Civil Service Reform.

The following is an extract from a speech of the Hon. Lyman Trumbull before the Republican State Conventhan anything we have before seen, and we recommend a careful perusal by our readers:

This is the great question that is going to be submitted to the American people in the next election. The war is over-that contest is over. Now, what political organization would be safest for the American people? Hereafter, where shall we look? Shall we look to that party which brought the Government to civil war to preserve the Union? Will you look to that party which ruined the credit of the nation, so that it could not borrow money at less than 12 to 30 per cent. per annum; to that party which inaugurated the doctrine that to the victors belong the spoils; to that party which now desires further to depreciate the currency of the country by issuing millions more of it? But if the people of this country believe that economy has been introduced into the public service since the Republican party took possession of the Government; if they believe that the Government is stronger to-day than it was when they took possession; if they believe that liberty is more secure, and the rights of the citizen better protected; free speech and free press in all parts of the land, better secured tion of Illinois.
