The Oregon Republican.

DALLAS, SATURDAY, JUME, 8.

REPUBLICAN

NOMINATIONS FOR 1872.

For President,

U. S. GRANT.

OF ILLINOIS.

For Vice-President,

HENRY WILSON.

OF MASSACHUSETTS.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS.

A. B. Meacham, of Umatilla County,
W. D. Hare. of Washington County
Jas. F. Gazley, of Douglas County.

Presidential Ticket.

The telegraph brings the news that the Philadelphia Convention has nominated Ulysses S. Grant, for President; and Henry Wilson, of Massachusetts, for Vice President. The news comes in, just as we go to press and we have no room for comments.

"I Told You So."

This has always been repeated after a thing has come to pass, by many, who, in the occurrence of the event, were among the doubting ones. But our readers will remember that we have predicted at different times, a decided Republican victory in the political contest of 1872, in Oregon. The result has, however, exceeded even our expectations. From the length and breadth of our State, comes the joyful shouts of a Republican victory. The Democracy of Oregon are dead and d——distanced so badly in the race that the white hat of Greeley, hanging on the tombstone of its grave, is hardly precaptible. Most, if not all, of the Republican ticket in Polk county is elected. The Legislature on joint ballot will be strong enough to send a Republican to the U. S. Senate. This will be joyful news to all Republicans, and a glorious thing for the State. Mount Hood can now rear its snow capped peak, above the clouds in regal splendor without fear of being located for swamp lands. The Legislature of the State will, we trust, be so conducted as to secure the best interests of the entire people. The election of a Republican President will place the affairs of the Nation in safe hands, and a general season of thrift and enterprise may be anticipated.

SUMNER AND GRANT.—In a recent speech in the U. S. Senate in reply to Sumner's attack on the President, Senator Logan denounced the attacks as slanderous, malignant and without foundation. As to Sumner's assertion that military men were not fit for statesmen, the Senator (Logan) referred to Mr. Sumner's own course, and avowed that the State books showed fewer measures originated by Sumner than by any other one member claiming to be a statesman. His greatness consisted in high sounding phrases, long-drawn sentences, extensive quotations from old books and history and his boasted achievements were mere glittering generalities, while the "Citizen of Galena" has written his history in blood, and it would be read with interest when Sumner's would be forgotten.

Most men have a peculiar fancy which they indulge in, until it becomes a monomania and takes the place of everything else. The Democrats of this State have indulged the idea that they were going to carry the State in the late election, until they really began to believe that it could not be otherwise. Fancy can picture better than pen can describe their woe-be-gone countenances when the news of the week began to to pour in upon them and reveal the fact that they had been ignominiously defeated.

"The best laid plans of mice and men Gang oft aglae".

There are 215 cadets at the Naval Academy, thirty-nine of whom were appointed by the President, four are naval apprentices, three Japanese students, one is from the District of Columbia, and 170 from the various States.

At Iwakura's state dinner in Washington, each Minister had the flag of his own nation displayed at his plate.

A Word of Explanation.

It has been a matter of considerable conjecture among friends of the REPUBLICAN, why the names of the nominees of the Republican party for county offices were not hoisted in the form of a ticket in the columns of the paper, during the campaign. A few words will suffice to make the matter plain. The contest is now over, the victory won, and we can now say just what we please without fear of having it misconstrued. Up to the time of the meeting of the second County Convention we could learn from all hands just how everything was going. But as soon as the nominations were made the tune changed and we could hardly get a word from any of the candidates as to how things were going, or what they were doing. Knowing that the contest was going to be close, we were doubly anxious to have a say in the matter, realizing that a paper with five hundred regular readers in a single county, must wield a strong influence for whichever side it espoused. We repeatedly pressed our suit with the candidates, explained to them as far as they would allow us to, the advantage in having the organ of the party espouse their cause, as well as the absolute duty devolving upon them as the representatives of the party to use every means in their power to insure election. It was all of no avail, and we were left in a place where we could do nothing. Many things in relation to the management of our county affairs which we might have exposed, were kept in the back ground on account of the coolness with which we had been treated. To require us to devote time, and space in the paper to fight the battles of those who lent no influence in our favor—many of whom did not so much as take a single copy of the paper, against those who had been its regular supporters since its foundation without encouragement or reward, was demanding more than any sane-minded person could really expect, and more than we proposed to grant, and because we were not willing to allow ourself to be used as a tool to do the work of others, we have been coverlly assailed and denounced. But the battle is fought and all is satisfactory, at least as far as we are concerned. Those parties who started out to fight us, indivually, as well as lend their influence against the paper, have the extreme felicity to know that they have had their trouble for nothing. Despite their frantic efforts, the REPUBLICAN still pursues its even tenor, caring nothing for the little, petty spite which has been indulged in by those who expect a printer to work for nothing and board himself; and it has been demonstrated that a paper can be run through a political campaign without being dependent upon petty politicians for its support. If the latter could not be done, we would rather sink our ship with colors flying than to cringe to the dictations of those whose only safeguard from defeat was, that the opposition candidates were so contemptibly ignorant and devoid both of ability or learning that many of their own men failed to support them from sheer disgust. The paper will henceforth run, as it has done heretofore, upon a straight Republican line, swerving neither to the right nor to the left, but following only that course which duty dictates.

