Charley Osborne arrived on the boat Tuesday night, from Portland, and returned by train Wednesday. He says he does not intend making any more trips to the Yukon. Carns, the Alsea freighter, was in town, Wednesday. He came over the Alsea mountain with a wagon, and spoke as though he did not think the roads had improved much since his last trip to Corvallis. If you buy ten dollars worth of dry goods to get ten cents worth of premiums you're likely to pay too much for your premiums and much too much for your dry goods. F. L. Miller's goods don't need "something for nothing" schemes to sell them. Parties wishing first-class photographic work, copying, enlarging, color work, photo buttons, pins, etc., should call on or write to B. R. Thompson. He makes a specialty of view work. Residence near the Catholic cemetery, west of Corvallis. Prof. E. R. Lake, of this city, delivered a very able address at Woodburn, last Saturday, before the Oregon Hop Growers' Association. He chose to discuss, "Hop-growing in Germany," and from space devoted by various papers to the lecture it can be said to have been both interesting and instructive. As a result of the football game at the O. A. C. last Saturday, the faculty have evidently imbibed the spirit of the sport for they have challenged the victors of the game of last week. If the weather permits the faculty will attempt to "skunk" the students a week from tomorrow. This will likely give the boys something to think about. The citizens of Philomath enjoyed one of the most extertaining concerts of the season last Friday evening. It was given by Prof. W. A. Ginn's vocal class in the College of Philomath's rooms and was a demonstration of what can be accomplished in a term of twelve lessons under the professor's careful instruction. A large, appreciative audience listened attentively for nearly two hours to the various selections of a sacred and sentimental character, which consisted of solos, duets, trios, quartets, sextets and choruses. Among the numbers was "Our Heroes Welcome Home," and "Hail to the Second Oregon." Prof. Ginn will begin another term of twelve lessons in vocal and instrumental music, Monday, January 21. The interest manifested in the recital shows that Philomath contains many people who possess music talent and appreciate good music.

Joseph Yates informs us that his son, Walter, sold a span of horses to William Frazier, of Portland, Saturday for $300. They were seven years old and weighed 1,400. SPECIAL COLLEGE FUND.

Bill introduced by Representative Nichols for Purpose of Creating Same. A bill for an act entitled "An act to make an appropriation for the support and benefit of the State Agricultural College, and to levy an annual tax to provide a permanent fund therefor and appropriate the same, and to repeal an act of the legislative assembly of the state of Oregon, entitled 'An act to be entitled an act for the support of the State Agricultural College' and approved October 20, 1882; and to repeal section 2 of an act of the legislative assembly of the state of Oregon, entitled 'An act to appropriate moneys for the purchase of land and for the extension, development and annual maintenance of the State Agricultural College, and also for the payment of legal expenses incurred by the Board of Regents of the State Agricultural College in the current litigation by nominees of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South,' approved February 18, 1899," has been introduced in the house by Representative Nichols, of this county, and was read for the first time January 16, 1901. The object of this bill is to secure an appropriation of $20,000 out of the general fund in the state treasury not otherwise appropriated, for repairs, buildings, and improvements necessary and convenient for the State Agricultural College. It also provides that in computing the amount of revenue necessary for state purposes, the governor, secretary of state, and state treasurer, shall, in each year, also compute the sum of $25,000 for the support and benefit of the State Agricultural College, which shall be levied and collected in the same manner as other taxes for state purposes, and the fund arising therefrom shall be kept separate from other funds, and shall be known as the Agricultural College fund. This fund shall be drawn quarterly by the Board of Regents, and may be used for the purposes of paying the current expenses of the college, salaries of professors and instructors, and wages of employes; of making additions to the library and apparatus, for buildings, improvements, and repairs, and for the purchase of additional land needed for the use of the college. The act of October 20, 1882, which is still in force, appropriated out of the general fund of the treasury the sum of $2,500 annually, for the support of the college. This appropriation has not been drawn since 1893, and new aggregates the sum of $17,500. The act approved February 18, 1899, which is also in force, appropriated the sum of $5,000 annually in aid of current expenses of the college, and payment of professors and instructors. This appropriation was not drawn during the years from 1894 to 1897, inclusive of both years, and aggregates $20,000 now due the college. The purpose of Mr. Nichols' bill is to repeal the acts named—it being expressly understood that the repeal shall not affect the appropriation of $10,000 made at the present session, under and by virtue of the provisions of section 2 of the act of February 18, 1899—and in lieu of the annual appropriations, to provide a special fund for the support of the college as outlined above. Kidnapped His Chickens. While hunting below town this week, Sheriff Burnett ran upon a flock of chickens at an isolated spot in the woods. A hay rack and some outbuildings hanging upon the brush nearby aroused the suspicion that this property and fowls had been purloined by the recent flood from some farmer up the creek. This belief was strengthened when after crossing a hundred yards of water to a little island, an old dominick hen welcomed him with a cheerful cackle. On the road home, the sheriff met Mr. St. German, whose anxious countenance betokened bereavement. Mr. Burnett rightly surmised that his loss was a dozen hens and a hayrack. Mr. St. German stated that his chickens were roosting on the rack when the flood came and carried them away. The sheriff directed him to the spot in the woods some two miles distant, and it is probable that by this writing the wanderers are again in the fold. Albert J. Metzger is an experienced watchmaker and jeweler. His place of business is three doors north of the postoffice.

Arrived From England.

