We have an elegant line of up-to-date wall paper, in all designs and at all prices. We have bought it to sell. It's at the Paint Store, C. A. Barnhart, proprietor.

Miss Elsie Gannfield and her sister, Miss Kathleen, were expected to arrive in this city yesterday from a visit of several days at their home in Lafayette. Both of the young ladies are attending college.

The union temperance meeting which was held in the United Evangelical church last Sunday was largely attended. Rev. P. A. Moses was chairman of the meeting and Rev. G. S. O. Humbert gave quite an interesting sermon on temperance.

S. Chipman is again bedfast as the result of stirring about too soon. Last Friday a cousin of Mr. Chipman arrived from Astoria for a brief visit, and our townsman felt so well and strong that he undertook to show his relative over the city and overtaxed himself.

Neil Newhouse arrived home, Friday, from an absence of some duration at Waterville, Douglas county, Washington. While he was up there his father died and Neil was detained there in order to assist in settling up his father's estate. Mr. Newhouse may remove his family up there.

Last Friday George B. Keas is in charge of the splendid printing plant at the O. A. C. commenced work on the college catalogue for the next school year. There will be about 150 pages in the catalogue this year and coming from Mr. Keas's hands, it will present a most attractive appearance.

F. A. Alexander, a retired merchant of North Yakima, Wash., is in the city with his family, visiting with C. E. McIlwain. Mr. Alexander is looking for a temporary home in the city and will probably locate here permanently.—Salem Statesman. Mr. Alexander was a resident in this city for several years and was proprietor of the Racket Store.

A short time ago H. A. Scoggins returned to Corvallis after passing a number of months in Eastern Oregon. After a brief visit here he went to Brownsville, where he spent a couple of weeks. He came over to this city again Saturday and has accepted a position with the law firm of Yates, Yates & Gibson. Mr. Scoggins began his duties yesterday. He is a young man and is highly esteemed by his acquaintances in this city.

There are rumors of a railroad leading from Brownsville up the Calapooia valley to Crawfordville and beyond, probably to tap the immense timber country east of Brownsville. There are also rumors of a railroad from Corvallis to this city. It is said that men have already been in the field at Corvallis taking soundings of the Willamette river for the purpose of locating a suitable place to bridge the river.—Brownsville Times.

F. L. Miller does not pay 15c per dozen for eggs because some other merchant forces him to do so, as would be the case were there some eggs retailed out at 12c, as the Times erroneously stated last week. F. L. Miller has never retailed one egg at less than 15c per dozen this year, nor paid less than this price. He has not been taking in several hundred dozen per day for the past two months to "buck" any other merchant, but to give the producer what justly belongs to him. Eggs are worth their face value to him and he doesn't have to "hunc" anyone out of the other 2c to do business. Who's "the farmers' friend?"

W. A. Sanders, THE wat-hmaker. Hens have already began laying Easter Eggs.

Mrs. T. D. Campbell, of Independence, visited relatives in this city during the week past.

C. A. BARNHART.

Miss Kate Ketchum, of Independence, arrived in Corvallis Friday and returned home yesterday.

While in the city she was the guest of Miss Juanita Rosendorf.

M. K. Watkins, who conducted the carriage factory here for some time past, closed out his business and left for his home at Philomath.—Independence West Side.

A lady in this city who takes an interest in the chicken business relates that she has a hen which crows like a rooster. The lady does not view her "roosterly" hen with favor.

T. H. Barnhart opened a shop last week for carriage painting and that class of work. The shop is located on south Main street, opposite the establishment of R. M. Wade & Co.

B. E. Robertson, who has been operating a logging camp a few miles above Corvallis, for several months past, moved his camp Thursday, to Gesheh. This is a short distance from Eugene in Lane county.

Mrs. C. A. Spaulding, the hair-dresser, and Mrs. J. A. Sellwood, who gave cabinet baths, went to Albany, Friday, to remain three or four weeks. At the expiration of this time it is their intention to return to Corvallis.

A. C. Miller was in from Kings Valley Saturday, and transacted some business. Mr. Miller speaks highly of the crop prospects in his section this year, and states that grain looks better at present than it has for many seasons.

