Our local sportsmen were out in good numbers Sunday, and had good success generally. Sheriff Burnett succeeded in taking five fine mallard ducks, along with other game fowls.

Harold Strong has been at Dilly for the past week. He was joined by his father yesterday, who will assist him in starting their sawmill at that place. When it is gotten to running in good shape, Harold will take charge and operate it this winter.

Ira Hunter will leave shortly for Southern Oregon, where he expects to work as an organizer for the order of Maccabees. Seth Hurlbert will also go to work for the Maccabees and will leave, Thursday, for Lincoln county, where he will remain several weeks.

Mrs. E. A. Bean, and little son, who arrived last June from Duluth, Minn., for a visit with relatives in this county, expect to start tomorrow for Miles City, Montana. Mr. Bean is a railroad operator at that place and they will make their home there for the present.

Be sure to read the notice of Dr. Lowe, the well-known optician, in this issue. He is to return here next week. Dr. Lowe has been coming to Corvallis for several years and his work and glasses give universal satisfaction to all. So far as we know he is the only optician that ever returned the second time.

In the football game Saturday between teams from Stanford and University of Oregon at Palo Alto, California, Oregon went down in defeat by a score of 34 to 0. Special mention was made in the reports of the work of Half-back Goodrich, who played with O A C last season. Stanford is said to have the strongest team in her history.

Elders B. W. Winward and A. T. Flinders, representatives of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (better known as Mormons), will hold services in the Burnett hall, Sunday, Nov. 18th, at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. A cordial invitation is extended to all. No collections will be taken; freely we have received and freely we will give.

Henry Dunn was in town Sunday, and stated that he was about to lose one of his horses. The animal has its head mashed in and from the appearance of the wound he said a person would think that the animal had been struck on the head with an ax. In what manner the animal was injured he could not tell, but most likely it was kicked by one of its mates.

Dr. Milton Ashley Nelms, of Walla Walla, was married Wednesday to Miss Adelaide B. Scott, of Portland. The marriage ceremony was performed at the Hotel Portland, where Miss Scott's parents make their home. The parlor, were handsomely and profusely decorated with ferns and potted plants, while some 50 friends of the bride were present to wish her God-speed. Dr. Kellogg performed the ceremony. The bride is one of the popular young women of Portland, and a musician of high standing. The groom has but recently returned from an extended European tour. Dr. and Mrs. Nelms will make Walla Walla their home, where they will be welcomed by their many friends.—Oregonian.

Dr. Nelms is quite well known in this city, where he resided for a time some several years ago.

Jan Daniels made a business trip to Albany Friday.

George Reed went to Salem Saturday on a business trip.

Highest market price paid for country produce at F. L. Miller's. Men's and Boys' Seamless Shirts—No Rip—just received at Nolan & Callahan's.

Lincoln county seems about to enjoy a stir shortly in the way of lumber business. She has been visited late by a number of Eastern lumbermen. At present two brothers, Messrs. Hendry, of Wisconsin are investigating that section.

A very pleasant reception was tendered Father Jurek, Friday evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Nolan in honor of his safe return from Europe. The evening was spent most pleasantly in various entertaining ways. A number of Albany people drove over to attend the function.

Some men passed through Corvallis Saturday with a band of 700 head of sheep. They brought them from some point on the Columbia river and are en route to Lane county with them. It is understood they are sold and are destined for a point about 18 or 20 miles west of Eugene.

Sheriff Burnett arrived home from Salem, Saturday, having taken H. Kubi to the penitentiary. In going to Salem with his man the sheriff went from here to Albany by private conveyance Friday in time to catch the 3 p. m. north-bound train. He experienced no trouble in delivering his prisoner to the authorities at the state prison.

Next week, from Tuesday noon until 11 o'clock Thursday morning, positively no longer, Dr. Lowe, the oculo-optician, will be in Corvallis, where he can be found in the parlors of the Occidental hotel. If you want perfect glasses, fitted to your eyes, at prices consistent with such services. Don't fail to see him. Remember, positively no glasses fitted after 11 o'clock Thursday, Nov. 22.

Readers of the GAZETTE will remember our item of a few issues back, concerning the romantic marriage of Chas. Green, of Lebanon, Oregon, and Mrs. Ruth Maxham, of Hartford, Conn., which was soon to be solemnized. Mrs. Maxham arrived in Albany, November 6th, and she was joined in that city, the same evening by Mr. Green. They were married at the Revere house by Dr. M. C. Wire.

Geo. A. Houck, of Monroe, writing to the Pacific Homestead gives the following recipe for the destruction of evergreen blackberries: "I once had an overrun patch that was entirely beyond control. I fenced it out into pasture, and the goats did the rest, so I recommend goats to the inquirer. They won't kill them in one year nor possibly the second, but if the dose is repeated they will finally come out on top."

HIS BOAT WALKED ASHORE.