AMNESTY.—The Amnesty Bill has passed both Houses of Congress, and become a law. Under its provisions only about two hundred persons are now debarred from exercising the elective franchise in the United States. This includes some of the principal leaders in the rebellion.

According to Horace Greeley, a man to be a successful foreign minister should understand the Bible, and be able to talk the language of the country to which he is sent.

Gov. Palmer, in a speech at Springfield, Ill., while offering to give absolution to Democrats who would abandon their party and vote for the nominee of the Cincinnati Convention, was sharp enough not to pledge himself positively to vote for the nominee of that Convention, but, "proposed to vote just how pleased." This implies his belief that the nominee of the Cincinnati Convention will be a good enough man for the Democracy to support, while there may be some doubt in reference to so good a Republican as himself. We commend this view of the case to the consideration of the Democracy.

Grant and Greeley.

Grant in his official career has shown himself to be equal to all emergencies which have arisen. The decided opposition with which he has met, and the manner he has met it, shows him to be made of that stern material which is so necessary to a truly great man. As a military man his record is untarnished; as a statesman, although he says but little yet that little is terse, and to the point. His past four years of office may give us an idea of what we may expect in the four years to come, for his course is consistent, effective and successful.

In many respects Horace Greeley is a great man. As an editor and essayist or writer on any subject, he has few equals—no superiors. We have no desire to detract from whatever distinction he may have attained, but facts go to prove that he has few, if any of the qualifications necessary to fill the Presidential office.

To write for the papers, to talk fluently upon any or all subjects which may be sprung before the people, are qualifications which he possesses in an eminent degree, and which have been developed by years of practice. But the great difference between Grant and Greeley is, Grant's place is to create, Greeley's simply to describe the creation. It requires more practical brains to do the one than the other. Greeley's inaugural, if he were President, would be a model of elegance in its style, full rounded sentences which would charm the ear of the critic. Grant's would be crude in its style, but would carry with it more of the popular heart than all the high-flown literature of his opponent. Greeley's forte is composition, but when it comes to the execution of laws, settlement of great National questions, appointing men to fill high and important offices, action under emergencies which require decision and the quick discernment oft needed in an executive, Greeley is lacking, while so far in all the trying scenes of the war as well as the diplomatic embarrassments since, Grant has always been equal to the emergency.

A Test Vote.

Two ladies, Mrs. P. C. Sullivan and Mrs. H. Hagood, presented themselves at the polls in Dallas, last Monday, and amid perfect silence and respectful deportment of those around presented their votes, and they went upon the records unchallenged.

Their votes were not counted by the Judges, but we understand the right of ladies to vote is to be tested in this instance They claim that under the XIVth Amendment of the U. S. Constitution, and the Constitution of Oregon, they have the right, and they wish to exercise it. Their principal claims are the clause in the 1st section of the XIVth article of the United States Constitution which says:

"No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States."

And the XXth Article of the Bill of Rights in the Constitution of the State of Oregon which says:

"No law shall be passed granting to any citizen or class of citizens privileges or immunities, which, upon the same terms, shall not equally belong to all citizens."

Also section 726 of General Provisions in the Statutes of the State of Oregon, which says:

"Words used in the masculine gender, comprehend as well the feminine and the neuter."

Mrs. Sullivan, as far at we heve been able to learn, has the honor of being the first woman who has attempted to exercise the elective franchise in Oregon. How the matter will end we would not be willing to predict. We have too often ezpressed our opinion on the question of Woman Suffrage, to need to reiterate it now. It has now come to a question of legal right, and we leave it with the Courts. Mr. Sullivan is a gentleman of acknowledged legal ability and knows what he is doing. Suffice it to say in this connection, that not a word was said by any one to mar the pleasure of this novel scene, while the ladies were demanding, and as far as they could, exercising a right which they claim belongs to them.

The following particulars are reported concerning the death of Harvey Meacham, brother of Hon. A. B. Meacham: Mr. A. B. Meacham and his brother Harvey, were in the timber engaged in building a fence, working a short distance apart. Mr. Meacham cut down a large tree, which, as it fell, struck a dead tree standing but a little distance from where he was at work, with such force that it fell, striking Harvey upon the top of the head, fracturing the skull. He did not move or speak after he was hit, and remained unconcious up to the time of his death, which occurred in about three hours after the accident happened.
