Three Questions.

Before purchasing a piano or organ there are a few questions it is well to consider. First: Is the instrument made to use or simply to sell? Second: Is the the tone, action and finish first class? Third: Is the price reasonable? Cheap instruments are expensive at any price. Why? Because they never give satisfaction, being constructed of the cheapest material hastily thrown together. To secure the value of your money there is one certain way. Buy an instrument which has not only an established reputation for years, but which has kept up with every improvement of medern times. If you then would like such an instrument with a tone, action and fin-ish unsurpassed, I have them, and can furnish you any at the lowest price. Call around. Mordauxt Goodnough.
