Nothing in the Wide World

has such a record for absolutely curing female ills and kidney troubles as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Medicines that are advertised to cure everything cannot be specifics for anything.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will not cure every kind of illness that may afflict men, women and children, but proof is monumental that it will and does cure all the ills peculiar to women.

This is a fact indisputable and can be verified by more than a million women.

If you are sick don't experiment, take the medicine that has the record of the largest number of cures.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. The ground for strawberries should be selected a year in advance. It should be planted to some crop that requires liberal manuring and frequent hoeing, so as to destroy all weeds. It is grass and weeds that cause strawberry beds to become worthless after the first year, and after the rows are matted there is no way to get rid of weeds in the rows except to pull them out by hand. If the ground is kept clean the previous year but few weeds will appear.

Contagious Blood Poison

There is no poison so highly contagious, so deceptive and so destructive. Don't be too sure you are cured because all external signs of the disease have disappeared, and the doctor says you are well. Many persons have been dosed with Mercury and Potash for months or years, and pronounced cured—to realize when too late that the disease was only covered up—driven from the surface to break out again, and to their sorrow and mortification find those nearest and dearest to them have been infected by this loathsome disease, for no other poison is so surely transmitted from parent to child as this. Often a bad case of Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula or severe skin disease, an old sore or ulcer developing in middle life, can be traced to blood poison contracted in early life, for it remains smoldering in the system forever, unless properly treated and driven out in the beginning. S. S. S. is the only antidote for this peculiar virus, the only remedy known that can overcome it and drive it out of the blood, and it does this so thoroughly and effectually that there is never a return of the disease to embarrass or humiliate you afterwards.

Like Begets Like.

The Sin of the Parent.

SSS cures Contagious Blood Poison in any and all stages; contains no mineral to break down your constitution; it is purely vegetable and the only blood purifier known that cleanses the blood and at the same time builds up the general health.

Our little book on contagious blood poison is the most complete and instructive ever issued; it not only tells all about this disease, but also how to cure yourself at home. It is free and should be in the hands of everyone seeking a cure. Send for it.

LONG FINGER NAILS

Indicate Rank and Good Breeding in Many Oriental Countries.

The countries where the long finger nail is most affected are Siam, Assam, Cochin China and China. The approved length varies from three or four to twenty-three inches. A Siamese exquisite permits the nails on his fingers to grow to such an extent that his hands are practicallly useless. The aristocrats who affect these nails can not write, dress themselves, or even feed themselves.

The Siamese hold the long finger nail in the same reverence we hold the family tree. Many of them never have had their nails cut from the day of their birth. On the first finger the nail is of moderate length—three or four inches—while on the other fingers the nails grow occasionally to two feet. The thumb nail, which is also allowed to grow long, after reaching a certain length curves around like a corkscrew.

In both China and Siam the owners of long nails wear metal cases over them to preserve them, made of gold or silver, and jeweled. While long nails are not regarded as singular in China, they are rarely met with except on fanatics and pedantic scholars.

Among the fakirs in Hindoostan a peculiar custom is that of holding the hand tightly clenched and in one position so long that at last the nails grow through the palm, emerging at the back of the hand, and growing thence almost to the wrist. When the wasted muscles refuse to support the arm any longer it is bound in position with cords.

In Nubia the long nail is regarded as indicative of good breeding. The aristocrats constantly subject their finger tips to cedar wood fire to insure a good growth.

The inhabitants of the Marquesas Islands are among the most expert tattooers on earth, and not even the crown of the head, the fingers and the toes are exempt from the needle. The hands are ornamented with utmost care, all the fingers having their own pattern, so that the hand would look as though incased in a tight-fittig glove were it not for the finger nails of enormous length which complete the hand adornment of the wealthier natives.—Chicago News.

Sorry He Learned.

"Did you ever know the difference between a boy who has been brought up with girls and one who has not? The one whose acquaintance with girls of his own age has been slight is apt to be awkward and unobserving; whereas, the boy who has breathed an atmosphere of feminine influence notices the occasions for the small politenesses of life.

