Dr. M. M. Davis came out from the bay and carved turkey for his family on Thanksgiving.

Rev. M. Noble was the recipient of a donation party Saturday. A number of his friends called on him and passed a pleasant evening.

A letter received from the East a few days ago, referring to Miss Maud Hoffman, states that she is playing a seven-weeks' engagement in Boston.

Rev. L. M. Boozer will preach in the United Evangelical church on Sunday at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Sabbath School and Christian Endeavor at the usual hours.

Rev. L. M. Boozer was given a donation party at his home Thursday evening. A large number of his friends were in attendance and a most enjoyable evening resulted.

Night Officer C. B. Will is again on his beat of night, after a retirement of a couple of weeks occasioned by a severe attack of cold. During his lay-off George Emrick guarded the city.

There are five poultry shows scheduled for the near future. Corvallis leads and begins her show on December 18th. Let everyone put his shoulder to the wheel and help make the show a success.

The Commercial Restaurant has changed hands and the proprietorship now rests solely in Clarence Chipman. Hermann Breyer has accepted the position of cook, and the establishment is first-class in every particular.

It is the intention of the O. R. & N. Company to maintain a thrice-a-week service between this city and Portland. The steamer Modoc is to be on the run, and she will depart from Corvallis at 6 a. m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

A letter recently received in this city from L. Y. Wilson bears the intelligence that he intends coming home some time during the winter. When he wrote he was in the Porcupine mining district and was engaged at carpenter work. Lade did not state whether or not he had struck anything good up there.

After playing with the U of O football team on Thanksgiving Day, Ray Goodrich, W. B. Scott and Sam Thurston came to Corvallis for a brief visit. They are prime favorites in this city, having been members of the O. A. C. Friday evening, they were entertained at Alpha Hall. Quite a large number of their former fellow students were in attendance. Conversation, jokes, games and refreshments made up a very pleasant evening.

The band had one auditor who who was a long distance from the scene of action during the concert last Thursday afternoon. Virgil Watters was the gentleman, and he states that he was down on the slough some four miles below Corvallis hunting ducks when the "band began to play." Mr. Watters says that he heard every number, at times so distinctly that he could recognize the theme. This speaks well for the attack and the purity of the tone in ensemble playing.

When the C. & E. train left here early last Thursday morning taking the Albany Band and excursionists home after the dance given by the cadets at the Armory, they ran into a horse and cut two of its legs off. The owner came to town the following day in search of the section boss to assist in appraising the animal. The manner of settling such matters in vogue with the company is for their section boss to choose one appraiser and the owner another and these two choose a third. In this manner much trouble is avoided. The horse killed was a very fine young animal and the owner thought it was worth $100.

NOLAN & CALLAHAN.

In an appeal from Washington county State Supt. Ackerman has decided that reading a chapter of the Bible without comment and repeating the Lord's Prayer in a public school is not sectarian, and the board of directors are authorized to make that a part of the school program and suspend pupils who refuse to participate.

A local oat famine is threatened. Farmers of this section are economizing in the consumption of this grain in anticipation of such an event. There is fear now that there will not be enough oats in the county for horse feed during the winter and for seeding next spring. Henry Dunn has been feeding his horses bran mixed with their feed, and now has a very sick animal. He believes that the trouble is due to change of diet.

The presidential succession act, approved January 19, 1888, makes the following provisions: In case of removal, death, resignation or inability of both the president and vice president, a member of the cabinet shall, in the following order, act as president until the disability is removed or a president is elected. Secretary of state, secretary of the treasury, secretary of war, attorney general, postmaster general, secretary of the navy, secretary of the interior.

Word has been received in Salem, says the Statesman, that has grown on the Dove place near Independence owned by Horst Bros., won the gold medal at the Paris exposition. The Oregon hops were placed in competition with every hop-growing country in the world and it is a source of much pride to Oregon growers that the hops grown here are the best the world produces, according to the most competent judges. This will make Oregon hops sought for from every quarter of the world more than they are at the present time, and insures for the product of the state the top price in the markets of the world.

At the residence of her father, J. A. Spangler, in this city, Miss Lulu opened "a club" for "one night only." It was an initiation of the small clubs of gentlemen of the large cities and was attended only by young ladies; fourteen in number. They attended in "disguise," and from the trouble some of them experienced in borrowing evening suits it is presumed that when they reached the club they presented a rather boyish appearance. Information regarding the affair has been greatly sought after in various directions, but little was learned. There is no doubt of their having enjoyed themselves during their club life, brief as it was. This all occurred on Thursday evening.

