TWO GOSPELS.

We are an energetic, active, restless people who believe in and exemplify the gospel of work. We possess boundless and innumerable natural resources and in the work of developing these we have made our country a scene of such restless activity as is found nowhere else in the world. We have put forth so much vim and vigor and achieved so many victories through work that it has become our gospel—yea, rather our divinity at whose shrine the whole nation worships. It is our national characteristic and we are proud of it. Why not? It is the agency which, within a hundred years, has borne us along almost every line of human endeavor to the fore-front of nations. We transform our crude materials into the highest buildings, speediest ships, largest and most effective guns, most accurate timepieces, lightest and most desirable bicycles, finest and best-toned musical instruments, most powerful locomotives, must useful agricultural implements, and a bewildering multitude of things besides, such as no other people have even contemplated doing.

Work! Achieve! Quickly! These are our magic wands. Quickly! We have have utilized the subtile forces of nature and thrown short bridges over time and space. "Capture or destroy the Spanish fleet." Presto! it is annihilated.

Work has not only made us quick of thought and action, but also wonderfully and intelligently self-reliant. "Do not hamper me with orders; I do not fear the whole Spanish fleet." This expresses the true American spirit of self-reliance.

We mean no irreverence when we say had it been possible to have given us the work of Creation on a six days contract we would have rushed it through in five and earned a bonus by the superior excellence of our product. There appears to be no limit to what we may undertake and accomplish.

For centuries Cuba has been the breeding place of yellow fever, and had an annual epidemic of it. In two years of American occupation we have made such vigorous and intelligent application of sanitation that now Cuba is without a case of that dread scourge.

Foreigners do not understand what impels us to such restless activity, and ascribe it to a sordid desire to become rich. It is not so. We are profusely generous, even extravagant. It is simply a determination to achieve in the shortest possible time and so lead the nations of earth.

Work is noble and ennobling. Laziness is despicable, and idleness disgraceful. Yet work is but part of life; but means to an end. It may be overdone. Our racial nervous temperament is intensified. We are under continual high-pressure, and even now it is as if the steam were hissing at every rivet. We must supplement the gospel of work by that of rest. This is the one difficult thing for us. When we do indulge in recreation it is with all our might. We make work of it. We should learn of the German who said: "Ven I works, I work; ven I ish itle I I does nodings."

We regard rest as so much time stolen from work, a shirking of duty, a discreditable effeminancy. We fail to see that it is rest which knits up the fibres, cools the fevered blood and infuses us with freshness and new strength. We need to get away from our tasks, to lay aside our plans, halt our ambitions, to get, as it were, outside of ourselves. This is necessary to a healthful and symmetrical development of mind and body; necessary if we would compass all the best possibilities of life.

Of all peoples the American people need to study and practice the gospel of rest. It almost seems if the Creator had foreseen our restless, reckless activity he would have decreed more rest for us than one day in seven and enforced it more stringently than in the Fourth Commandment.

If work is a duty, a religious duty, rest and recreation are no less so. Let us break away from the cankering cares of our too strenuous life, and away to the sea-shore or the mountain side and forest and steep our tired minds and nervous bodies in the freshness and quietness and peace which nature bestows upon her votaries.

Rest is worship. Close up the churches as the schools, for a season. Never mind the stale taunt that the devil never takes a vacation. We have no personal acquaintance with him, but we are sure he would be a more efficient devil if he did take a vacation.

Bring Dr Clericus along. What matter if he has preached but two brief sermons and a sermonette each week and attended several church socials. He, too, has fallen into a rut and needs a change; so bring him along, but have the good man leave his theology and demnology on his book shelves and bring geology, conchology, ichthology ornithology and we will hear the sermons of the rocks and shells and fishes and birds, and we shall gather new strength, new life, new zeal, firmer faith and so return to our appointed work better qualified for service for God and man.

"The Error of It."

