

AN UNWRITTEN LAW.

It is fortunate for the country that the unwritten law, "No president shall have a third term," is so firmly fixed in the purposes of the people that it has all the force and sanctity of a constitutional provision.

That it is probable Washington declined to seek a third term because he feared he might fail of re-election is of little consequence. We know that personal and party rancor bitterly assailed him during the last two years of his second term and heaped abuse and calumny upon him in such measure as has fallen to the lot of but one or two of his successors.

The sentiment that no president should receive a greater number of terms than Washington served grew apace until not even the immense popularity of General Grant was sufficient to overcome it. It is almost certain had he been nominated by the convention he would have been defeated at the polls.

We heard some suggestions of a third term for Cleveland, but if he or any of his friends had such ambition this unwritten law interposed an impassable barrier. President McKinley shows commendable sagacity in declining to be put forward for another term. Even if he were ambitious for a third term, which we do not believe; even if he might think the unwritten law might be set aside he is astute enough to see that he must yet face several unsolved problems which, however they may be solved, will more likely diminish than increase his popularity.

Had Lincoln lived and the war been protracted beyond his second term we may easily believe he would have been given a third term. Every sentiment was thrust aside, the constitution itself was subordinated to the supreme purpose of the loyal people to save the Union. They believed when this was accomplished and the war ended Lincoln would render up to them the constitution unimpaired. The exigency did not occur, but it is beyond doubt Lincoln has been the only president—and only under these conditions—to whom the people would have accorded a third term.

Washington, Jackson, Lincoln, Grant, these have been the great popular presidents. None of them received a third term. The "fool friends" of General Grant ineffectually thrust him forward for a third term. It is not at all probable the country will ever again have a president so popular as any one of these. It is just as improbable that any future president will be given a third term.

A change in the constitution extending the president's term to six years and rendering him ineligible of re-election would effectively shut off all third term palavers. This, and the direct election of U. S. senators by the people would go a long way toward divesting our politics of many undesirable features. Until we have this change, however, we will continue to enforce the unwritten law with due notice to all whom it may concern.

Lodged in Jail.

Some two or three weeks ago a party giving the name of Charles Rose called on Walter Smith, near Booneville, south of Corvallis a few miles and asked for work. Walt set him at the task of chopping wood. After half a day he had only succeeded in chopping a few sticks, so his employer concluded he didn't want any more cut at that time and let Mr. Rose go.

Rose found employment with Mr. G. Harding north of Corvallis. At this time Mr. Harding was also employing Hermann Urno. Rose and Urno roomed together and the former found out that Urno had quite a little money tied up in a tobacco sack.

Mr. Harding was going to let Rose go Saturday, having no more use for him. Early Saturday morning Mr. Urno missed his money and told Mr. Harding about his loss. The latter advised him to say nothing about the matter. Sheriff Burnett, Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Bryson and Chief Alexander were quietly informed of the affair. Mr. Harding came to town Saturday morning accompanied by both Urno and Rose. Officers watched Rose and kept track of his various transactions. He visited several general stores, and G. Hodes' gun store and negotiated deals at several of them. He had more money than he was paid by Mr. Harding, and when he went to work for the latter he had claimed to have been broke. Sheriff Burnett saw fit to arrest him and he was taken before E. R. Bryson. Later on he had a preliminary examination before Justice Holgate. It was found that the money he had on his person and the money he was known to have spent during the day, together with what he had been paid for his labor would just about account for Mr. Urno's lost money. Besides, he had the tobacco sack, in which Mr. Urno had kept his money in his possession. Moreover, it developed that he had retired Friday night some time later than his roommate. In accounting for this Mr. Rose stated that he was addicted to the habit of hunting skunks and that he had been out late in order to indulge himself in his favorite pastime. Justice Holgate saw fit to bind him over in the sum of $250 to await the action of the circuit court. In default of bail he is now a county boarder.

Annual Institute.

The annual teachers' institute of Benton county will convene in this city June 19th, for a three days' session. The various exercises will be held in the public school building.

Among the able instructors who will take part in these exercises are State Superintendent Ackerman, Prof. H. B. Buchanan, Supt. R. F. Robinson and Prof. W. G. Fisher. Many others will assist in making the institute one of interest and instruction. The instructors are men of reputation and recognized ability in their profession. They will, beyond the shadow of a doubt, give you something to take away with you, those of you who are teachers, which will better prepare you for your work in the school room. Those who are not teachers will be given something new to think about. This might be said to apply to people in every walk of life in this day and age. We are living in a new age, which requires up-to-date, progressive and wide-awake people, be they teachers or what they may.

The program will contain much that will be beneficial to people who are not teachers, so it is best for all to attend who can and adopt such methods as will be set forth as will best suit their special needs. To reduce the expense of the institute no evening sessions will be held at this annual. The new school law provides that every school district that contracts with a teacher who holds a certificate, properly signed, at the last annual teachers' institute, for a period of 16 hours, will receive in addition to the $50 an additional sum of $5 in October. This amount will be disbursed by the county superintendent. It will be wise for every teacher who expects to teach during the coming fall or winter to secure such certificate. If a teacher does not hold such certificate, his application for a school will stand but little chance by the side of an application that is accompanied by one of these certificates. The law makes no provision for the allowance of excesses by the county superintendent. The law also provides that no school district in the county in which the institute is being held shall have their school running during said institute. Every teacher is entitled to three days' wages for attending the institute.

It is sincerely hoped that many teachers will attend and that on this occasion the people of this city will show their interest and appreciation of the importance of the event and turn out in large numbers. The Occidental hotel will grant a special rate to all teachers who remain there through the entire three days.

Special Meeting.

A special meeting of the Corvallis Fire Department is called for Friday evening, June 21st, at 7 o'clock. All members and persons interested are requested to be present, by order of the board of fire delegates. It is the purpose to devise means at this meeting by which it will be possible to secure more water hydrants, more hose and more men. This is a move in the right direction and everyone should assist in encouraging the department.

Question Answered

Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mother and grandmothers never thought of using anything else for indigestion or biliousness. Doctors were scarce and they seldom heard of appendicitis, nervous prostration or heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to cleanse out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Get Green's Prize Almanac.—Graham & Wells.

People only know what we know about Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, it would be used in nearly every household, as there are few people who do not suffer from a feeling of fullness after eating, belching, flatulence, sour stomach, or water brash, caused by indigestion or dyspepsia. A preparation such as Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, which, with no aid from the stomach, will digest your food, certainly can't help but do you good.—Graham & Wells.
