Do as You Have Claimed.

For years and even decades it has been the usual custom at every recurring election for Democrats to claim and demand the nomination of farmers and laboring men for office, and that such candidates were more worthy of support from that one circumstance.

Following the old and well defined policy the Republican party have, this year, nominated a farmer and a workingman for Governor. His opponent, on the other hand, is one of the bloated monopolists and aristocrats, who, all his life, has been supported in ease and luxury by the hard earnings of the poor laboring man.

These two men are presented for the suffrages of the people; now let these men who so often have clamored for laboring men for office, come forward and support honest Jo. Palmer, the farmer, or forever hold their peace. Now is the time to make good their teachings, for the issue between labor and bloated manufactures was never more direct or stronger drawn.

The remarks we made about six weeks ago concerning the importation of voters into this county, by some of the leading Democrats in Salem, is causing that clique to writhe in pain to this day.

Eggs in Boston sell for 29 and 30 cents per dozen, and butter from 30 to 45 cents pound.

Under date of March 12th, Senator Williams writes from Washington City to the Oregonian, as follows:

"I write this to avoid misconception as to the mails on the west side of the river. Contracts to carry the mail from Portland to Corvallis have been let as heretofore, because under the published advertisements the law required the lettings to be in that form.

I have just had an interview, however, with the Postmaster General upon the subject, and he has now agreed to add to the service so as to provide a daily mail from Portland via Hillsboro, Forest Grove, Lafayette, Amity, and Dallas to Corvallis—to commence on the 1st of July, when the present lettings take effect.

Arrangements to that end will be made without delay, and all concerned may regard that as a settled matter."

This is the information for which we of the west side of the river have long waited, and we can be only better satisfied when we hear the rumbling of car wheels. There is nothing except a railroad that can bring out the good points of a country better than a daily stage line.

Eleven years ago before the Oregon and California daily line of stages was put on, the west side of the river was the chief part of Oregon and the counties east of the river were scarcely heard of, but the daily mail line opened up the vast resources of that country to the outside world till it has become a thriving section, having a railroad, while this side of the river, with natural advantages in every way equal, has lain dormant.

FRIGHTENED AGAIN.—The Canadian government has again been in a great flutter of excitement, and the dispatches have been burdened with the details of another Fenian raid; it now turns out that nothing of the kind was contemplated, but that a few hundred Fenians left New York last week and went to Chicago to attend a Congress of the brotherhood.

EQUITABLE ADJUSTMENT.—We have heard many Democrats hereabouts denying, within the past week, that "equitable adjustment," as recited in the 8th resolution of the Albany platform, means repudiation; but when such men as Beriah Brown regard it as such, Jas. O'Mera declares open warfare against it.

A variety of events conspire to ruffle the feelings of the Salem importers. Besides the castigation that we gave them a few weeks ago, the high water of last week washed off the wood cut in the Willamette river bottom, by their imported wood choppers. They lost heavily.

Three million bushels of wheat is in store in Milwaukee, Wis.

The Democratic press of this State has as many different interpretations of the meaning of "equitable adjustment" as there are papers.

This "equitable adjustment" means just this: It means to investigate and ascertain just how much is due the bondholder for his principal and interest, and then pay that amount and no more. But if, for instance, a bondholder has paid four hundred dollars in coin for one thousand dollars in greenbacks, and with these greenbacks he purchased a thousand dollar bond, and now claims under the sanction of the Republican party, that the thousand dollars and the interest thereon should be paid in coin, pay him back his four hundred dollars in coin, together with lawful interest thereon, but no more.

The Albany Democrat answers this position by saying:

Why not pay him back with interest the greenbacks with which he bought the bond? What business have we to inquire when and how he became possessed of the bond? Suppose an individual purchased $2,000 in greenbacks at 40 cents, and with $1,000 bought a bond, retaining the remainder of the first transaction in his keeping, would there not be just as much—rather, just as little—fairness in compelling him to surrender his remaining $1,000 in greenbacks upon the payment of $400 in coin as there would be in compelling the surrender of the bond upon the payment of the same sum?

We hold that "equitable adjustment" means and can mean nothing but payment of the debt honestly, fairly, equitably, according to our State and National Platform of two years ago.

The platform of two years ago since adopted the Pendleton scheme, which is to pay in greenbacks.

The Herald supposes that a thousand dollar bond has been bought for four hundred dollars, and thus proceeds with the argument: In order to arrive at an equitable adjustment of this case, it will be necessary to confess the four hundred dollars, and then figure what interest, at contract rates, is due at date of settlement.

The Jacksonville News thus endorses the above from the Herald:

We are glad to know that Hon. J. H. Slater, our candidate for Congress, with an honesty and frankness which will commend him to the warmest support of his party, has placed himself squarely upon the issue presented in the 8th resolution, as understood and explained in the letter of Mr. Fay, Col. Kelly also, and most of the leading Democrats of the State, have spurned the false subtleties usually observed in politics, and have followed the lead of the Herald in this regard.

We know that there are individual Democrats in Oregon who have different plans from that mentioned for the settlement or "adjustment" of the debt. We have no quarrel to make with those Democrats who believe in "shaving" the debt to a gold standard, and in "forcible disgorgement," though we by no means endorse such doctrines.

The Boston Commercial Bulletin of April 2d says that the wool market is very dull this spring, prices ranging from 40 to 54 cents from the Middle and Western States, and 20 cents for California clip.

The Salem Press thinks that the equitable adjustment clause in the 8th resolution in the Albany platform is "vague, equivocal and indefinite, and we are confident that it could have been much improved if the Convention had considered it with somewhat less haste and better temper."

The Commercial asks why, if the Convention meant what is claimed by the Press, they did not adopt that platform?

The Albany Democrat is also kicking over the platform adopted by its party. Here is what it says of repudiation and its effects:

Is it not the business of the Government of the United States to inquire who bought greenbacks, or at what figure, or for what purpose? If an individual was fortunate enough to buy for $100 a quantity of legal tenders, which, subsequently invested in bonds, became worth $1,000, government has no more right to deprive him of the benefits of his transaction than if that transaction had been in dry goods or real estate.

A government that would thus speculate in the depreciation of its own currency is not likely to inspire the world with much confidence.

Going farther than the above quoted authority, we say there never shall be any law or equity to violate the terms of the contract.

The Oregonian thus digs the Herald upon its financial policy: The Herald complains because the Republican party did not borrow money for the war on better terms.

The same paper says: We have paid during the past year about ninety million dollars of our national debt. Bonds amounting to this sum have been purchased by the Government and placed in the sinking fund, where the interest is paid regularly upon them, which interest is in turn used for the purchase of more bonds.

I matters not that Oregon, when compared with the great States, contains but a small population; if Oregon approves this doctrine it goes abroad that one of the States of the American Union has voted to repudiate the national debt.