We are in receipt of the following communication relative to our editorial of the 5th inst., concerning "Christian Science." Mr. Ogden's letter will be given consideration in our Tuesday's issue:

EDITOR GAZETTE: As one who has to some extent tested the practical value of Christian Science and has reason for great gratitude because of the beneficial results received, I desire to enter earnest protest against the sweeping assertion of your editorial of the 5th inst., which would brand Christian Science "the most pernicious of all known delusions."

If healing the sufferer, comforting the sorrowing, reforming the victim of passion and vice, in short, the general betterment of humanity physically, mentally and morally is the result of "delusion," it would seem that the world has crying need of more delusion and less fact.

That Christian Science accomplishes the good works attributed to it may be readily attested in almost any community, in that there is scarcely a city, village or hamlet throughout the land but contains happy recipients of its healing and saving power. Did Christian Science lead to the "loss of man's identity," the editorial charge of "simply pantheism and practically pure atheism" might be well taken, but nothing in its teachings, understood, can lead to such conclusion.

Truly, the distinction is clearly made between self-absorbed material consciousness and man's true nature or individuality, that which prompts his every noble word or deed, but man ever maintains his own identity and the greater the knowledge of his true relation to his Creator, infinite divine mind, the more enlarged his capacities and the greater his capabilities.

The rule of Life in Christian Science and the application thereof gives man mastery over self-indulgence and makes possible the approximation, through daily deeds, the highest of ideals, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." Thus man becomes God-like, but is never God nor absorbed by God.

As the editorial states, the believers in Christian Science now number approximately one million people and in explanation of the expressed amazement "that intelligent, rational men and women embrace such doctrines," let me say that probably seventy-five per cent. of this number have found health through the application of these doctrines, in many instances after all material means had failed, and to all believers has it brought happier homes purer lives and greater love to God and man, hence, it is not alone because of its logical precept, but of its fruitful practice that men and women adher to Christian Science. Most opposition to this science, whether from pulpit, physician or press, usually finds its origin in some mistaken report about it, or in the action of one who has embraced the name without the nature of its teaching, whose conduct would receive hearty disapproval from Christian Scientists themselves.

The early efforts of the Christian church were opposed and its adherents persecuted, not for what was really believed and done by them, but for what common report said about them. It was proclaimed, "These Christians would like to burn our cities, and are a danger to our community. They sacrifice their children to propitiate their God, etc.," all of which, though generally believed because of oft repetition, was the very antipode of truth and was in due time corrected through fair-minded investigation of the lives of these Christians.

Christian Science courts honest investigation and willingly awaits the verdict of public approval which its practical worth will in due time award it. Thanking you for your courtesy and space, I am, Respectfully,

DAVID B. OGDEN,
State Correspondent.

Those famous little pills, DeWitt's Little Early Risers compel your liver and bowels to do their duty, thus giving you pure, rich blood to recuperate your body. Are easy to take. Never gripe. Graham & Wells.

DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve should be promptly applied to cuts, burns and scalds. It soothes and quickly heals the injured part. There are worthless counterfeits, be sure to get DeWitt's. Graham & Wells.

"I am indebted to One Minute Cough Cure for my present good health and my life. I was treated in vain by doctors for lung trouble following la grippe. I took One Minute Cough Cure and recovered my health." Mr. H. Wise, Madison, Ga. Graham & Wells.

Question Answered

Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mother and grandmothers never thought of using anything else for indigestion or biliousness. Doctors were scarce and they seldom heard of appendicitis, nervous prostration or heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to cleanse out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Get Green's Prize Almanac.—Graham & Wortham.

You will waste time if you undertake to cure indigestion or dyspepsia by starving yourself. That only makes it worse when you do eat heartily. You always need plenty of good food properly digested. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure is the result of years of scientific research for something that would digest not only some elements of food but every kind. And it is the one remedy that will do it. —Graham & Wells.

"I had a running sore on my breast for over a year," says Henry R. Richards, of Willseyville, N. Y., "and tried a great many remedies, but got no relief until I used Banner Salve. After using one-half box, I was perfectly cured. I cannot recommend it too highly." Graham & Wortham.

A bad complexion generally results from inactive liver and bowels. In all such cases, DeWitt's Little Early Risers produce gratifying results. Graham & Wells.
