home, paid Wednesday to Mr. Bach, the full value of his loss in that company to his entire satisfaction, which seems to be the usual custom of Mr. Gradwhol's companies to pay promptly their full loses as soon as they occur. Therefore if you want to insure your property well go to Mr. Gradwhol, who represents six No. 1 insurance companies with a capital of a hundred million dollars.