The speaker was a young woman who had had experiences, and she proceeded to unfold them.

"I was thrown last summer," she went on, "with a college boy who had no sisters, nor cousins, nor aunts, to polish him off. At Yale he had studied hard, and had not 'wasted his time,' as he would have called it, on girls' affairs. He didn't know how to do the few thousand small services that women like, and as he was really clever and nice, I proceeded forthwith to polish him. I never went for anything I wanted. He had to go on all my errands. I dropped my scissors, or book, or parasol, fifty times a day to teach him to pick them up. At first I had to remind him, but after a while he did it quite naturally; and at the end of the season he thanked me sincerely.

"The sequel came a few days ago, when I received a letter from him reproaching me ruefully for having made him ridiculous. 'I'm always jumping around to help people when I'd better let them alone,' he says. 'The fellows can't drop a pencil in class but I find myself sprawling on the floor after it before I stop to think. It will take years to undo the direful work of last summer."—New York Telegram.

What She Wears.

The famous woman, Annie S. Peck, who has been noted as having scaled the Matterhorn and broke the record on Mount Orizaba, going 8,600 feet into the clouds, wore flannel undergarments, a waist of serge, a woolen sweater, knickerbockers and leggings of sage-green duck canvas, which she made herself. She wore the heaviest kind of winter boots, and a shoemaker in Switzerland put an extra piece of heavy leather over the whole lower part of the shoes, toes and heels, and then nearly covered them with nails. In many of her trips she has worn furtopped gloves, but for the Matterhorn she wore woolen mittens. A substantial canvas hat, tied on with ribbon, and veil, as well as smoked glasses, complete her outfit. She takes the precaution to put cold cream on her face before facing the severe weather.

The Cook Got Even.

A cook here who quarreled with the owner of the restaurant got even in this way: After making the soup he improved it by the introduction of several foreign ingredients, such as a quantity of sand, half a cupful of red pepper, a pound of tacks, a bunch of kindling wood chopped fine and a couple of old kid gloves a la noodles. The feeders sat down as usual last evening, but as soon as they sampled the soup they rose up again en masse and almost mobbed the whole shooting match. According to the evidence produced at the preliminary hearing a more fearful brew than this soup was never concocted, even by Macbeth's weird sisters. The cook is now in the consomme.—New York correspondent Pittsburg Dispatch.

When You Write to the Queen.

The paper on which letters to Queen Victoria are written must not be folded. No communication which bears evidence of having been creased will ever fall into her Majesty's own hands. The proper method is to write on thick, glossy white paper and to dispatch the missive in an envelope which fits it. Any folded communication never reaches the Queen, for the simple reason that she never looks at it. All such letters are opened by the Mistress of the Robes, and as a rule their contents never get beyond her, or, if the letter is of importance, it is returned to the writer with the directions how to forward it.—Exchange.

HELD THE FORT.

John Barleycorn Proved Too Much for a Band of Hostile Indians.

An adventure with hostile Indians, seldom surpassed in critical peril and exciting situation, was that of a French Canadian some years ago at Fort Pierre au Calumet, on Lake Athabasca. One day, when the chief trader was absent on a visit to York factory, and the other men employed in the station were playing lacrosse upon the ice, this man and an Irishman named McTaggart were the only persons left in the fort.

Just then forty Chippewa "braves" who had pretended to have furs to sell, but who had really been watching an opportunity to plunder, came up to the fort and poured inside the stockade. Pierre, the Frenchman, had barely time to bar the main door when they rushed against it, showing plainly their unfriendly purpose. A parley with the chief, through a small side-trap, resulted in the withdrawal of the Indians outside the stockade and an agreement to admit the chief alone, with the furs. Pierre thus relates what followed:

I instructed my man, McTaggart, to watch when the Indians were well out of the yard, and when the chief came in to make a dash and fasten the outer gate. I then opened the door. McTaggart slipped out, but had not made one step when the chief struck him with his tomahawk, killing him instantly. The savage then darted through the half-open door, and, parrying a blow I aimed at him, he seized the bar which fastened the door and threw it outside.

