Peach stones are being shipped into the Willamette valley by the ton. They are destined for prunettes and the great number being planted would indicate that nurserymen have confidence in the demand next fall.

In the Tolls. W. H. Greenwood, the photographer, was arrested today on a serious charge, that of robbery preferred by Newt in Swinford, with whom Greenwood roomed Sunday night. It seems that before going to bed Mr. Swinford showed $55 which was seen by Oscar Johnson and Greenwood. After counting it over he placed the money in his vest pocket and went to bed with Greenwood. On awaking this morning Mr. Swinford found himself alone in the room and minus his $55. As we go to press Greenwood is being tried for the theft of the money.—Baker City Blade.

A CALIFORNIAN ON OREGON.

A San Francisco Commercial Merchant Visits Oregon and Gives His Views.

Thos. Fitch, Jr., is a San Francisco commission merchant, and this is what the publishers of a visit to Oregon:

"The traveler who journeys through the Oregon valleys traversed by the Southern Pacific road, beginning at the foot of the Siskiyou mountains and ending at 'Portland on Willamette,' views a country for which, for fertility and beauty, and health and wealth producing capacity, cannot be excelled, and finds few equals anywhere in the North Temperate zone.

The contrast between the unpainted sprawling houses, ribbed with baying cattle, fly-bitten bronchos and razor-backed logs of other localities, and the well-kept fields and gardens of the Oregon valleys, is so great as to provoke the comment of every traveler.

It is the quality of the consumed food by man or by four-footed animals that makes all the difference in the value of the horse of the man, and it is the quality of the soil that makes the food. Before the foot of civilized man touched the Willamette valley, nature had been busy for thousands of years depositing there the detritus and wash of the adjacent mountains, and forty years of culture have not exhausted a tith of the plant food in the rich alluvial soil.

"These potatoes draw from the soil, the sun, and dews, meanness and soundness; there wheat laughs in ripples of bounteous yield; there oats have a heart in them that puts courage into the heart and strength into the sinews of the reaper; there the peach and the pear and the plum, and the apple reach their toes deep into the soft loam and pump up the succulent juices that place Oregon fruit ahead of all other in quality and price; there the hop vine, unsexed by lice or drouth, gathers fragrance and pungency; there strawberries grow as large as pumpkins and pumpkins as large as hollolops.

"A large share of the products of these Oregon valleys finds a market in San Francisco, and a still larger share is sent here at a profit. Portland is a rich and prosperous city, and for many purposes, and in many lines of commerce, a good city by trade in, but its produce commission business has never got out of the groove cut in the '70's. Except in the wheat business, Portland is not organized or prepared to handle the product of its tributary country, and an unexpected carload of dried fruits, or trainload of oats or potatoes, would knock the local market senseless. In San Francisco we appreciate the excellence of Oregon products, and we express our appreciation in the way most satisfactory to the producer—in the prices that are paid. I habitually obtain from retailers and jobbers here from ten to twenty per cent. more for Oregon products, such as apples and dried fruits, than the California product. This usually for local consumption, for in the Eastern markets they have not yet come to make the distinction. I am anxious to handle Oregon products, it is always easier to sell a good article at a high figure than to dispose of an inferior article at any price.

"When you sell the best oats in the market at the highest price, and there are five persons desirous of the product, who gets the price, the purchaser, who gets the article, I, who get my commission, the horse, which munches the oats, and the driver of the horse, who gets two seconds more out of him on the track. I might trace this further, but lack of space forbids.

The Spanish Students. This talented company will appear at the opera house this evening. A Portland exchange says of them: The Park theatre which has been closed during most of the week, opened last week with the talented Spanish students. The house was filled with an appreciative audience. The music was well selected, and beautifully given by the students. The instruments were two mandolins, violin and guitar, violoncello and alto, and they presented the sweetest music imaginable. Signor Rebighara who is master violinist gave a solo that was enthusiastically received. F. Marin, the sultano player, also rendered a charming solo. Not a small portion of the evening's enjoyment was the singing of Emma Porter Makinson. She possesses a clear, soprano voice that shows careful training and study. She was well received by the audience, and was loudly applauded for her effort.

Largest Bell. A tabernacle for the use of the Christian church has been erected in Turner, and for it the largest bell in the state has been procured and will shortly be placed in position and commence its clarion invitation to come in and offer worship to deity. The tabernacle, which is an immense structure finished in good style, and the bell is the absolute gift of Mr. George Turner, and form a magnificent donation.

The Case Dismissed. The case of the state vs. Monroe Ward, arrested for beating his daughter, came up in Justice Humphrey's court yesterday. On motion of the state's attorney the case was dismissed, the defendant paying the costs. His bond stood that Ward agreed to leave the state, and the case was dismissed at the wish of the family, who have assurance of freedom from further molestation.

A Good Foundation.

For every superstructure that is reared the most necessary requisite to be looked after is the foundation. It must be laid good and strong, durable and broad. In matters of education and preparation for a useful life is this most essentially the case. To every one who thinks upon the subject it will be apparent that the commencement of a child's education is the most important step in its career. The best place to begin such start is in a thorough kindergarten under the Froebel system. We have just such an institution in Albany under the care of Mrs. Emma Tatham, who thoroughly understands the work and is enthusiastically imbued with its worth and necessity. An effort is being made to embody the system in an organized connection with our free public schools, and petitions are being circulated to that effect. It is to be hoped that the effort will meet with success.

A New Bank.

Hon. J. W. Cusick has made all the necessary arrangements for opening a new bank in this city in the near future. The bank will be owned by J. W. Cusick & Co., and will occupy his building where H. J. Jones' book store now is. A new front will be put in, which will serve as the bank's quarters for the present. Mr. Cusick states that his intention is later on to erect a fine brick block occupying the whole of his property on First and Broadalbin streets, with the bank in the corner. The work of remodeling the present building will begin next month.

Mr. Cusick, it is understood, is backed in the enterprise by Portland capitalists. He has been prominently engaged in the banking business here, and is favorably known throughout Oregon.

Belshazzar.

Calculations are now being made to present the cantata of Belshazzar on the 17th and 18th of December. As all the participants have pledged themselves to make it a success the public may look forward to one of the best entertainments of its kind ever given in Albany. The fact that it takes two months to prepare for its presentation, and that it will cost the management at least $150, is an assurance that the cantata is one of no small consequence. Watch the papers for the cast of characters.

Teachers' Attention.

There will be a local meeting of teachers at Shedd, Nov. 27th and 28th, 1891. The first session will be held on Friday evening. An interesting programme will be prepared for both Friday and Saturday. All teachers and school officers in the vicinity of Shedd are cordially invited to be present.

Call and see his new patterns.

NOTES FROM MONMOUTH.

Material Progress Growth and Success of the Normal School.

MONMOUTH, Oregon, Nov. 16. Thinking perhaps a few items from Monmouth might be of interest to your many readers, I send you the following:

Monmouth is a town of about eight hundred inhabitants, it is beautifully situated near the hills of the Coast Range, two miles west of the Willamette river, and is the seat of the State Normal school of Oregon. The town has made many rapid changes within the last year. The Normal school is the principal attraction of this place.

A large number of families have moved here for the purpose of sending their children to school. The school is in a prosperous condition with Prof. P. L. Campbell as Pres. The building which is so much talked of, has been repainted and papered which adds much to its general appearance.

Two hundred and eighty-two students are now enrolled at the Normal, one hundred and seventy-eight of whom board at the dining hall.

Four societies have been organized by the students, two by the ladies, and two by the gentlemen. They will hold a joint session at the close of this term Nov. 27. An interesting programme has been arranged.
