Professor Huxley on Higher Education for Girls.

A public meeting, convened under the auspices of the Women's Education Union, was held at Eyre Arms St. John's Wood, London, recently, for the purpose of promoting the establishment of a girl's public day-school in that district. Professor Huxley, who occupied the chair in the absence of Lord Aberdare, introduced the subject by referring to the three courses open to a man who desired to educate his daughters. First there was the boarding-school, but there were few thoroughly good ones, and those were exceedingly expensive; and the ordinary boarding-school was the last he should select. The next alternative was home-education, which had a great deal to recommend it, but it was a costly process, and moreover, deprived girls of the healthy influences of coming in contact with other young minds and diferent teachers. The day-school was the third and best course, combining, as it did, both the advantages of thorough school and home teachings, and the object of the Women's Education Union was to establish such schools, not as they are, but as they ought to be, in all the great suburban districts of London. No object, he conceived, could be calculated to exert more beneficial influence upon the welfare of a community than that. The company, in association with the Union, had already founded schools at Notting Hill and Chelsea, which were exceedingly flourishing, and considered to be a great boon to the residents of those neighborhoods. It was now proposed to establish another for the district of St. John's Wood, where the education to be given would be equal to that provided for the boys at University College School. It was said girls were physically, morally, and intellectually unequal, as a rule, to such an education; and, though he did not believe in the equality of woman and man, he yet disputed this position. Experience proved that success in every station of life was less the result of intellectual and moral strength than the exercise of patience, industry, and temper—qualities very much dependent upon healthy organisms. Taking, then, the broad average, the central point of moral and intellectual capacity was rather higher in the male than the female group; but though man was higher in that respect than woman, he would not go so far as to say the lowest of the woman group was lower than the lowest of the man group. Both, however, stood on an equality in the matter of patience, industry, and temper, and as the capacity for education rested upon those qualities, he could discover no reason why bringing up the educational standard of girls to the same level of boys should be calculated to endanger their physical welfare. He should, therefore conclude by moving: "That the meeting considers the provision for the higher education for girls is inadequate and unsatisfactory, and that measures should be taken for effecting an improvement."

FACETIAE.

Young ladies subject to nervous debility in summer ought to beware of taking to much exercise. They should, as much as possible, lie quietly upon the sofa and suffer their mothers to fan them.

We find the following item in an Illinois paper: "Mr.——who has been in retirement for a few weeks after marrying and burying three sisters, came up smilingly to the altar again yesterday, having begun on a new family."

The Detroit Free Press professes to have discovered a young lady who blushes, goes to bed at nine, eats heartily, speaks plain English, respects her mother, doesn't want to marry a lord, and knows how to cook.

A Mrs. Olsen, of Salt Lake, makes public declaration that, in her opinion, polygamy is as good for women as for men, and that she would like three husbands—one to live with and love, and the other two to help support her.

The trade of a tanner seems, for some reason or another, to conduce to political prominence. Our good President and our new Post-master-general are shining examples of this, and even as far back as the Roman days we have Cicero's evidence that Quisque laud 'em.—New York Commercial.

An Irishman found a Government blanket recently, and rolling it up put it under his arm walked off saying: "Yis, that's moine—U for Patrick and S for McCarty; be me sowl, but this learnin' is a foine thing, as my fayther would say; for if I hadn't an edication I wouldn't have been afther findin' the blanket."—Danbury News.

The golden moments in the stream of life rush past us, and we see nothing but sand; the angels come to visit us, and we only know them when they are gone.—George Eliot.

APPLETONS' AMERICAN CYCLOPAEDIA.

New Revised Edition.

Entirely rewritten by the ablest writers on every subject. Printed from new type, and illustrated with Several Thousand Engravings and Maps.

The work originally published under the title of THE NEW AMERICAN CYCLOPAEDIA was completed in 1863, since which time the wide circulation which it has attained in all parts of the United States, and the signal developments which have taken place in every branch of science, literature, and art, have induced the editors and publishers to submit it to an exact and thorough revision, and to issue a new edition entitled THE AMERICAN CYCLOPAEDIA.

Within the last ten years the progress of discovery in every department of knowledge has made a new work of reference an imperative want.

The movement of political affairs has kept pace with the discoveries of science, and their fruitful application to the industrial and useful arts and the convenience and refinement of social life. Great wars and consequent revolutions have occured, involving national changes of peculiar moment. The civil war of our own country, which was at its height when the last volume of the old work appeared, has happily been ended, and a new course of commercial and industrial activity has been commenced.

Large accessions to our geographical knowledge have been made by the indefatigable explorers of Africa.

The great political revolutions of the last decade, with the natural result of the lapse of time, have brought into public view a multitude of new men, whose names are in every one's mouth, and of whose lives every one is curious to know the particulars. Great battles have been fought and important sieges maintained, of which the details are as yet preserved only in the newspapers or in the transient publications of the day, but which ought now to take their place in permanent and authentic history.

In preparing the present edition for the press, it has accordingly been the aim of the editors to bring down the information to the latest possible dates, and to furnish an accurate account of the most recent discoveries in science, of every fresh production in literature, and of the latest inventions in the practical arts, as well as to give a succinct, and original record of the progress of political and historical events.

The work has been begun after long and careful preliminary labor, and with the most ample resources for carrying on to a successful termination.

None of the original stereotype plates have been used, but every page has been printed on new type, forming in fact a new Cyclopædia, with the same plan and compass as its predecessor, but with a far greater pecuniary expenditure, and with such improvements in its composition as have been suggested by longer experience and enlarged knowledge.

The illustrations which are introduced for the first time in the present edition have been added not for the sake of pictorial effect, but to give greater lucidity and force to the explanations in the text. They embrace all branches of science and of natural history, and depict the most famous and remarkable features of scenery, architecture, and art, as well as the various processes of mechanics and manufactures. Although intended for instruction rather than embellishment, no pains have been spared to insure their artistic excellence; the cost of their execution is enormous, and it is believed they will find a welcome reception as an admirable feature of the Cyclopædia, and worthy of its high character.

This work is sold to Subscribers only, payable on delivery of each volume. It will be completed in sixteen large octavo volumes, each containing about 800 pages, fully illustrated with several thousand Wood Engravings, and with numerous colored Lithographic Maps.