I had by this time got hold of one of my pistols and pulled it at him as he came toward me, flourishing his bloody tomahawk. The bullet took effect, for the savage, with a frightful yell, staggered through the doorway, where his cries soon gathered his band about him.

Before I could fasten the door the whole gang had burst into the fort. I sprang behind some casks and hid myself there, feeling, however, sure that they would find and kill me. There can be no doubt about my fate if the savages had not been more eager for plunder and whisky than they were for vengeance.

As it was, one of them at once rushed to a cask of whisky, the head of which he stove in with his hatchet, and with the greatest eagerness the whole crowd began to help themselves to the contents.

That they would drink themselves drunk was now my only hope and opportunity, and I quietly kept out of sight behind the empty barrels to await events.

The idiotic abandon and general "cutting up" of the savages as they came under the influence of the whisky was very ludicrous; but you may be sure I kept my laughter to myself. In an hour all were hopelessly intoxicated, except one big fellow who seemed to have a stronger head than the rest.

I now felt that with my pistol in my hand I could fight at least on equal terms, if a fight was necessary; but the rascal precipitated matters by turning over the cask of whisky while climbing to reach some plunder that he wanted on an upper shelf. In doing this a live coal was jarred out of the stove into the liquor on the floor and the room was immediately in flames. The Indian who had caused the catastrophe sprang toward the door, but my pistol ended his career.

The whisky was soon consumed, as there was but little left, and the fire was put out without doing large damage, but many of the drunken savages on the floor were fatally burned. When the men came back from the lake and found so many dead Indians and saw the general ruin they were amazed, and supposed I deserved all the credit of the capture of the assailants, etc., when it was merely an accident that had accomplished it.

A Peter the Great "Boom."

We are about to witness the outbreak of a boom on Peter the Great similar to that which has raged for some years round the person of Napoleon. Sir Henry Irving, with all the world open to him, has chosen a play on Peter the Great, written by his son. Prof. Oscar Browning is about to publish a life of the inevitable Peter; and J. M. Graham's historical novel, "The Son of the Czar," has already attracted considerable attention, and will certainly be widely read, as it gives a powerful presentation of Russian life at the most critical epoch of Muscovite history. There is something significant in this renaissance of Peter the Great. The smaller states of Europe are vanishing, one by one, and everything points to eventual collision between the Teuton and the Slav. In the meantime everything that Holy Russia and the anointed person of the Kaiser can do to magnify their respective missions will certainly be accomplished.— Harper's Weekly.

An Original Order.

An order came to a wholesale hardware house one day last week.

That is, it was presumably an order, for it was written under a business heading and had all the general appearances.

The employe who opened the letter studied it and said it beat anything he had seen up to date.

He sent it to a member of the firm, who read it and threw up both hands.

Since then he has been showing it to his friends. It was written by a rural dealer, and is as follows:

"Gentlemen—Please send me at once two long-handled shovels, one dozen sixteen-inch hinges and two kegs of tenpenny nails. Yours truly,

"JOHN ROBINSON.

"P. S.—My son tells me we have plenty of above, so you need not send. J. R."—Chicago Tribune.

REASON OF HER LONG LIFE.

Queen Victoria's Longevity and Health Due to Regularity.