Chief of Police Flett had a man employed, Saturday, cleaning up the debris on Main street. This is a good move and there is an excellent opportunity in this city for considerable work along this line, of a private as well as public nature.

The body of Mrs. Al Taylor, of Lincoln county, who was drowned in Pool Slough on the evening of February 24th, was found floating in the slough March 23rd. Mr. Taylor, husband of the drowned woman, accompanied by his little daughter, discovered the remains.

A Monroe correspondent of the Junction City Times writes: The Dusty school was closed again Thursday for an indefinite period due to a fresh outbreak of diphtheria. Mrs. James Minton is the latest victim. A message from the infected town states there are five children in the family, and that all precaution is being taken to prevent the spread of the disease. This is the second siege of this dread scourge the town of Dusty has been subjected to during this year.

Last Saturday the Woodmen of the World took a lease of the building belonging to Miss Pauline Kline and now occupied by Allen & Woodward. Workmen began today to convert the upper story into a lodge room, by removing partitions and making other alterations. A two-story corrugated iron addition, 12x25 feet, is to be added to the rear of the building. The lower floor will be occupied by the drug store, while the upper part will be used as properly rooms. The lodge takes possession May 1st. The lease was made for seven years.

The Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. societies of the O. A. C. held a reception in the Armory last Friday evening. Dean Berchfield made a very pleasing address, after which Miss Maud Heever sang a delightful solo. John Stalker rendered a violin solo and encore and the Philadelphia Quartet sang some excellent numbers. Miss Hattie Heever acted as pianist during the evening. Games and conversation were among the features of the evening. Delicious refreshments were served. The Armory was decorated in a most attractive manner on this occasion and everything passed off in a highly satisfactory manner.

A resolution was adopted by the Oregon senate, January 24, 1901, urging the department at Washington to recognize Captain C. E. Clark, who was in command of the famous battleship that was named in honor of this state and did such excellent service in the war between this country and Spain. The house of representatives of Oregon concurred in this resolution January 25, 1901. On February 11, 1901, the president nominated Captain Clark for advancement in his grade six numbers, for eminent and conspicuous conduct in battle. The senate of the United States confirmed the nomination February 28, 1901.

The open season for trout fishing began yesterday.

Mrs. Mary Alphin is seriously ill at her home in this city.

The telephone company has rented the room now occupied by Miller's barber shop on Main street and will move into these quarters May 1st.

Miss May Smith, niece of Mr. D. M. Smith, of this city, who has been attending the Agricultural College, left yesterday for her home in Kansas.

Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Miner wish to tender their heartfelt thanks to all friends who so kindly assisted during the illness and following the death of their beloved daughter, Christie.

A. F. Hershner, now a Hood River business man, is in Corvallis on a week's visit to his family. He returns to Hood River, Thursday. Mr. Hershner is prospering and reports business lively in that section.

H. L. Walden, formerly with the C. & E. R. Co. in this city, is one of the incorporators of the Humboldt Railroad Co., recently incorporated at Humboldt, Calif. It is proposed to run the road to Crescent City, making the main line 135 miles long and 92 miles of branches, making 227 miles of road in all.

The other day a gentleman of this city related his experience in the egg business many years ago. It was quite brief, but very thrilling. He stated that when he was a boy he engaged in a wrestle with another youth in a grocery store one day. The narrator was thrown and fell backwards into a tub of eggs. By a system of mathematics not in vogue today, it was estimated that exactly seventy-two eggs were broken. While he could not see the "seat of his trousers," he had no reason to doubt the result of the calculation, so he paid the bill and passed down the alley for home, feeling that his disguise was very imperfect, and for once in his life he would sooner face the world than turn his back on it.

Our contemporary gives its readers to understand that the merchants of this city have carried their competition so far that they are willing to sell them for. In other words, that they are paying 24 cents per dozen more than they are selling for. A prominent merchant informs us that as far as he is concerned he is not losing any money on eggs and that he has a market for eggs that makes it profitable for him to pay the present price. We are inclined to think that all the business men of the city are wide awake enough to make Corvallis a market second to none, and it is but reasonable to suppose that when they are doing everything in their power to get eggs at the present prices that they are not doing it to lose money.