The late United States senator, Cushman K. Davis, whose death occurred recently, was a warm personal friend of Dr. Thompson. They were regents together of the University of Minnesota for several years, and intimately associated in the early educational and political history of Minnesota. Senator Davis was largely instrumental in securing Dr. Thompson's appointment as one of the board of examiners at the Military Academy at West Point some years ago. No eulogy can ever fully and fittingly express the nobleness of personal character and the exalted ability of this distinguished statesman and eminent jurist. His death is not only a national but an international loss. He was beloved at home, respected abroad and honored by all.

Farewell "Ti."

If six feet of earth makes us all of one size, then "Ti" is today the peer of imperial Caesar. Ti after days of suffering, experienced the cold transition from life to death last Sunday morning sometime between the hours of 3 and 9. At the former hour a visitor to his home near the Salvation Army barracks found him "resting easy," and at 9 o'clock he was found dead by one of his countrymen. During the day a collection was taken to defray funeral expenses, and yesterday at 2 o'clock he was buried with all the weird rites of Chinese custom, at Crystal Lake cemetery.

Ti came to Corvallis something over twenty years ago. How long before that he left his native heath, seems to be unknown to his most intimate acquaintances. He was young and powerful then, was not afraid of work and had the faculty of getting along. Having amassed a small competence, he visited his wife in China some eight years ago and was absent about fifteen months. He was the father of two children, but they are both dead. For some years Ti has been in failing health; and recently made a trip to Portland to consult a physician. There he learned that his ailment was cancerous consumption, and he came home to die. At the time of his demise he was about fifty years of age. Ti was a pretty decent fellow. He was always ready and willing to work, and never asked something for nothing. He had the esteem of his countrymen and the confidence of those who employed him. He probably did his duty as he saw it. That is all any of us can do.

Somewhat Excited.

A short time ago J. E. McGilvery, in the employ of the Oregon Telephone Co., was in Corvallis looking after the interests of his company. It will appear from the following, taken from the Albany Democrat, that Mr. McGilvery was the cause of considerable uneasiness to our local ferryman:

J. E. McGilvery, the well-known telephone man last Saturday crossed the ferry at Corvallis with a rig for Shedd. He had the ferryman sign the customary telephone company's receipt as a voucher, which he did without reading it. After McGilvery had gone he made up his mind that he had signed away his farm or had given his note for a fortune and had been taken in, so he rushed to Corvallis, got a livery rig and started after McGilvery. When he reached Shedd McGilvery had just left for Harrisburg. The excited ferryman telephoned to that place to have him arrested on his arrival, but matters were finally explained to the excited ferryman and he returned home, out several dollars on account of his wild goose chase.

"Uncle Josh" Coming.

"Uncle Josh Spruceby," a rollicking farm play, tinged with just enough of the earnest side of life to bring into strong relief the honest, fun-loving New England agriculturist, played to large houses all week at the Metropolitan Theater. Specialties were numerous and well done, and the acting throughout in keeping with the scenes. The strong feature of the play was the musical side. An excellent orchestra and band accompanies the show, and their work was decidedly good. Every day at noon time the streets of the city were paraded by the "Rube" band which was not only funny in its outlandish and gaudy uniforms, but was also very good indeed on account of the high grade of music furnished. "Uncle Josh" will play to good business should his all-around good entertainers play a return engagement. — Sunday Oregonian, December 2, 1900.

Clever Entertainers.

The amusement loving public of Corvallis has no cause for complaint at the quality of entertainment now being offered. The latest treat was the performance of Alba Heywood and his company, Saturday evening, for the opportunity of witnessing which, we are to thank the Jeffersonian Society of the college. Mr. Heywood is in the very first rank of entertainers of his class. As a character impersonator he has few equals. Probably the strongest of his new specialties is "Mr. Dennis Mudd," an original character sketch. Mr. Mudd is a pessimist of the genus populist. He finds fault with every thing but himself, and scorns all who get weak eyes from looking on the bright side of things.