An eminent physician of this city who has recently returned from London, where he had opportunities of learning much of Queen Victoria's habits of life, is of the opinion that not only her longevity, but also her wonderful exemption from the ills and aches to which humans are ordinarily subject, are due to the fact of the extraordinary regularity which is followed in the daily routine of her majesty's life. Nothing makes a difference in this routine, for everything is arranged by rule and compass, in a fashion which no incidents whatsoever ever interfere with. The queen rises every morning at the same hour and retires at the same instant every night, her meals are served to the second, while her drives and airings are regulated with the same punctuality; indeed, the royal household of England far outdoes any great public business institution for scrupulous and perfect punctuality. This state of affairs has gone on, year in, year out, ever since the death of the late lamented prince consort, whose very irregular and free and easy temperament frequently "got" a little on the queen's nerves and caused between the otherwise so united a couple a great many scenes which were the reverse of pleasant. So dear to Victoria is this abnormal punctuality that she has instilled it into all her children, and the Prince of Wales' household, for instance, is almost as noted for its accurate appreciation of time as is that of his royal mother. The prince during his entire lifetime has never as yet been known to be five minutes late for any meal, either in his own house or in anyone else's. On one occasion a very popular and well-known English duchess, famous for her unpunctuality, gave the greatest offense at Marlborough house because she was a few minutes late for dinner. As she entered the drawing-room the prince pointedly glanced at a small clock which stood on the mantel shelf. The duchess' quick eye observed the action and she knew at once that a long time would elapse before she was ever again likely to receive an invitation to dine with her future king. With a somewhat constrained laugh she exclaimed: "Why, sir, it is not that hour." "No," replied the prince, "you are only four minutes late, but I like to have all my clocks five minutes fast, for it keeps punctual people up to the mark."

MEXICO'S SCENIC WONDER.

Waterfall of Juanacactlan a Little Known but Picturesque Cataract.

The great waterfall of Juanacatlan is one of the grandest, though least known, scenic wonders of Mexico. The immediate approach to the falls is in itself an artist's dream of rural delights. Leaving the railroad at the little station of El Castillo, one is conveyed by a native tramcar for a distance of five miles through a beautiful circular valley thousands of acres in area and resembling in the graceful curves of its surrounding hills and the delicate tints of its labyrinths of wild flowers a mammoth seashell. At frequent intervals above the tops of the long grasses and tropical shrubs glimpses are caught of the broad, winding Rio de Santiago, its waters hastening onward to the sea.

Having traversed perhaps two-thirds of this enchanting landscape, one's ear gradually becomes conscious of a low, distant murmur, which steadily increases to a deep rumble, and from that to a mighty roar, and presently the tramcar comes to a standstill at the very brink of a high precipice, from which is viewed through clouds of vaporous mist the sight of thousands of tons of water plunging over a wall of gray granite in a steady, unbroken cataract 360 feet in width for a sheer distance of sixty feet in a seething, eddying vortex below.

For a time the mind is apt to be held in rapt contemplation of the spectacle; then, by degrees, the senses are awakened to the various characteristics, the exquisite effects and weird vagaries of the foaming, falling waters. At the extreme further shore a portion of the rushing flood is turned aside by a spur of granite and hurled against the face of the confining wall, from which it rebounds in a fine veil-like cascade, while from the top of the precipice on the nearer side long trailing vines droop down and reach out their tendrils as if in vain efforts to grasp the descending torrents.

Associated with these falls is a strange and beautiful phenomenon. It is the constant presence of myriads of gorgeous butterflies, which flit in and out of the rifts of the great cascade and to and fro through the clouds of drifting vapor, seemingly attracted and fascinated by the dazzling, buffeting avalanche of foam.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Shore Cargoes that Shift.

"Once in a while we read," said Mr. Bozzle, "that the ship So-and-So or the steamer So-and-So has returned to port, or has arrived, perhaps, with 'a decided list; cargo shifted.' Sometimes we see a land craft, a truck, with cargo shifted—a big pile of boxes, towering high, shaken over to one side or the other by continued jolting along on the side of the street on the slope.

"A load thus shifted can't be shaken back by running along on the opposite slope of the road; it is like a stick of wood that has been bent and kept bent till the grain is set; whatever you do with it the crook stays in.