W. H. Franklin, of the foundry, went out to Greasy, Thursday, to make arrangements for setting up the machinery for the sawmill that is to be operated on what is known as the John Hyde place. This is to be the mill of Flinn, Flinn & Ewing, who recently placed an order for machinery with Russell & Co., of Portland. The machinery arrived at Philomath on Thursday's train and was unloaded just beyond the town. About the last of the week Mr. Franklin will begin lining up the machinery and it is thought that in from two to three weeks from this date the proprietor can begin sawing. The capacity will be about 25,000 feet per day, with 80-horse power engines. The frame of the mill is all that will be put up at present as it is the intention of the managers to saw their own lumber for the completion of the mill.

The Armory management would confer a favor on the public by maintaining order during the performance. During the first act the noise is so great that it is almost impossible to hear a word from the players, and the people who are on the stage deserve more courteous treatment from the public, and the people who patronize the show also should be protected. A few boisterous boys, and some who are older, are entirely unmindful of their actions. A good calling down would make things more agreeable.—Herald. Yes, verily, in Corvallis it is different. Of course we have an opera house, and are more metropolitan than Albany, but then there is no reason why theatrical companies who occasionally visit that place should not receive courteous treatment. Special Officer J. B. Irvine preserver perfect order during entertainments given in the Opera House in this city, and to him is due much credit for the pleasure of these performances.

For Sale. Fresh cows for sale, 5 miles southeast Philomath. O. A. BARNHART.

Wood Chopping. Parties wishing to cut cord wood may find employment by calling upon J. F. Aldrich, residing near the Catholic cemetery on the foothill west of Corvallis.

A FRIEND'S TRIBUTE.

George A. Waggoner Writes from Alaska in Memory of Judge John Burnett.

TO THE EDITOR:—Occasionally I receive a copy of the familiar old GAZETTE and it is always a welcome visitor, but one came today with such saddening words that I have no heart to read the rest of the paper. I refer to the death of Judge Burnett. Only a few days ago, as I was about to return to Alaska, I called on him to say goodbye. While I was shaking his hand on leaving, he asked me to write him on my arrival at White Pass. This I did, and realizing that we might not meet again, touched subjects not often freely spoken of between friends. Some hesitancy, (which appears so foolish now), caused me to delay mailing his letter, and now it is too late. It lies before me as I write. In it are words of respect and admiration for him which were intended for his eye alone, and unspokenly sad is the thought that the kind and sympathetic heart these words might have thrilled with pleasure, is stilled forever.

Judge Burnett was no ordinary man. Even among the western pioneers who have labored to solve the problems of life untrammelled by useless conventionalities he was a pioneer in thought and action. In some respects he was a peculiar man. With commanding talents he lived and died in his almost rural home and sought no recognition beyond the thinly settled West. He prospered, but it was by hard work and economy. He was no advocate for Shylock. He would not demand the pound of flesh. He was a poor collector and but an indifferent prosecutor. For extreme penalties he could not plead. His reputation as a great criminal lawyer, which stands among the brightest in Oregon, was won in the defense. He brought to the aid of the weak the strength and courage of a lion. For erring and sorrowing he had the tears of a woman. And yet, all this is recognized more fully after he has gone. Oh, generous impulse! Words of kindness when felt and spoken too late, what sorrowful memories must linger about you.

It is the fate of such a one as has just been laid to rest in the quiet cemetery at Corvallis to be most fully understood and loved years after he has gone and his dust has mingled with the clay.

My letter. How I regret that it did not reach him. In it were flowers sprung from seeds sown by him throughout his field of action, gathered with the thought to strew them in his path ere his evening walk was ended. They are useless now, and may only be thrown to the winds. Perhaps some of them may be borne to fall upon his tomb. G. A. WAGGONER.

White Pass, Alaska, March 18, 1901.

A Successful Meeting.

