The Norwegian agitation is attributed to Russian and Danish influences, and is said to be supported financially from abroad. The Norwegians are more closely attached to the Danes than to the Swedes, and make no concealment that they would prefer union with l'enmark. It is feared in Stockholm that the storthing may follow up its action in favor of separate presentation abroad by declaring Norway a republic. In that event war would be inevitable, as here is a strong feeling in Sweden that the common people of Norway, most of whom are excluded from voting, would not sustain the storthing in the event of a civil war, especially if Sweden should promise a more liberal suffrage as a reward for adhering to the union
