Isabelle and Andrew Gellatly, parents of J. A. Gellatly, present candidate for county clerk, have been residents of Benton county since 1872, and have paid taxes during all this time. All told the Gellatly family have paid into the county's exchequer, $4,269.02, as shown by the tax rolls. They have owned for years four large farms in this county on which they are paying taxes. It looks strange that a man, who has held office ever since he has been in the county, should undertake to charge that Mr. Gellatly is a foreigner and came here for the purpose of holding office. When the people shall have elected J. A. Gellatly clerk and have paid him two years' salary the county will be ahead, and will not have paid out to him as much as he and his family have paid in taxes to the county. Demo-Populist candidates are never at a loss to try to humbug the voter.

The words "Yaquina project was defeated," which appeared in the Oregonian's heading of the despatches from Washington last Friday, are false and misleading, and were probably due to error on the part of the "head writer." There is nothing in the body of the despatches to warrant such a statement. The bill which was being considered by the house was a special river and harbor bill containing appropriations for emergencies in river and harbor works, and provided for the maintenance of improvements in harbors already in use. It made no new appropriation for any harbor in the country. The only way in which Yaquina bay was affected by this bill was that she received an appropriation under its provisions for the taking out of a cluster of rocks near the channel. This bill was passed by the house. The river and harbor bill will not come before the house until next December.

OPENED BY FULTON.

The First Speech of the Campaign Delivered by this Popular Orator.

The political campaign, just beginning, which is to consider some of the most momentous issues ever brought before the American people was opened last Tuesday evening by Hon. Chas. W. Fulton, of Astoria. He discussed expansion, the Porto Rican bill, trusts and other questions now prominent from a common-sense standpoint, and in a common-sense manner. There was little attempt at oratory, although his reference to the storming of San Juan hill and the charge of the Oregon's at Malabon was eloquent and thrilled his auditors.

He began by reviewing the condition of the country for the past eight years. The fearful panic and total business depression brought on by four years of democracy, ending with 1897, and the wonderful commercial growth and unparalleled national prosperity attained by our people since that time. Referring to Bryan's figure of the republican toboggan slide from Lincoln to Mark Hanna, Mr. Fulton called attention to the democratic toboggan slide from Cleveland to Bryan; from wisdom to wind. His remarks were good natured and were received with applause. "The calamity," he said, "which Mr. Bryan claimed would befall the country if the legislation called for in the republican platform were put into effect, has not materialized." The republican party has done what it said it would do, and yet instead of decreasing the circulating medium by establishing the gold standard, it has increased it by $400,000,000. We are refunding the public debt and decreasing the interest upon it by from two to three per cent.

Taking up the question of trusts, Mr. Fulton said the republican party was the only party which had ever legislated against trusts. In fact the democratic party had endeavored to legislate in favor of trusts. Senator Jones, of Arkansas, Mr. Bryan's warm personal advisor, had introduced a bill in the senate which provided for returning to the sugar trust $1,800,000 which it had paid to the United States in revenue on sugar imported from Porto Rico, and the bill had been defeated by the republicans. The anti-trust law introduced by Senator Sherman and passed by the republicans in 1890, was a most stringent measure, and had the effect of driving the trusts out of business under the United States laws and they were forced to take refuge under the provisions enacted by the states.

The republican party was never to be found standing still. Its feet were on the highway of progress, and as new issues arose, the republican party advanced to meet them. Every step forward was characterized by Mr. Bryan as a "flop," but he could not see beyond the weeds and cockle burrs growing up in his position which has long since been abandoned by progressive people. The commercial opportunities in Europe have all been exploited, and a nation only holds its own there by desperate and persistent effort, but China which has been lying dormant for 4000 years is on the eve of an awakening and ere long her 400,000,000 of people will be offering a wonderful market for the products of the world. America must have her share. To secure this, retention of the Philippines is imperative, and we on the Pacific coast are more deeply and directly concerned than any other section of the United States. Not only will the commercial future of this country be imperiled by an abandonment of our possessions in the orient, but the opportunity of the coast will be lost, the nation will be recreant to its duty and all the sacrifices of our sailors and soldiers in the war with Spain will have been in vain.

He said that he endorsed in its entirety the action of the republican party on the Porto Rican bill and was glad to defend its position. The president had said in his message that the commercial policy of this government toward Porto Rico should be free trade, and the president was right. The republican party believes this, too, and within two years at the farthest that will be the policy. But when congress began to consider means for raising the revenue which was necessary to carry on the government of the islands, it believed that to apply to Porto Rico in her present condition the same revenue laws that are applied to the states of the Union would be severe and unjust. Some more lenient and considerate method must be pursued. To appropriate funds out of the United States treasury for her relief was not just to the people of this country, and but one other way remained: to place a small tariff upon imports and exports between Porto Rico and the United States, and limit its operation to such time as a permanent government could be established for the islands. The largest exports from Porto Rico are sugar and tobacco, the trusts own these products and they are, therefore, paying for the privilege of bringing them into this country. The revenue accruing from this tariff together with $2,000,000 already accumulated, is placed in the hands of the president to be expended in building school houses, highways, and otherwise improving the condition of Porto Rico. It is the most humane and charitable act ever passed by congress.

Mr. Fulton impressed upon republicans the importance of Oregon's verdict June 4th. Every republican should vote the straight ticket, and Thomas Tongue should be returned to congress by a splendid majority.

Our Representative.

R. J. Nichols, republican nominee for representative, is not only a native son of Oregon, but of Benton county. He was born in 1854, on a farm near his present home. His father was a Connecticut man of Puritan stock. Coming to Oregon in an early day, he was one of the men who organized the republican party. He served in the territorial legislature, in the constitutional convention, and in the first state legislature. Much of his time was spent in teaching, and the son's early education was by no means neglected. At the age of nineteen he entered Pacific University. His health compelled him to relinquish his studies here, but later, with that determination characteristic of the stock of which he comes, he entered Willamette University, graduating in the class of '77, of which Mrs. John Steiwer, and B. F. Irvine, of the Times, were members. After graduation he taught school for several years, settling down to married life in 1881, upon the farm where he now lives.

Mr. Nichols is a farmer by birth and vocation. He is a man of excellent education and scholarly attainments. A few months ago he lost by fire his fine library, considered one of the finest private libraries in the state. Two years ago he was elected to the legislature by the people of this county. His record there is above reproach. His able and untiring efforts in behalf of the agricultural college alone should insure his re-election by an overwhelming majority. The misfortune which overtook that institution when the mechanical hall was destroyed by fire, and the prospects for repairing the loss were most discouraging, are still fresh in the minds of our people. With unflinching zeal in the midst of discouragement, Mr. Nichols set about to secure an appropriation for rebuilding the hall. The beautiful structure which now adorns the college campus is a monument to his efforts. But he did more. He secured an appropriation for the heating plant, when the task looked hopeless, and received the congratulations of our people and the regents of the board. The people of Benton county are friends of this grand institution and Mr. Nichols is its ablest champion. His election is assured.
