LOCAL NEWS.

Recorder Elgin is rusticiating in the Cascades this week.

Miss Agnes Klecker, of Portland, is visiting friends in this city.

Arthur Bier left Tuesday for Portland, where he has been offered employment.

Miss Olive Hamilton arrived home from her visit in Junction and Eugene, yesterday.

Mrs. H. C. Allen is expected to come home from Washington, D. C., on a visit in about three weeks.

A thunder shower Wednesday morning cooled off the globe of our thermometer and Oregon is herself again.

Prof. Irving M. Glenn and wife, of Eugene, are visiting in this city, the guests of Attorney E. R. Bryson and wife.

Prof. R. F. Holm, formerly school superintendent of this county, passed through Corvallis en route to Newport with his family, Wednesday.

Chief Alexander has accomplished good work during the past few days by cleaning up the street in front of the Dabler property on Jefferson street.

Wednesday, T. W. Dilley and family went over to Solo to visit relatives and friends. Mr. Dilley will be home in a few days, but his family will visit for a couple of weeks.

Presbyterian church services at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m.; Sunday School at 10 a. m.; Y. P. C. E. at 7 p. m. A cordial invitation is extended to all to come and worship with us. R. L. Meily, pastor.

Dave Rosebrooks, formerly of this city, is now with the orchestra of the Henry Miller company. Henry Miller is one of America's leading actors and his company is not excelled anywhere.

Attorney W. E. Yates left here yesterday to drive over to the coast, where his family are spending the season. Mr. Yates took his team over in order to drive about the coast. The length of his sojourn is indefinite.

A few days ago Grover Headrick received a letter from his brother, Otto. The latter, at the time of writing, was in Moscow, Idaho, and stated that he intended remaining there until after harvest. Whether Otto will then come to Corvallis or go back to Seattle he did not state.

It is reported that the chair factory that heretofore has been operated in Albany is to be moved to Portland. The reasons assigned for moving is that the metropolis affords superior transportation and market facilities. It is thought that Portland will furnish a site and erect the necessary buildings.

County court convened Wednesday morning. The usual grid of bills were allowed and some attention given to tax matters. Perhaps the most important item that claimed the attention of the court was the race bridge south of Corvallis on the state road. It has been deemed necessary to do something in this matter.

Tuesday evening, at the residence of Judge Woodward and wife, a party was given by the Christian Endeavor Society of the United Evangelical church in honor of Charley Heckart. About thirty-five or forty guests were present and a most enjoyable time resulted. Charley intended to leave yesterday for Portland, where he is almost positive that he will be able to secure plenty of work at good wages.

Athletic advocates of Monmouth College, Illinois, are elated over the selection of Horace G. Bodwell, an Oregon boy, as physical director of that college. Horace Bodwell went to Chicago from this state two ago and entered Chicago University. He was catcher on university baseball team the first year and last season played a plucky game on the football team. He is a graduate of Chicago University. Oregon boys have a faculty for "getting there."

W. A. Sanders, THE watchmaker. City council meets Monday night.

"Teddy" Crawford went to Newport yesterday.

J. D. Mann and family are enjoying life at the sea beach.

W. A. Buchanan is acting recorder in the absence of Grant Elgin.

Prof. S. I. Pratt was in from Philomath yesterday attending to some business.

Miss Remoh Holland, of Salem, was a C. & E. passenger to the coast, yesterday.

Adam Wilhelm, of the firm of Wilhelm & Sons, of Monroe, was in the city on business this week.

Victor Moses is suffering from an attack of poison oak that has caused his absence from office duties.

"Billy" Wright, formerly of this city but now of Oregon City, passed through Corvallis en route to Newport, Thursday.

Miss Thia Thompson, who has been the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Geo. E. Nichols, left for her home in Corvallis, Friday.—Ashland Tidings.

Rumor has it that a young lady graduate of the class of '99 of O A C, and a prominent merchant of Baker City are to be married about September 1st.

Miss Grace Scott, accompanied by her friend Miss Lizzie Schooling, arrived home on a visit from The Dalles, Wednesday. They leave today for a month's outing at Newport.

A Hodes, wife and two children went over to the coast yesterday. Mr. Hodes and the children will remain about a month or six weeks. August expects to return in about ten days.

In a letter to a friend in this city, J. D. Zuroher states that his health has been poorly ever since he went home in June. He will be here about September 15th to prepare for the opening of O A C.

Mr. Whidby, who for the past several months has been employed in the hardware establishment of Huston & Bogue, left last week for Astoria. His numerous Corvallis acquaintances regret the departure of this genial little gentleman whom all had learned to admire.

Darwin Nash, now of San Francisco, passed over to Nashville to visit his parents, yesterday. Of the Corvallis boys in San Francisco he says: Mart Spangler, Geo. Clark, Luther Smith and Wayman Mason are all employed and in good health. Darwin expects to return to the city about August 22nd.

Mrs. A. W. Thompson, of Los Angeles, Calif., was in the city this morning on her way to Corvallis, called there by the serious illness of her mother, Mrs. Fisher. Mr. Thompson, a son of Rev. E. J. Thompson, a former Albany young man, is now working in a wholesale bakery and is enjoying excellent health.—Democrat.

A. Poole, of Jackson county, Oregon, arrived in this city, Wednesday. He is an uncle of J. M. and Amy Cameron, of this city and his coming was a surprise to them. Mr. Poole states that this year's crop in his section is hardly up to the usual standard, but he speaks in praise of the crop prospects of this section. He expects to leave today for his Southern Oregon home. This is the first time he has seen his relatives in this city for more than twenty years.