Some Interesting Reminiscences of Early Days. A Corvallis Gazette.

An article replete with interesting data appeared in Sunday's Oregonian under the caption, "Early Navigation on the Willamette." It recounts the history of steamboating on Sam Simpson's "lovely river" from the time the diminutive "Hoosier," built at Salem in 1851, first plied its waters, until the present day.

The year 1851 witnessed the advent of three other boats, the Washington, Multnomah and Canemah. The first of these was a side-wheel steamer, purchased in San Francisco and brought to the Upper Willamette, where, at Canemah, one lovely June morning, she was launched, to run on the Yamhill route for a short season. At the close of the season she was taken below the falls and operated there. Two years later she was restored to the upper river, and, finally, for some unrecorded reason, she was dispatched to the Umpqua, and the Willamette knew her no more.

The Multnomah was built in the East and brought out to Oregon in sections. She was put together at Canemah and launched in June, the same month and year as the Washington. She was not beautiful—at least, her portrait does not convey the idea of grace—but she possessed both power and speed, and was enthusiastically welcomed by the inhabitants of Corvallis and its outlying districts, for she was the first boat to ascend to that point, Albany having previously been considered the head of navigation on the river. However, her passenger accommodations so far exceeded her capacity as a freight carrier that it was not found profitable to operate her upon the Corvallis route, and so, at the end of the year, she was transferred to Portland and ran for 12 years upon the lower Willamette and Columbia. The Canemah, a somewhat larger and slower craft of local construction, took the place of the Multnomah in the traffic of the upper river.

The Shoalwater, which navigated the Willamette for seven years, changed her name four times. Her life was one long chapter of accidents and she ended her career as a floating sawmill. The Walamette, another steamer of the same date, was considered the most magnificent boat on the inland waters of the Northwest. She was not for some reason a success on the upper river route, and was "lined" over the falls and taken to Sacramento, in California.

In 1854 the Gazelle was built at a point on the bank of the river, opposite Oregon City, by a company organized for the purpose of founding a rival town. Fate apparently frowned upon this ambition. The first boat constructed by the company was burned before she was fairly completed; the second, the ill-fated Gazelle, was blown to atoms within 20 days after launching. This disaster involved loss of life, as well as destruction of property, for her crew, together with a score of passengers, shared her sudden fate.

The Enterprise, launched in 1855, eventually found her way northward to the Frazer river. The James Clinton, built the following year, was the first boat to ascend the Willamette as far as Eugene. She was successfully operated upon this route, giving the people of the upper valley efficient and satisfactory service until she was, at last, broken up and her machinery shipped to Coos bay, to become an integral part of a steamer being constructed at that point. The Portland, built the same year as the James Clinton, below the falls, was, when completed, taken up and run for a twelve-month, under command of Captain Jamieson. The story of the Portland's tragic end is told by those who witnessed her mad leap over the brink of the foaming cataract at Oregon City.

It was on the 17th of March, 1857. There had been an accident on the trip down the river, which resulted in an injured rudder. The damage had been temporarily repaired by means of rope lashings. At Canemah, just above the falls, the boat landed some freight and started to cross to the opposite shore. When in midstream the rope lashing parted, and the craft swung head-down the river. The current was swift and strong and her engines were powerless in its relentless sweep. As she went over the falls, her whistle sounded a wild, wailing shriek, that was echoed back from the hills beyond the river. It was the craft's dying protest against her untimely fate—a fate which was shared by her captain and one of her crew. In the steamer's safe was money to the amount of $2,000. The safe with its contents to this day, for aught man knoweth to the contrary, reposes on the bed of the Willamette. Some old streamboatmen, 35 years after the disaster, left Portland to endeavor to get the safe and its precious contents. There seemed little to contend against except the accumulation of silt and debris beneath which the safe lies buried, for the change in the face of the fall has left the basin dead water, without current or cataract. The treasure-hunters took a full and complete outfit to aid them in their work, but their attempts proved futile.

In 1860, according to the records, a genius at Corvallis concluded that steamboats were too expensive to operate, so he rigged a craft with tread mill machinery and cattle and horses for motive power. Coming down the river on her first trip, the vessel ran or rather walked ashore, at McGoo-goo's Slough, where she stayed till the motive power had devoured all the oats and hay on board. Then the skipper, undeniably a man of original ideas, was forced to sell his oxen and give up that method of transportation.

Thanksgiving Service.

The ministers of this city held a meeting last week in the study of Rev. Mark Noble and arranged for the Thanksgiving service. At this meeting it was found that it was now the turn of the Congregational church to have this honor and the hour for the service was set at 10:30 a. m. The pastor whose turn it was to deliver the sermon should be the Christian minister, consequently Rev. G. S. O. Humbert was chosen, although he was not present at the meeting.

