SPEED AND WORKMANSHIP.

The dispatches have recently borne the information that American locomotive builders were furnishing English railroads with locomotives. Our machine shops have for some time excelled the English shops in the matter of cost and power, and now we are beating them on the time record.

It is said that American railroads transport freight at a lower rate than the roads of any other country, and that the British railways exact more for such service than the roads of any other manufacturing country. But until lately the British locomotives have held the record for the fastest time. Their best records both for a short distance run and for a long distance have been decisively beaten within a month.

The run made on August 27, by a train on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, according to the Railroad Gazette of September 18, averaged from the sixth to tenth mile inclusive, 87 miles per hour. "This speed for the five miles was the fastest of which we can find any authentic record for any distance." The time having been taken by careful observers reading from a "fifth second chronograph" at every mile post. The train, including engine, weighed about 169 tons.

The New York Central, however, made a more wonderful run on the 14th inst., going from the Grand Central depot in this city to Buffalo, 436⅛ miles, in 439½ minutes, "beating all previous records for sustained speed." The stops aggregated 14 minutes and 16 seconds, making the time actually under motion 425 minutes and 14 seconds. And the average speed, including stops, was 59.56 miles per hour, or including stops, 61.59 miles per hour. This train weighed with enging, about 230 tons.

In 1888 the London and Northwestern ran an express train from London to Edinburgh, 400 miles, against the train on the Great Northern and North Eastern, 392.5 miles. The best inclusive time made by the first mentioned road during the season's racing, with a train weighing about 174 tons, was 50.9 miles per hour, and 55.4 miles while in motion, and on the Great Northern the times were 52.7 and 57.8 miles per hour. The weight of train not given.

THE phylloxera insect is devastating the vineyards in France and Italy and the vinyard interests are rapidly declining. Our sister state of California is congratulating herself upon this fact, as thereby it hopes to find market for its wine and raisin production. If the phylloxera could ravage out the wine and leave the raisins, its work would be of immense benefit to mankind.

THE lottery business in this country, and the gambling hells in Europe, are moving in every manner possible to perpetuate themselves. It is said that there seems to be a fair prospect that the Monte Carlo gambling den will be closed next April, as the prince of Monaco is a man with some shreds of self-respect, who does not care to draw revenue from so polluted a source as a common gambling hell. For more than twenty years M. Blanc drew a princely revenue from Monte Carlo and his heirs have had almost equal success. Their concession runs to 1913, but it is thought that a clause in the fifty-year contract permits the ruler of Monaco to suppress at any time the roulette and trente-et-quarenta tables, which are the most lucrative of all the gambling devices of this place. In searching for some place of refuge where they may carry on their illegal business, the heirs of M. Blanc selected two—Andorre in the Pyrenees and the principality of Lichtenstein in Austria. The rulers of both these petty states would be willing to accept the offer of the gamblers, but their suzersains would surely object, so there is hope that this curse may be driven out of Europe.

THE English people have a pertinent subject for consideration, in the question of continuing the house of lords as an arm of the legislative power of the country. A recent liberal congress in that country decided by resolution that the welfare of the nation would be enhanced by the abolition of the house of lords. In speaking of the question of the abolition of the hereditary peers Gladstone said that at present it is rather in the shade owing to the priority of the claims of other subjects. He warned the House of Lords, however, that it might make the matter a burning question if the peers were tempted to listen to the consul given by Lord Salisbury when he contemplated the possibility of a liberal victory, and reminded them that all would not be over even if the commons should pass a home rule bill; that the house of lords might interpose itself between the judgment of the nation and the incorporation of that judgment in the form of law. The lords, he said, tried that game in 1831 throughout the proceedings on the reform bill, and underwent humiliation in consequence. Hereditary legislators are an anomaly in any representative government, and if the liberals return to power, as now seems probable, a move will be made, though probably not by Gladstone himself, to alter the system and make the house of parliament elective, at least in part.

THE Italians will brook no insults to the memory of Victor Immanuel. A French tourists who recently inscribed language in the visitors book at the dead monarch's grave which could be construed that way, owes his life to the celerity with which he placed himself out of sight outside of the boundaries of that kingdom.

REMARKABLE RESCUE.

Mrs Michael Curtain, Plainfield, Ill, makes the statement that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefitted from the first dose. She continued its use and after taking ten bottles, found herself sound and well, now does her own housework and is as well as she was.—Free trial bottle of this great Discovery at Foshay & Mason's Drug Store, large bottles 50c, and $1.00.