Last Monday two coops containing twelve pairs of English partridges arrived in Albany, from England. At different times mention has been made in the GAZETTE regarding the movements on foot for introducing these delightful little game birds into this state. The birds have been liberated on the farms of the Line brothers, near Knox Butte, Linn county. It is the desire of all true sportsmen that these partridges be afforded the utmost protection, both in and out of season. A writer in the Oregonian, who has hunted these birds in their native land, gives the following account of them and their habits: They are a fine game bird, and lie well for a dog. They do not run from a dog's point, but will get up at times within a foot of the dog's nose. But with a broken wing they are swift on foot. Their habits are like those of the Bob White quail. A whole covey roosts in a bunch in the middle of a stubble after the grain is cut, or in a pasture where there is plenty of dead grass for cover. They nest in dead grass, tuold fence rows, and are very close sitters. They do not visit timber except the outer edge of it. They like a wide range of cultivated fields, and travel from fence rows, never going far away from the place they were hatched. If flushed they will fly across the field to the next fence. In the shooting season, when a covey is started, they will break and alight in separate places and stay just where they drop, so they give no scent to trail them, and it requires a fine nose to catch the scent when within three feet of the bird. Additional Local Attorney B. F. Jones, of Toledo, and Henry Nice, of Waldport, were homeward bound passengers from Salem on Wednesday's C. & E. passenger. T. J. Buford, agent at the Siletz Indian Reservation, has been in Corvallis during the week, attending some business and renewing his acquaintance with the town and its citizens. Mrs. J. H. Albright had the misfortune, last Tuesday to fall down the steps leading from the porch of her home in this city. Aside from a few bruises, she seemed at the time to have suffered no injury. Her condition grew serious, however, and a physician was called Wednesday evening. An examination showed that she had sustained the fracture of several ribs. The attending physician says she will speedily recover. The death of Queen Victoria brings to light the fact that Mrs. Zella Dodele, who is now living at Wells, was at one time a schoolmate of the late queen. Mrs. Dodele was the daughter of a French gentleman by the name of Maximilian-Joseph Guyot, and, although she is 79 years old, can distinctly remember many incidents connected with her early school days when she enjoyed the association of a royal playmate. Two exciting athletic contests are scheduled to take place at the college armory tomorrow evening. The first event, which will begin at 7:30, will be a game of baseball between the commissioned and non-commissioned officers. Following this a game of basket ball will occur, the teams being made up of students. An admission fee of 15 cents will be charged. All who feel an interest in, or wish to encourage college sports, should not fail to attend. James A. Cauthorn Dead. James A. Cauthorn, a resident of this city since the early sixties and a highly esteemed citizen, died at his home in this city yesterday morning at seven o'clock. Mr. Cauthorn had been a sufferer from rheumatism and other ailments for several years. A few months ago he returned home from Portland, where had spent some time under the care of physicians. While he experienced some relief from treatment received there, it was known that he had not long to live. Last week his condition became so critical that relatives were summoned to his bedside. Besides his wife, daughter, Mrs. W. F. Keady, and son, Paul, four brothers survive him. Dr. Frank Cauthorn is now a resident of Tucson, Arizona; Ben resides at Jefferson, Mo.; Fisk, at Gervais, Or., and William, in Benton county. Another brother, the late Senator Thos. E. Cauthorn, died several years ago. Funeral services will be held at the M. E. Church, South, this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment will occur at the Odd Fellows' cemetery. EARLY INCIDENTS RECALLED.

Robert Glaze, Well Known Here, Stays His Partner in San Francisco. The killing of William Trewella by Robert E. Glaze in San Francisco, recently, has recalled incidents which happened in this and Polk county 25 or 30 years ago in which Glaze and his brother, Til, were prominent actors. Together with these brothers, Sheriff Burnett attended school at Dallas in the early seventies. Some years later Til Glaze entered the saloon business at Dallas. One night a free-for-all shooting and cutting scrape was indulged in at his place of business and when the smoke cleared away, Johnny Whitley, one of the participants was lying cold in death, the victim of a gunshot wound. While it was believed that Glaze or his partner had committed the deed, it was never proved on either of them. The father of Whitley swore that he would kill Glaze, and he came to Dallas one day for that purpose. Til anticipated him, however, and as a result of the dual between them the funeral of the elder Whitley was held a few days after. Til Glaze finally opened a saloon in Prineville, where he was killed four or five years ago in a shooting scrape. Young Whitley was known as a desperate character. While driving a band of cattle on the road near the place where J. O. Wilson now resides, he was met by James Martyn, who now lives at Irish Bend. Mr. Martyn and his wife and first babe, were in a buggy behind a span of fiery horses. The animals became frightened and started to run through Whitley's band of cattle. Whitley rode up alongside of the buggy and asked Mr. Martyn what he meant by trying to stampede his cattle. While Mr. Martyn had his hands full in attempting to control his team, he tried to explain to Whitley, but the latter began slashing Mr. Martyn over the face with his cattle whip. This so enraged Uncle Jimmy that he asked for a gun at the first farm house intending to avenge himself, but fortunately was unable to secure one. Robert Glaze was for some years a clerk in the Baldwin Hotel in San Francisco, till it burned down, when he went to Honolulu, where he ran a hotel. About 10 months ago he and Trewella took possession of the Windsor Hotel on Fifth and Market streets and appeared to be friendly. According to the story of an employe, who unknown to Glaze was an eyewitness of the murder, Glaze laid in wait for Trewella in the kitchen of the hotel, and as he approached riddled him with bullets. Glaze makes the excuse that he shot in self-defense, as Trewella made a motion as if to shoot him, and also says that Trewella had mistreated Glaze's wife. But from the story published in the San Francisco papers it looks like a deliberate and inexcusable murder. Vote for Senator.
