A SUICIDE AT LEBANON.

The Lifeless Body of Paul Riston Found Hanging at a Towels End.

Special to the Herald. LEBANON, Oct. 10.—This evening about 5 o'clock the lifeless body of Paul Riston was found dangling at the end of a towel. Riston was one of the proprietors of the Star restaurant at this place and a man of good character and had many friends. There is every indication of a deliberate self murder.

Riston left a note directing the disposal of his body and saying he was tired of this world.

Judge D. R. N. Blackburn last evening received a dispatch from the marshal of Lebanon to send the coroner out immediately. Coroner Farrell left late last night for the place, and up to the hour of going to press had not returned.

EXAMINATION WAIVED.

F. S. Ingram Held to Await the Action of the Grand Jury Without Bail.

The Rubber Stamp is the Cause.

Whenever a wholesale house receives a letter from a merchant written on a scrap of paper without anything to indicate what sort of business is being engaged in, or the sheet is ornamented with one of those hideous daubs called rubber stamps, his name is immediately checked with an "S," which indicates snicker. This mark serves as a notice to the traveling salesman that he said merchant is a fit subject on which to palm off all the old, worn-out, self-worn, shoddy goods that you possible can. The poor merchant then wonders why his customer never come back the second time to buy goods.

Chance for Prof. Condon.

Dallas Observer: There are different kinds of bugs turning up in the city. The latest is a new species of beetle, one of which Charley Belt put in alcohol yesterday. It is about two inches long, has a very flat body, six legs, and at the point of each long sharp claw; large eyes and a sharp-pointed stinger. It is quite a curiosity, and is worth the attention of biologists.

Stand Corrected.

Several boxes of fine straw-berrers were on exhibition at Brownell's grocery store the other day. They were raised on the other side of the river and speak well for Oregon climate and soil.—Albany Herald. More plainly speaking of Benton county climate and soil.—Benton County Leader. Please, Mr. Leader, just let poor old Oregon have one little corner in Benton county. Don't knock it out altogether.

DEATH IN A WELL.

Particulars of the Accident Causing the Death of J. E. Montgomery.

La Grande Gazette: One of the most terrible accidents ever known in this community occurred Wednesday evening resulting in the death of Jennings E. Montgomery, by the caving in of a well. At about 6 o'clock in the evening he descended into a well, climbing down the walls which were constructed of round boulders. When about fourteen feet below the surface one of the rocks in the wall gave way precipitating upon him a mass of rock and earth about four feet in depth. Aid was summoned with all possible speed, and willing hands rendered all possible aid. The narrow quarters on which he was perched were broken up at a time, and when a large part of the rocks had been removed another crash of the wall buried him still deeper. For two hours and a half he could be heard and unlost-of. He told them he could climb with great difficulty and implored them to remove the weight that was crushing him to death. At half past eight a smothering cry told the awful story of his fate. It was nearly two hours later before the mass was cleared away. The body was in an upright position on a log and was thrown over the head. It is probable that life was extinct fully an hour before he was rescued. Jennings E. Montgomery, familiarly known as "Jinks," Montgomery, was about 40 years of age. He leaves a wife and family of children, also a brother, Sprat Montgomery, who is a resident of La Grande. The two brothers came to La Grande about six years ago. They were formerly residents of Albany, Oregon.

State Horticultural Society.

Dallas Observer: On Tuesday and Wednesday October 13 and 14 the State Horticultural Society will meet at this place and discuss the best methods of the future care of the fruit industry of the entire northwest. Besides various interesting and profitable questions to be discussed, premiums are offered for fruits of various kinds. These offers should receive a ready response from every source of the county, as it is through comparison, and friendly rivalry that there is a bettering of many of our industries. We hope to see a full turnout and a lively time at these meetings as Polk county is destined to become one of the greatest fruit producing sections in the northwest, and those engaging in the pursuit may gain many points to their advantage.

ALBANY COAL.

What the Maple Street Sewer Work is Developing.

The work on the Maple street sewer is progressing finely, being up to and beyond Fifth street. The most of the deep work is in rock that required blasting. Croppings of coal have been found at some of the deepest points, from twenty to thirty feet down, indicating that a vein of that deposit underlies this region.

A genuine oyster bed was also extant in the rock, very many fine specimens of the petrifed oysters and clams being taken out. Also petrified twigs and branches of trees or plants are found in the sedimentary rock constituting the lower part of the excavation being made.

LIVELY BEAR FIGHT.

Brian Makes a Lively Scare But Submits to An Argument.

Yesterday County Clerk Payne issued an order for a bounty for a bear scalp, to A. J. Hill, who resides on the E. J. Widdough place at West Point near the southern boundary of the county. Mr. Hill was driving his team in the road by the side of a field on the place where the sheep were grazing and noticing a common one among the sheep, got off and entered the field to ascertain the cause. He had gone but a short distance when he was confronted by his bearship who disputed further progress. Mr. Hill said that he has no remembrance of how he got over the fence, but the first thing he remembered was being on his wagon. Reflection brought courage, and he repaired to the house for offensive weapons. Finding several guns but no ammunition, he returned to the field just in time to see brain making off. Deciding to have some fun anyway Mr. Hill slipped the harness from one of his horses, and mounting it rode after the bear, heading it off and worrying it so that it finally switched and Mr. Hill dismounted. He was carefully hit over the head with an axe.
