From whose hands did it change? From one banker's to another's? If so, the abolishment of athletics will not better the matter, for the coming state fair at Salem will offer plenty of temptation to these gentlemen to lay wagers.

say that the farmer lads from the Dated this 22nd day of June, 1900. Oregon Agricultural College had thousands of dollars with which to back their favorites? It certainly does. The Journal has one picture of the farmer in abject poverty, lacking the necessities of life, and another of the tarmer's son passing his time in sport and throwing money like a prince. A mind capable of visions like this is diseased.

"The success of the Americans in the international sports has astounded Europe, as it is the most remarkable series of victories ever won by one nation," says Archbishop Ireland in a recently cabled interview from Paris. "Furthermore," he continues, "they have proved the superiority of the training methods used in universities and colleges of the United States. I am a firm believer in physical training as an important factor in the regeneration of the human race. He who pays due attention to the common laws as to eating, sleeping and regular exercise will find himself fitted for all the walks of life. The mental side must not be neglected, however, while benefitting the physical. As the brain of a scholar is often dimmed by forgetfulness of material needs, so the athlete sometimes suffers for not developing his mental powers. Intelligent attention to both gives mens sana in corpore sano."

During Cleveland's administration we issued bonds to replenish the gold reserve. Today there are over $430,000,000 gold in the United States treasury, the largest amount in the history of the nation.

Four years ago it was demonitization of silver and the gold bug which threatened the existence of the Oregon farmer. Now it is militarism and the army worm.

The Hessian Fly.

The fact that the Hessian fly has this season attacked the wheat fields of Western Oregon chology. and Washington, gives local interest to the following bulletin, just issued by the Indiana Experiment Station:

The adult fly somewhat resembles a very small mosquito, being about one-eighth of an inch in length; the female being more robust than the male, especially in length; the female being more robust than the male, especially in length; reading. Thursday—Written arithmetic, theory of teaching, grammar, school law.

Friday—Geography, mental arithmetic, physiology, civil government. robust than the male, especially when full of eggs.

Soon after the adult fly comes forth the female deposits her eggs upon the upper side of the leaf. The eggs soon hatch and the young larvae work their way down beneath the sheath to near its base which in autumn is just above the roots. Here they remain absorbing the juices of the stem until full grown, when they assume the "flaxseed" state, in which they pass the winter. During April and May, the main portion of the spring brood comes forth and the same process is repeated, the "flaxseed" state being reached just before harvest.

Probably the most effective measures to prevent its ravages to be recommended are: (1) sowing at the proper time; (2) sowing decoy strips; (3) thorough preparation and tertilization of the land so as to provide the most favorable conditions for strong and rapid growth.

The active period of the fall brood, in the northern counties extends (approximately) from the last of August to about the last of September, gradually getting later as they go south, so that in the southern portion | Sold by Graham & Wortham, they will be found at work probably as late as the middle of October. It is evident then, that, in order to avoid the fall brood of the fly, the proper time to sow wheat in the northern counties, is between September 20th and 30th, and in the southweek in October this year, as
