THE CHILEAN SITUATION.

The dispatches from Chile are too confused to permit a trustworthy opinion of the situation to be formed. All that can be gathered from them is that the request of the United States that an investigation into the circumstances connected with the murder of the sailors of the Baltimore be held has been received in an unfriendly spirit.

The San Francisco Chronicle thinks that one thing may be set down as reasonably certain, and that is that a future conflict with Chile, even if the present affair be smoothed over, is inevitable. That nation has long been inspired by an unreasoning hostility to the United States, which shows itself every time there is the slightest friction between the two countries.

Our government's course in the premises is marked out by the necessities of the case. We cannot afford to be regarded as a nation indifferent to the welfare of its citizens in other countries or as willing to put up with indignities rather than incur the risk of expending life and treasure to avenge them.

THE OUTLOOK OF THE FARMERS ALLIANCE.

As preparations for next year's great political campaign become more numerous, the question becomes more pertinent as to what part the farmers' alliance will play if it should decide to play a separate part at all. A question that has already arisen, too, in the minds of a good many observers of public events, is whether or not the alliance is on the decline, and is likely soon to disintegrate.

Senator John T. Morgan of Alabama—who has always been friendly to the alliance, though he has taken sharp political issue with its financial platform—contributes an article to the November Forum, in which he undertakes to throw light on those inquiries. He maintains that the farmers have a real grievance; he had great hopes that it would at first accomplish much good; and he thinks, that, if the alliance would remain true to its original purpose, it would be a most beneficent organization.
