A gentleman who was in from Aleson this week was quite indignant over the fact that a party of hunters, presumably from Philomath, had been hunting deer with hounds near the lake above Dave Tom's. The worst feature of the matter was that the carcasses of the dead animals—they had killed nine—were left to rot. The meat was stripped from the hams and the rest was left to the buzzards. The deputy game warden is looking into the matter and if there is any penalty for this latter offense, prosecution will follow.

An Oakville correspondent to the Albany Herald testifies to the wisdom of operating a free ferry at Corvallis. He says: "The free ferry at Corvallis is making that place the trading point for a large part of this county. A free bridge at Albany would be a big thing for the merchants of that place."

Roy Raber returned home during the first of the week from Idaho, where he has mining interests. Part of the time he has been looking after interests near Glen Ferry. Sherman Wallace is a McMinnville boy and has many friends in this city, while the bride is a Corvallis lady of most estimable character and her friends and well-wishers are many. Immediately after the ceremony the young couple took their departure for Newport, where they will pass their honeymoon.

Considerable inquiry is being made, by citizens generally, concerning the Benton county souvereigns, which it was understood would be out about the 20th of this month. The committee having the matter in charge informs us that while the concern which was given the printing promised to have the work done in six weeks from the time the order was placed, they were not limited to time. The only requirement was that the work should be first-class. No proofs have yet been received. Secretary Woodson has written for information concerning the matter and expects a reply today or tomorrow.

There will be a picnic given in Beach's grove, just across the Willamette river, today. It is given by the United Evangelical church to the Sunday school of that denomination. A most enjoyable time will undoubtedly result.

Tuesday, Ed Smith, of J. R. Smith & Co., made a trip through the country surrounding Dufy. On Mr. Barrard's place he noted what is supposed to be the first threshing machine of the season in operation. It was Mr. Price's horse-power thresher and was working on wheat. This is about as early as any threshing is ever done in Benton, if it is wheat. However, it is only a matter of a few days until grain threshing will be in full blast.

Last week J. R. Collison and wife and Mrs. H. C. Dunham and child, accompanied by Miss Ashford, arrived from Maitland, Holt county, Missouri, to remain a month or longer. Mrs. Collison and Mrs. Dunham are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Oren, of this city, and the party are guests of the latter. Mr. Collison is a prominent merchant of Maitland and himself and wife visited Corvallis about four years ago. Mrs. Dunham paid a visit to this city something like eight years ago. This is Miss Ashford's first visit to this section.

At the recent meeting of the board of regents, President Weatherford of the board, and President Gatch were authorized to select members of the faculty to constitute a party whose mission was to visit the fossil beds of the Jehn Day country and secure specimens for the college museum. This party left yesterday morning for their 250-mile trip over the Cascades by the Lebanon route, thoroughly provisioned and equipped. They expect to be absent a month or six weeks.

Father Geo. D. Doyle, the Catholic priest of Grants Pass, belongs to the baseball nine of that town and plays third base. The team could not get along without him in their contest Sunday and he celebrated mass in his church at Grants Pass one-hour earlier than common in order to come to Ashland and help his home town to wrest the championship of Southern Oregon. Father Doyle is a college raised man and after his graduation he followed teaching in a Catholic college, hence he is thoroughly imbued with the innocence of athletics. —Ashland Record.

Undoubtedly, this has been a good year for cherries. A few days ago Mrs. Taylor Porter furnished this office with a tin of fine cherries that would be hard to beat in any country. The name of the cherry is not known, but it resembles the Royal Ann. The tree is a seedling and has attained a large growth although not of great age. The secret of its rapid growth lies in the fact that it was planted over an old well that had been filled up, thus giving its roots ample opportunity to reach out. If this theory be correct, considering the perfection of the cherries that reached this office, we are inclined to insist that in future cherry trees be planted over old wells.

Last Sunday Dick Zahn, of Aleson, killed what is reported to have been the largest cougar ever killed in that section. He was assisted by his faithful dog, "Grover." This is the twentieth cougar that Grover has been instrumental in bringing to its doom during the past eight or nine years. Aside from the cougars that he has helped to destroy the old dog has brought to death innumerable bears, wildcats and various other animal life in the meantime. Grover is quite deaf, but his scent is still keen and he is as full of the spirit of the chase today as he ever was. It is doubtful if another dog in Oregon has a better record for cougar than has this faithful canine of Mr. Zahn. The cougar had been killing goats and sheep belonging to the Zahn boys.

Consumption not Hereditary.

If the conclusions drawn by Dr. Robert Koch, the eminent specialist, from experiments conducted by himself are correct the time is not far distant—a generation at most—when consumption, that most dread of all diseases will no longer contaminate the human family.

In a paper read before the British Congress of Tuberculosis a few days ago, the noted German professor said that human tuberculosis was radically different diseases, and that he had amply demonstrated that cattle could not be infected with human tuberculosis.

The counter proposition that human beings were not liable to infection from bovine tuberculosis was hard to prove, the doctor said, owing to the difficulty of experimenting upon human subjects, but personally he was satisfied such was the case, and he recited at length post mortem evidence supporting this view. Dr. Koch said if this point were conceded, it remained to determine the chief source of contagion.

Continuing he said that human immunity from bovine infection disposed of the belief of infection through dairy products, and he considered this source of danger so slight as to be unworthy of precautionary measures.