"If care is exercised in turning corners and in navigating generally, the shifted load can usually be carried to its destination as it is without upsetting, though it may work harder; the experienced truckman knows just what can be done with it, and whether it has shifted so far as it will go, and all that. If it is so badly shifted as to make the operation of the truck difficult or dangerous, he hauls to one side by the curb and anchors—that is to say, he halts and unloads the shifted top courses of his cargo and then reloads and makes everything trim and secure and sets out again."

A Cemetery for Dogs.

In Paris there has recently been opened a special cemetery for dogs where the deceased canines can be buried with as much pomp and be marked by as pretentious a headstone as their late masters can afford. Along the front of the cemetery grounds a handsome stone wall has been erected, and within the entrance on either side are the house of the concierge and the office. Directly in front of one entering is a handsome marble monument. A heavy relief in the stone represents the dog bearing a child on his back, and commemorates the saving of a little one lost in the snow of St. Bernard pass whom a St. Bernard dog found and brought to a safe refuge.

Neither Bright Nor Shining.

To make the Best of Things.

To make the best of things in the rightway is to let things make the best of us. My next duty may be one I do not enjoy, but for conscience' sake to do it as though I enjoyed it is to be made a better man. Something that is a great delight to me knocks at my door. To make the best of it is not only to enjoy it heartily, but "heartily as unto the Lord" who let me have it. Then by my joys I am made a better man. So with sorrow and disappointments. They are not meant to disfigure, but to transfigure me. Live with God, and all things shall be His servants, and work together for our good, and make the best of us.—S. S. Times.

Bubbles.

A bubble is bigger than a drop, but it does no more to fill the spring, for bubbles are but drops distended. Bubbles of pride, bubbles of hypocrisy and self-assertion, bubbles of outward seeming unhelped by inward worth, shine on the surface of the river of time, until God's finger touches them and they are gone. It may be well for some of us to pray that we may not be bubbles on the stream, deluding others by pretense of worth; but we need to pray also that we may not be bubble worshippers, caught by social pretense or intellectual arrogance and forgetful of the limitations of human thought and the revealing touch of the finger of God.

Providence.

God is the Master of the scenes; we must not choose which part we shall act; it concerns us only to be careful that we do it well, always saying; "If this please God, let it be as it is;" and we who pray that God's will may be done on earth as it is Heaven must remember that the angels do whatsoever is commanded them and go wherever they are sent and refuse no circumstances; and if their employment be crossed by a higher degree, they sit down in peace and rejoice in the event.

Chinese Commercial Wealth.

The progress of China in the last 60 years is well illustratetd by the fact that when the Yangste valley was opened, about that many years ago, $500,000 represented all that the Chinese could buy or sell to foreigners, and a few small vessels carried all the freight and passengers. Now all the annual foreign trade of the Yangste is valued at over $100,000,000, and a larger fleet of ocean and local craft ply between Shanghai and Hankow than on the Columbia, Mississippi and Hudson rivers combined.

The renewing of an old orchard in the fall should be done by plowing it and turning the sod under, followed by an application of 10 bushels of air-slacked lime per acre. A disk harrow may then be used, when a liberal coating of manure should be given, allowing it to remain on the surface of the ground as a mulch. Owing to the roots the plowing cannot be done close to the trees.

What Will Become of China?

None can foresee the outcome of the quarrel between foreign powers over the division of China. It is interesting to watch the going to pieces of this race. Many people are also going to pieces because of dyspepsia, constipation and stomach diseases. Good health can be retained if we use Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.

Some people spend so much of their time trying to be amiable that they haven't time to earn a living.

Some insects, so Rev. Theodore Wood says in his recent book on the subject, have families of 40,000 children for whom life is simply one long unbroken dinner time. We are all regarded by a mosquito simply in the light of a full meal.

Nothing Tastes Good

And eating is simply perfunctory—done because it must be.

This is the common complaint of the dyspeptic.

If eating sparingly would cure dyspepsia, few would suffer from it long.

The only way to cure dyspepsia, which is difficult digestion, is to give vigor and tone to the stomach and the whole digestive system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla cured the niece of Frank Fay, 106 N.
