For Vice-President: THEODORE ROOSEVELT of New York.

IT IS UP TO BRYAN.

Since Mr. Bryan discovered that his paramount bugaboo of "imperialism" was frightening more voters away from him than it was attracting to him, he has fought as shy of it as he has of "free silver" since the Kansas City convention.

"I have but a moment in which to speak to you; I want to take advantage of this first opportunity of arguing a criticism of Mr. Bryan and putting a question to him in return. No question can be asked me either about my past record as governor or concerning any present issues that I am not ready to answer, and I would like to have similar frankness from our opponents.

"That is hardly correct as a matter of governmental knowledge. I cannot call out the militia to destroy a trust. What can be done is to have the legislature pass and the governor sign a law to do away with the trust, and then have the attorney-general proceed under that law to enforce it, according to the best of his capacity.

"Now, are not these the only things that can be done? Well, I have done them both. In the first year of my term as governor we passed a very severe anti-trust law, and now the attorney-general is proceeding under the law against the ice trust. The difficulty comes in the delay caused by the trust counsel, as they are appealing as they have a right to appeal, to every legal technicality, and are making every effort to stop a decision on the merits of the case.

"Mr. Van Wyck was the New York member of the committee on resolutions which drew up the trust platform. Messrs. Croker and Van Wyck, and their party associates, like Mr. Guggenheimer, president of the board of aldermen, and Corporation Counsel Whalen, of New York, are very severe on trusts in theory; in practice, they are members of the worst trust in the country. The attorney-general is now proceeding against the ice trust, and if Mr. Croker, Mr. Van Wyck and the associates who are members of the trust were not employing the best counsel in the state to delay action, we should have had a decision of the court long ago. The republican attorney-general is pressing that action under the law, introduced by a democrat, but passed by a republican legislature and signed by myself. We are opposed by Mr. Bryan's ardent supporters in New York, the heads of the democratic party of the state. "Now, as I have answered that question, I wish Mr. Bryan would enlighten us on the point as to whether, if he comes into office, he will pay the obligations of the nation in gold or silver. I will gladly answer any question he puts, and I would like him to answer this question in return. Moreover, I would like to have him answer if by the consent of the governed he is so insistent upon must be had in the Philippines, why it should not be insisted upon in North Carolina as well."

RESULT OF CONDITIONS.

The effort of Mr. Bryan and the leaders of his party to fasten the blame for the existence of the "trust" upon the republican party is dishonest and absurd. The trust is the product of our civilization and not of any political party. Trusts are growing rapidly throughout Europe as well as in the United States. The protective tariff is made to appear as the mother of trusts, yet free trade countries are also burdened with trusts. Mr. Bryan is trying to make it appear that the republican party is responsible for the condition of the coal miners in Pennsylvania. Yet there is no tariff on coal; and it was only a few days ago that free-trade England was threatened with a coal famine, due to a gigantic strike on the part of her coal miners.

As early as March, 1894, the Illustrated American, at that time one of the most ably edited magazines in America, said: "The age is notable for union, organization, consolidation. Labor affiliates with labor, capital with capital, corporation with corporation, government with government. The practical demonstration is found in the union of labor organizations in one brotherhood of lodges, in the copartnership of many investors in the shares of one company; in the combination of railroads in a system, or in the trusts formed by industrial associations; in the confederacy of states, and in the alliances, protective and offensive, of nations. Primarily, combination is the result of conditions; secondarily, it is the cause of new conditions."

AUTHORITIES DIFFER.

The Times says that the reason England did not go to war with the United States over the Venezuelan boundary question was because "she dared not enter a conflict. She had colonies scattered all over the world," and claims that England's American possessions were a source of weakness to her. If this is true, why do we enforce the Monroe doctrine at all? If it is not because possession of territory on the American continent by European powers is a menace to the United States, what reason is there for the Monroe doctrine anyway? If, as the Times says, possession of distant territory keeps nations from going to war is not this policy a step toward the millennium, and may it not be the solution of a question that puzzled a number of prominent personages recently at the Hague? Some historians are of the opinion that if England had isolated herself in the past and had not pursued her course of expansion, she would have been too insignificant by this time to have even attracted Mr. Olney's attention over the Venezuelan or any other question.

The fact that Altgeld is so actively supporting Mr. Bryan should be in itself sufficient to alarm every friend of law and order. One of the earliest acts of Altgeld's administration as governor of Illinois was the pardoning of the Haymarket anarchists, and he went out of office with the pardon mill in full blast. During one month alone he released from the penitentiary nine notorious criminals and commuted the sentences of six others equally bad. Of those released from prison, six were convicted of murder. And Altgeld is the man slated for attorney-general in the event of Bryan's election.