Corvallis Grange No. 243 held an open session last Saturday afternoon, which was well attended by the farmers of Benton county and members of the faculty of the Agricultural College. The meeting was in fact a farmers' institute, such as has been held in many parts of the state the past winter under the auspices of the station staff of the Agricultural College, except that it was only a one session affair. Prof. A. B. Cordley was the first speaker on the program. Taking up the topic of Wheat Pests, he said: "It is true there were three insect pests which did more or less damage to the wheat crop last year but they were by no means responsible for the almost general failure of the wheat crop in the Willamette Valley. It is very doubtful if the entire damage from this source amounted to as much as 20 per cent of the loss. The Hessian fly, that greatest of all wheat pests, is capable of doing all the damage that was done last year, but it did not do it. The ravages of this insect were confined to the lower portion of the Willamette Valley, mainly below Hillsboro, and down the Columbia. The first discovery of this insect in Oregon occurred at Scappoose in 1896, since which time it has been gradually spreading, and it is probable that it will be only a question of time until this whole valley is infested. The eggs are deposited in the fall on the young wheat plants where they hatch and the larva crowd themselves down between the stalk and leaf of the plant where they absorb nourishment, and come forth in the spring as adults, which deposit eggs above the first joint where they hatch in the same manner as in the fall. The stem becomes weakened and finally breaks over. In badly infested fields in the Eastern states go to 95 per cent of the crop has been thus affected. Wheat growers in the Eastern states have found that by sowing later in the season than usual the ravages of this insect can be largely prevented. The proper time for this locality has not yet been determined, but we can sow much later than most wheat growing regions, hence, there should be little difficulty in overcoming the Hessian fly should it become very abundant.

The work of the joint worm was much more general than that of the Hessian fly, but its damage was not very considerable. Should the work of this pest become a very serious matter, it can be controlled by burning the straw and the stubble.

The third pest is the wheat aphid, but it was not so abundant last year as in former years. These three pests could not have done more than 15 to 20 per cent of the damage, hence last year's failure must be traced to other causes than the insect pests.

Dr. Jas. Withycombe took up the subject of Rotation of Crops, in his usual energetic and comprehensive style. After a lively discussion of some phases of this important topic, Prof. F. L. Keat discussed Dairy Problems. The meeting was enlivened by highly appreciated musical selections by Miss Chamberlin and Mrs. L. Wilson.

May Start Carriage Factory.

Messrs. J. R. Martin and S. W. Dorsey, of Des Moines, Iowa, have been in Corvallis since Thursday last inspecting the carriage factory and securing information with a view to operating the plant. The gentlemen are not boomers, but quiet, unassuming business men, with years of experience in lumber and manufacturing enterprises. They were pleased to state that nothing had been misrepresented to them regarding the social or business conditions here. In fact, they were agreeably surprised at the outlook.

They wish it understood, should they determine to locate here, that manufacturing will not begin on a colossal scale. Just such help will be employed, and just such an output will be produced as the demand will justify. It is their intention to be conservative and establish a permanent business.

In the nature of things considerable time must elapse before much can be accomplished. An important item in bringing these gentlemen to Oregon was the value of Oregon oak for manufacturing purposes. Whether or not Corvallis is the center of the oak producing country of this valley will have much to do in determining the location of the factory. Two years must elapse before the oak is seasoned sufficiently to use in making wagons. Any material of this nature used in the next two years would necessarily have to be brought from the East.

Our spring stock of men's boys' and children's clothing, shoes and furnishing goods have arrived.

Before purchasing a piano or organ there are a few questions it is well to consider. First: Is the instrument made to use or simply to sell? Second: Is the tone, action and finish first class? Third: Is the price reasonable? Cheap instruments are expensive at any price. Why? Because they never give satisfaction, being constructed of the cheapest material hastily thrown together. To secure the value of your money there is one certain way. Buy an instrument which has not only an established reputation for years, but which has kept up with every improvement of modern times. If you then would like such an instrument with a tone, action and finish unsurpassed, I have them, and can furnish you any at the lowest price. Call around. MORDECAI GOONBOUGH.