Aside from the work of Mr. Heywood, the strongest numbers on the program were rendered by Mr. Gustav Ulrich. As a cellist Corvallis audiences have never heard his equal. His first number was stormily encored and was responded to with the intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana." His rendition of Popper's "Spinning Wheel" displayed a technique almost faultless. As a second encore he played "Asleep in the Deep" with excellent taste and expression. As much can not be said for the work of Miss Monroe with the violin. She lacks the power necessary for a truthful rendition of Debierot's Military Concerto, which she essayed. The ringing bugle calls were mere echoes of what the selection demands, and the fire and warmth of the composition were entirely lost. Miss Cole has a pleasing voice and winning manner, but she is not a prima donna.

Home on a Visit.

Mr. E. J. Garrow and sons, Joseph and Wilbur, arrived home Saturday, from McCloud, Calif., where Mr. Garrow has permanent employment as superintendent of the large sawmill at that place. Joseph and Wilbur have been employed in these mills since early summer and will return to resume their duties next spring. Mr. Garrow will leave again for McCloud about the last of January. One of the largest lumbering enterprises on the coast is located at this point. From 200,000 to 300,000 feet of lumber is shipped daily from these mills. Vast quantities of ties, etc., are supplied to the S. P. railroad company. The mills are supplied with logs brought from the forest by rail. This summer six engines were kept busy night and day hauling logs and still the mills were unable to keep up with orders. Unlike agricultural sections the revenue of McCloud does not depend on climatic conditions. She is always sure of abundant harvest. Demand for her product is all she asks. This demand depends upon the prosperity of the country at large, and the fact that the mills are pushed as they never have been before indicates unparalleled business activity throughout the land.

Ole Olson Tonight.

Judging from the large advance sale of seats, the engagement of Ben Hendricks in "Ole Olson" will surely be a big success. The story of Ole Olson is interesting, the characters strong, well drawn and natural, and each one is excellently acted. Don't fail to see this most excellent attraction. A dozen or more new specialties will be introduced and everything refined and up-to-date. Prices 35c, 50c and 75c.

Thanksgiving Day.

The union Thanksgiving services were held in the Congregational church at 10:30 a. m. on that day and were largely attended. All of the pastors of the city were present to assist. Rev. Lark offered the prayer and Rev. Humbert delivered the sermon. His text was "Praise ye the Lord, for He is good; for His mercy endureth forever." It was an able address and at its close "America" was sung and Rev. Boozer pronounced the benediction.

In the afternoon a large number of people gathered on Main street to listen to the concert given by the Corvallis Band. And from words of praise bestowed on the boys, it is safe to say that they were both surprised and delighted with the selections given and the style of their rendition.

As a matter of history it will be interesting to learn that the observation of Thanksgiving was instituted in Oregon within 11 months after the admission of the state into the union, or almost 41 years ago. The day set apart was Thursday, December 29. The proclamation was issued by John Whitaker, the first governor of the state, at the request of 76 pioneer women of Oregon City. A copy of the proclamation, the briefest ever issued by an Oregon governor, is now in the possession of George H. Himes, secretary of the Oregon Historical Society. It reads as follows:

"Be it known, that in conformity with the wishes of many citizens of Oregon, I do appoint and set apart Thursday, the 29th day of December, 1859, as a day to be kept for public thanksgiving and to be observed throughout the state in such a manner as the good citizens of thereof may deem most appropriate. Given under my hand, at Eugene City, this 6th day of December, 1859. JOHN WHITAKER, "Governor."

In the performance of "Ole Olson" tonight, we are promised one of the most enjoyable entertainments which will visit this city this season. Mr. Hendricks has a national reputation as a comedian and "Ole" is his best role.

U. B. Vogle, writing to the GAZETTE from La Grande, Oregon, says that he will be in Corvallis in a few days. La Grande is a busy place and he is doing well there, but the weather is too cold to suit him. It is now 10 deg. below zero, with indications of being 20 below in a few days.

The much-talked-of football game between M. A. C. and U. O., at Portland Thanksgiving resulted in a score of 0 to 0. However, the Portland Telegram says: "Oregon should have won the game, and it was bad luck that held her down, although the Multnomah athletes played a steady game. They were under the man in the fight from start to finish, and while Oregon came near scoring twice, Multnomah did well to keep the ball away from her own goal." In her game with U. W. at Eugene, Saturday, U. O. completely outclassed the visitors, winning by a score of 43 to 0.
