THE CHILIAN SITUATION.

There is nothing in the situation of affairs in Chili which gives any encouragement to the belief that matters may be settled amicably.

Chili should understand that the people of the United States will not accept as conclusive any judgment or finding of a prejudiced tribunal, more especially since the Chilian government has never expressed any regret for the unfortunate affair and never intimated even that the blame might be shared by both parties. Chili has stood squarely on the proposition that the sailors of the Baltimore were wholly in the wrong and that they got no more than they deserved.

When to this defiant and cavalier attitude is added the contumely with which Americans have been treated on all hands, the suspicion with which the American Legation has been regarded, and the avowed hostility of all classes of the Chilians to citizens of the United States, however unoffending, it must be obvious that all talk of amity is silly and nonsensical in the extreme. Chili shows no disposition to be civil or decent, to say nothing of being friendly, and we certainly shall not try to persuade her to make friends.

It will probably be the duty of President Harrison to lay the situation before congress at an early day, and we risk nothing in saying that that body will be a unit on the question of upholding the honor of the nation. Congress contains Republicans, Democrats, Mugwumps and Farmers' Alliance men, but when the flag of the Union is trampled upon and trailed in the dust they all belong to one party, the American party, and there will be no hanging back if severe measures are seen to be necessary. Chili will have only herself to blame if the United States shall be compelled to give her the lesson which she needs so much.

The United States warship San Francisco, was to have left San Francisco harbor yesterday. She goes under sealed orders, her destination being secret, but it is safe to say that she will not cruise around on any pleasure or exploration voyage in Arctic waters. It will probably be over an old familiar route taken not long ago under quite exciting circumstances.

NATURE is the great teacher in everything. Professor Ogden in summing up thoughts on the subject, quotes Emerson: "Nature is the incarnation of thought" (God's though), "and turns to thought again, as ice becomes water and gas. The world is mind" (the Divine mind), "precipitated, and the volatile essence is forever escaping again into the state of free thought." This is a beautiful, almost an inspired thought. The child, when brought in contact with nature in her simplicity is filled with this volatile essence, and it must needs give expression to it, and it therefore seeks a language. It becomes a necessity and is most easily and accurately taught when asked for, by affording, at the proper junction of thought evolution, the fitting type of expression. Thus, thought evolution and thought expression are inseparable in nature, and should ever proceed hand in hand through all the grades of learning. This reveals the shallowness of those methods of instruction in language that confine themselves to the mere form of expression, as as in parsing, and the analysis of sentences, without corresponding synthetic exercises. It is not enough that the mere form of expression be given. The thought and thinking must be present to order the expression. The mind must struggle in thought evolution, at the same time it seeks thought expression. Language taught for the sake of language is a failure. Language comes with thinking; and nature furnishes the conditions for thought. Her lessons and texts, rightly interpreted, ar seldom misunderstood or unappreciated by the young. And her methods carried out in all our grade schools, would not only economize in the matter of time, saving nearly all that is usually to formal language lessons; but would give us fuller, richer, and more vigorous expression. Language lessons should therefore be thought lessons, thoughts wrought out by the child's own efforts; which, after a little practice, or after the foundation of original thought is opened, become not only a pleasure far exceeding any mere copying of thoughts, but often an improvement upon thoughts furnished (not always the best) by authors. The child learns to think by thinking orignal thoughts, not merely conning second-hand thoughts, or thoughts made to order; which latter process should be credited with the class of second-hand men and women "made to order,"—mere weaklings—with which the world is filled to-day. These original language lessons have reference not only to the merely verbal expression of thoughts, but to thoughts expressed in color, form, movement, etc., as in practicing, building, weaving, moulding, drawing, or the representation of objects in outline and color, in which exercises the kindergarten is so helpful to little children.

REMARKABLE RESCUE.

Mrs Michael Curtain, Plainfield, Ill, makes the statement that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefitted from the first dose. She continued its use and after taking ten bottles, found herself sound and well, now does her own housework and is as well as she was.—Free trial bottle of this great Discovery at Foshay & Mason's Drug Store, large bottles 50c, and $1.00

THE WORLD ENRICHED.

The facilities of the present day for the production of everything that will conduce to the material welfare and comfort of mankind are almost unlimited and when Syrup of Figs was first produced the world was enriched with the only perfect laxative known, as it is the only remedy which is truly pleasing and refreshing to the taste and prompt and effectual to cleanse the system gently in the Spring-time or, in fact, at any time any the better it is known the more popular it becomes.

Fell Dead.

These words are familiar to our readers, as not a day passes without the report of the sudden death of some prominent citizens. The explanation is "Heart Disease." Therefore beware if you have any of the following symptoms: Short Breath, Pain in Side, Smothering Spells, Swollen Ankles, Asthmatic Breathing, Weak and Hungry Spells, Tenderness in Shoulder or Irregular Pulse. These symptoms mean heart disease. The most reliable remedy is Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, which has saved thousands of lives.
