

Simplicity in Dress.

There is wisdom as well as common sense in the following article, which we would recommend as well worthy the consideration of our readers:

There is no better mark of a sensible and well regulated mind than the exhibition of good taste in the choice of dress. Weak people in this more than anything else, betray the natural silliness of their character, and give proof to the world their unfitness to assume any of the important responsibilities of life. It is almost an impossibility for a sensible or well educated man to be a fop; his nature rebels at the thought of gaudy or vulgar display; his eyes shrink from garish colors, and all his nicer feelings revolt at the idea of mere outward embellishment. Simplicity and neatness in dress must, therefore, be viewed as evidences of good judgment and a well balanced understanding, just as gaudiness and foppishness are to be considered indications of mental weakness. This truth should be borne in mind by the young, particularly those just starting out in life, for young people are very apt, unless guided in their tastes, to cultivate a love of dress at the risk, in the first place, of endangering their reputation for good sense, and secondly, of exposing themselves to permanent injury from the possibility that an outward habit thus acquired may influence the inward character.

Of course, we must not be understood as recommending negligence or even indifference, in the selection of dress, for we esteem cleanliness and neatness two of the cardinal virtues; what we desire to inculcate is, that simplicity and plainness, freedom from elaborate display and all vulgar ornament, are unerring marks of refinement and good common sense, and that they should be sedulously cultivated by every one who desires to secure a reputation for good taste and solidity of understanding.

FRETFUL BABIES.—Babies often cry without any apparent reason; but a mother can usually discover a reason if she stops to think about it. And it is worth stopping to think about, no matter if the household or sewing be delayed awhile in consequence. Perhaps it has eaten something which disagrees with its stomach; perhaps it is thirsty, for little babies are often thirsty, and will drink a teaspoonful of cold water with the greatest eagerness, and be quiet and satisfied after it. Perhaps its little sock is tied too tight, as my babes was the other day. I found a deep red mark around her little ankle which at once explained her fretfulness. More likely than anything else, the flannel band around his bowels—if lamely one is there—or its skirt-band is pinned too tightly. I know a baby who has cried a great deal since its birth. I think the chief reason of it is because he has always been dressed too tightly. The mother said to me one afternoon when the child was so cross she hardly knew what to do: "I've a great mind to undress him and put on his night-gown; he is always real good then." So she did, and he commenced to be good at once. Mothers should search for all possible causes when their babies get fretful. They should not be too ready to attribute their crying to nervous temperament or to hunger, for it is more likely to be caused by the prick of a pin or an overfed stomach than either. — Heath and Home.

Everlasting Fence Posts.

I discovered many years ago that wood could be made to last longer than iron in the ground, but thought the process so simple and inexpensive that it was not worth while making any stir about it. I would as soon have poplar, basswood or quaking asch, as any other kind of timber for fence posts. I have taken out basswood posts after having been set seven years, which were as sound when taken up as when first put in the ground. Time and weather seemed to have no effect on them. The posts can be prepared for less than two cents apiece. This is the recipe: Take boiled linseed oil and stir it in pulverized charcoal to the consistency of paint. Put a coat of this over the timber, and there is not a man that will live to see it rotten. — Home-stand.

BREVITY.—The good is bettered by being short; even happiness, for as the splendor of the sun is enhanced by the passing cloud, so joy catches a lightened glow from temporary anxiety, and the quickest to suffer is the readiest to enjoy; even life, at the longest, is not long, yet too long when the capacity to enjoy, the power to reason, and the means of usefulness are gone. See how well brevity works in the conduct of life. Rebuke a child or a servant in few words, and you produce an impression; emphasize it, and you talk to the wind. Speak an apt word in public, a word that burns, and you hit the mark; add a word superfluous and you efface it. Pay a short visit—clamor will seek to detain you; spin the time out—failing attention ought to warn you of the fate of the bore. A note of sympathy is to be preferred to a cross folio, difficult to decipher, harder to digest; a word in season is worth an hour of well meant advice; the brevity of a sonnet enhances its perfection. — Christian Register.

Rev. John Sebastian Cabot Abbott, who has written more unreliable history than any other author, living or dead, has announced his intention to write a series of histories of every State in the Union. And every State in the Union should apply for an injunction to prevent the consummation of such an outrage. — St. Louis Democrat.