At this time officers were chosen from the pastors for the Ministerial Association of this city for the following year. Rev. F. L. Moore, of the M. E. church, was elected president; Rev. F. A. Lark, of the M. E. Church, South, vice-president; Rev. L. M. Booser, of the United Evangelical church, secretary. The association is to meet once a month and the time of the meeting is set for the first Monday evening of the month.

To Save Her Sight.

Henry Sites, accompanied by his wife, arrived in Corvallis, Saturday, from Alesia, en route to Salem. Five weeks ago Sunday Mrs. Sites was so unfortunate as to have one of her eyes put out by the explosion of a cartridge which had fallen into the fire-place, mention of which was made at the time in the GAZETTE. Since then she has suffered constantly and the other eye was seriously effected and threatened to cause total blindness. It was quite an undertaking to being Mrs. Sites out from Alesia at this time of the year and in her condition on account of the condition of the roads. She could not stand much shaking as it would cause great suffering. The road over Alesia mountain being in a condition that it could scarcely be crossed on horseback, they came out by way of Dusty, having started Friday. It is sincerely hoped that the specialist in Salem will be able to alleviate the pain and save Mrs. Sites the affliction of total blindness.

Gorton's Minstrels.

Gorton's Minstrels were founded in the city of New Orleans 32 years ago, and it is absolutely the sole survivor of all similar enterprises of that era. In 32 years it has visited every place of interest in the whole country and is today among the leaders of minstrelsy. Enduring success must be founded upon the intrinsic value. The success of Gorton's minstrels is phenomenal. Its name is known throughout all America. It is patronized by all classes catering particularly to lady audiences. The quartette singing, musical acts, portrayal of the southern darkey in his natural health, dancing and specialties are said to be the best in the business. For the same number of instruments none can excel the Gorton band, one that plays popular and classical music in a manner that will make the musician as well as the average citizen pause and listen with admiration. The price of admission 35 cents and 50 cents, is within the reach of all. Seats on sale at Daniel's Book Store. Grand street parade and concert Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Stamped Linens, Art Ticking, Novelty Pillow Covers, Art Embroidery, Silks, etc., just received. Nolan & Callahan.

A Double Wedding.

The residence of W F Hamlin, in Linn county, two miles from Corvallis, was on last Thursday morning the scene of a pretty double wedding, in which Miss Grace Hamlin and Mr W E Smith, and Miss Clara Lovella Smith and Mr S Eugene Beal were united in marriage. At 10:30 o'clock to Mendelssohn's Wedding March, played by Miss Winnifred Beal, the bridegrooms led their brides into the tastefully decorated parlors, where the ceremony was performed in an impressive manner by Rev Geo E Henderson. After the wedding a delicious breakfast was served, to which the guests did ample justice. The table was beautifully decorated with violets and roses.

The brides were both beautifully arrayed in white organdie with satin trimmings, and each carried a bouquet of brides roses. The bridegrooms were attired in conventional black. The hall and parlors were richly ornamented with banks of fern and garland of chrysanthemums and roses.

Miss Hamlin is the lovely and accomplished daughter of Mr and Mrs W F Hamlin. Mr Smith is a prosperous farmer of Oakville. Miss Smith is the only daughter of R L Smith, of Oakville, while Mr Beal is a prosperous farmer of Benton county. In the afternoon they were driven by carriage to Albany where they took the train for Salem, where they will make a short stay. From there the wedding tour will be extended to Portland and other points of interest. They have the best wishes of their many friends for their future happiness and prosperity.

Corvallis theatre-goers will recall with pleasure the appearance of Gorton's Minstrels in this city something like ten years ago. The musical features were especially delightful. The euphonium solo "Surf" still lingers in our memory. The troupe appears here again Thursday evening next.

Geo. W. Belt, elected as superior judge of Spokane, Wash., Nov. 6th, is a native son of Oregon, having been born in Salem. He was prosecuting attorney in the famous trial of Capt. W. W. Saunders for the murder of Chas. Campbell at Albany. George Belt, of this city, is a nephew of Judge Belt.

George A Landis has traded his Newport property to a Mr. Moffit of Gold Hill for property in the latter city. Mrs. Landis left yesterday morning for Gold Hill, but will visit friends at Eddyville, Corvallis and Albany en route. The Leader joins the community in wishing our late citizens health and prosperity in their new home. Mr. Moffit and family will soon become residents of Newport.—Lincoln County Leader.

It was thought by many people of this city that the Charley Campbell who was killed November 8th in the train wreck just south of Roseburg, was "our" Charley. The gentleman killed is a Campbell who was for a time in the Yukon country. Mention may here be made of the fact that the party by the name of Ed Riddle, who had his left foot taken off at the ankle and his left arm broken between the elbow and shoulder was a fireman, and that he was a cousin to Claude and Miss Blanche Riddle who are attending the Agricultural College. It was thought at last accounts that his life would be saved.