Hereditary was only an unimportant factor in the transmission of tuberculosis, though the contrary had long been believed. Dr. Koch said the chief danger of contagion lay in the sputum of consumptive patients and that a remedy was to be found in a law preventing the consumptive from strewing contagion about him.

Dr. Koch highly complimented Dr. Herman M. Biggs, pathologist and director of the bacteriological laboratories of the New York Health Department, upon the repressive measures concerning tuberculosis taken in New York Health Department, where he said, the mortality from tuberculosis had been reduced to 35 per cent since 1886, and recommended the system organized by Dr. Biggs in New York to the study and imitation of all municipalities.

Dr. Koch closed his remarks by expressing his belief that the ultimate stamping out of tuberculosis was possible.

Yaquina and Long Tom.

The report of Captain W. C. Langfit, corps of United States engineers, on the improvements of rivers and harbors in Oregon for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901, together with recommendations for future appropriations, has been made public.

At Yaquina Bay the improvement provides for blasting away a cluster of rocks about 2000 feet seaward of the sea end of the south jetty. A portion of these rocks was removed during the summer of 1900, and the remainder are to be removed during the present summer, which will complete all proposed work at Yaquina bay.

The improvement of the Long Tom River provides for removing snags and over-hanging trees with a view to obtaining a channel for high-water navigation during a few months in the rainy season. This project is now satisfactorily completed, but the sum of $500 will probably be required annually for removing snags, logs and other obstructions, which may come into the stream.

The present project provides for the improvement of the Willamette from Portland to Eugene by the removal of obstructions, and the building of controlling works, with a view of obtaining a depth of 12 feet or more from Portland to the foot of Claekamas Rapids (11 miles); of three to three and one-half feet thence to Corvallis (107 miles), and of two to two and one-half feet from Corvallis to Eugene (53 miles.)

One Dollar for a "Smack."

The following incident is said to have happened at a church social in an Oregon town. In justice to the young men of Corvallis it is but right to say that the occurrence did not take place in this city:

"A row of maidens, dressed saucily, and pretty as an artist's ideal, stood before a tent. In great, large letters, posted over their heads, appeared this legend: 'Kissing booth, a kiss for five cents.'"

"Young and old men spent nickels like drunken sailors, but when they got inside each was handed a candy kiss.

"A general kick was made, and in a few minutes another sign went up. It read: 'The real thing $1.'"

"Not a man was willing to put up this Pan-American price for the osecutory exercise and the treasury was not augmented. Conventional members said afterward that it was madness to display the 'real thing' sign, and the pretty girls who could not realize $1 for a smack have a poor idea of the young men of the town."

Mrs. Ann Crawford.

The funeral of Mrs. Ann Crawford, who died at her home three miles east of Corvallis July 23, 1901, occurred Wednesday. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Henderson at Oakville chapel and interment was made in the cemetery nearby. Many friends and neighbors of the deceased followed the body to the grave.

Ann McBea was born in New York City, July 4th, 1819. She married Alexander Crawford in 1840, and together they came to Oregon territory in 1857. They took up their residence in Linn county in 1858, and here they lived until their death. Mr. Crawford passed away about four years ago.

Mrs. Crawford leaves two children, Milton Crawford, of Linn county, and Mrs. W. E. Yates, of this city.

A Day on the River.

A Lincoln county subscriber to the GAZETTE asks us to publish the following "bit of originality":

A gray dawn and a white, white mist,
And morning comes on the river;
The birds are mute and the winds are list,
But the waters flow on forever.
The mists have risen, the sun breaks forth—
'Tis high noon on the river;
The sea-fowl flock from over the way,
There comes the breath of new-mown hay
And the waters flow on forever.

The western sun has gone to bed,
The western sky is golden and red—
'Tis evening on the river;
The evening damps come in from the sea,
The cattle come homeward across the lea,
And the waters go on forever.

O, gray dawn! And white, white mist!
And birds that are mute and still;
O, wild west wind, where'er you list,
To go at your own sweet will;
O, golden sun and sea-fowl flown,
And cattle and meadow and home,
It takes you all, yes every one,
To make a day on the river.

The Bryson-Davison-Callahan party returned Tuesday from their hunting trip. Attorney Bryson is charged with the assassination of one defenseless little deer. The other two members of the party are believed to have been accessories before the fact.

The Magnolia mills received the first load of wheat of the 1901 crop Wednesday evening. It was raised by W. A. Backner near Miller's station and threshed by I. D. Miller. It will go nearly 30 bushels to the acre and is of the best quality. The berry is exceedingly large and plump and rates as A No. 1.—Albany Herald.

Architect Burgraf, whose plans for the new agricultural hall at O A C have been adopted by the building committee of the board of regents, is in the city. The new hall will be 85x125 feet, and three stories high—a trifle larger than the present mechanical hall. The first story will be built of granite and the other stories of stone. It is probable that the first story will be built this fall. Mr. Burgraf has designed many of the finest buildings in Oregon.

The entertainment given at the Christian church Wednesday evening was the occasion of the first public appearance in this city of Miss Mabel Cronise since her return from Chicago, where she has been taking instruction in vocal and instrumental music for the past two years. The little lady has a voice of remarkable sweetness, over which she has perfect control. While lacking in power, it is pure and clear, and she sings with ease and expression. Every number on the program was artistically rendered, and called forth liberal applause. They were interspersed with readings by a Miss Tillotson.
