WHERE TO RETURN.
In the consideration of our governmental affairs, the people of the country have long felt that the upper house of congress needed some changes. They have repeatedly given expression to what those changes should be, by calling for a change in the constitution whereby the senators should be chosen by a direct vote of the people and not selected by the state legislatures.

Several newspapers of the country perceiving the call of the people for a change in senatorial matters, have taken up the subject, and apparently with malice aforthought, are leading the matter into paths that are not only useless but positively detrimental.
They attack the present representation in the senate, a point that no thoughtful citizen wishes to meddle with or see disabled.
Notable among these papers are the Detroit Free Press and the Chicago Tribune.

In distinction to the position taken by these papers, is that assumed by the Chronicle when it says that it seems a little singular that any well informed newspaper can ignore the fundamental idea upon which the American republic is based, namely, that it is a union not only of the people of the several states, but of the states themselves in their individual and corporate capacity. It is absolutely essential to the federal idea that the states, as states, be put upon a perfect equality somewhere in the framework of the government, and the provision which secured representation in the senate has been deemed by writers and commentators on the federal constitution one of the wisest parts of that renowned instrument.

History teaches us, and every schoolboy knows, that the constitution could never have been adopted had not the states been put upon a perfect equality in the senate. The house of representatives, with much propriety, was regulated in proportion to the population, for it represented the people in mass, and numbers were promptly made to control; but the senate, which represents the states, could have been framed on no other basis than by giving equal representation to every state.

The argument of the journals referred to seems to proceed upon the theory that the civil war was a complete extinguishment of states' rights, but it hardly requires argument to establish the entire incorrectness of such a theory.
The fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the constitution, which may be properly regarded as expressive of the decision reached by the civil war, refer in the most unmistakable terms to the rights, powers and duties of the states as distinguished from those of the United States, and are a clear and distinct recognition of the powers reserved to the states by the tenth amendment.

But independent of the legal rights of the states to equal representation in the senate there is every reason why the present system should be maintained upon the ground of public interest and advantage. The senate is naturally and necessarily a more conservative body than the house of representatives, and acts as a balance-wheel to keep the machinery of the government running smoothly and steadily. It is not a perfect institution either in its personnel or in its methods of conducting its business, but it is a powerful check on the house of representatives and at times on the executive. It is not necessary to prove that in a popular government a break for the wheel is as necessary as the motive power itself.

OBJECT LESSONS upon the tariff question are open and apparent, to every one who observes with his eye open for the exact truth. The following from the Chronicle is of worth for consideration, coupled with the fact that goods of the kind named are better and cheaper in our markets here than ever before.
"The exports from Bradford, England, to the United States are constantly declining. Bradford is the seat of a large worsted industry, whose principal products have heretofore been exported to the United States. The fact that its business is declining is worth noting, because it conclusively demonstrates that the McKinley bill has done what was expected of it. It has given an impetus to the manufacture of worsted in the United States, nearly all of the demand being now supplied from this country. But the chief thing to be commented on in connection with the decline is the fact that Bradford finds it impossible to open new markets. Perhaps the weavers of that town will now awaken to the fact that the free traders are lying when they fantasize that the markets of the world are illimitable. The free traders in this country, too, may learn from Bradford's experience that if we wish to build up a worsted industry of our own we cannot do so by turning over the home market to English manufacturers and scouring the world for new markets. Mr. Mills, says that we can, but Bradford's experience proves that we cannot."

Take Children seem to have a grudge against this country, and show it out on every occasion they can by acts of petty violence against citizens. The limit of forbearance with such operations will sometimes be passed, when that country will hear something of that which will convince them that they had better have cultivated a friend rather than a foe.

Height of Cruelty.
Nervous women seldom receive the sympathy they deserve. While often the pictures of health they are constantly alling. To withhold sympathy from these unfortunate is the height of cruelty.
They have a weak heart, causing shortness of breath, fluttering, pains in side, weak and hungry spells, and finally swelling of ankles, oppression, choking, smothering and dropsy. Dr.
Miles' New Heart Cure is just the thing for them. For their nervousness, etc., his Restorative Nervine is