William Spencer, father of Mrs. S. I. Pratt, of Philomath, and Mrs. G. A. Covell, of this city, started, yesterday, for his home in Austinburg, Ohio. Mr. Spencer has been visiting with his daughters during the past three or four weeks and is well pleased with what he saw of this section of the coast. He is a lumber dealer and during his visit he investigated the outlook for this business in Oregon and was so favorably impressed with the conditions that before leaving he stated that in all probability he would return to this section next year.

Yesterday, Sheriff Burnett received a letter from William Frazer, sheriff of Multnomah county, bearing the information that a horse had been stolen in Portland by a man giving the name of John Bailey. This is not the fellow's true name. The horse-thief is between 75 and 80 years of age, and his weight is about 160 pounds. One peculiarity about the man is that his eyes water considerably. He is wanted in Southern Oregon on various charges. The horse stolen is a black, about 6 years old, weighing in the neighborhood of 800 pounds, and is barefooted.

Killing gophers seems to be a very dangerous undertaking. A short time ago Harvey Sargeant, of this city, was somewhat disabled and now the Eugene Guard of Friday reports, as follows: Miss Nellie Loomis' face was quite badly powder-burned this morning by the accidental discharge of a "safety" gopher gun. About 9 o'clock she was setting the gun at a gopher hole at her home on East Eleventh street, and in some manner it was discharged while her face was close to the nozzle. It was a narrow escape from death. Had her face been a few inches closer the shot would have struck and killed her.

Will Soon Arrive.

It is the desire of all classes of citizens that monied people come to our shore and locate among us. A good, industrious and substantial citizen is always a power in a community, and to such who will try their luck with us this section offers great inducement.

Along about last Memorial Day a gentleman by the name of W. G. Davis arrived in this city from Laurel, Neb. He came to look into affairs in this section with a view to locating permanently. Other men of Nebraska were awaiting his report, and if everything proved satisfactory, they, too, would pull up stakes and settle here. Mr. Davis chanced to make the acquaintance of J. M. Cameron, who showed him the various parts of the city and country. Mr. Davis was delighted with what he saw here, and on leaving, stated that he would be back as soon as he could get his affairs in Nebraska straightened up. Mr. Cameron has been in communication with the gentleman and at the latter's request rented the Presbyterian parsonage for the occupancy of Mr. Davis. A few days ago Mr. Cameron received the following letter from Mr. Davis, posted at Laurel, Neb., and bearing date of August 2nd:

"Dear Sir: Yours of July 28 received and I thank you for it. You will find enclosed a Chicago draft for $12 in payment of house rent for one month. I am very glad to get that house and I appreciate your efforts in this direction. I am stirring up quite an Oregon fever in this neck-o'-the-woods and think, without doubt, there will be several families from here locate there. It is still very dry and hot here. There have been some light showers around, but in spite of everything the corn crop will be very short, perhaps the nearest to a failure, except one, that we have ever had. Potatoes are worth $1.60 per bushel now and the Lord only knows what they will be worth in the spring. If nothing happens to prevent, I expect to leave here about the 15th of this month. Will be in the bank for a few days yet. Again thanking you for your kindness, I am, Very truly yours, W. G. DAVIS."

Mr. Davis is a gentle about 40 years of age. He has a wife, but no children of his own. He and his wife are raising a little nephew. Mr. Davis is reported to be a thorough business gentleman and has been a member and stockholder of The Laurel State Bank of Nebraska. He expects to engage in the banking business in this city.

Oregon Man Selected.

Prof. F. C. Washburn has been selected to occupy the chair of entomology in the University of Minnesota. He has many friends in this city who will be pleased to learn of his good luck. He came to Corvallis in 1889 and was professor of entomology and zoology at the Oregon Agricultural College until 1895, when he received a better salary to go to the U of O at Eugene. He was connected with the O A C for six years and the U of O for a like period. The death of Prof. Lagger left a very desirable place in the University of Minnesota vacant and there were over fifty candidates for the situation, among others, candidates from the Berkeley and Stanford faculties. Prof. Washburn, though not an avowed candidate for the position, is to be congratulated on having been the chosen one. A recent issue of the San Francisco Post contains the following notice:

From information that reached here through private sources today, it is learned that Professor Frederick C. Washburn, of the University of Oregon, has been finally selected to succeed the late Professor Otto Lagger, of the University of Minnesota, who occupied the chair of entomology at that institution for many years. This selection ends a very friendly but earnest rivalry that has existed among the faculties of all the universities of this part of the country, for the position, which carries with it a salary of $2400 and an appropriation of $900.

Prof. Washburn was not a candidate for the honor, and his appointment came as a complete surprise. He is visiting in Chicago at present, but will shortly proceed to his home in the university city of Eugene, Or., and thence proceed to his new charge. The honor paid to Professor

Washburn is a very high one, the position carrying with it vast responsibilities. The faculties at Stanford and Berkeley have been very interested in the deliberations of the Minnesota body which finally selected the Oregon scholar for the chair.

The Price of Peaches.

There are some things more unpleasant than warm weather, and a charge of No. 7 shot scattered about over one's center of gravity, is, we opine, not the least of them.

Last Tuesday forenoon the crew with Geo. Hoffeck & Co's steam thrasher were passing the William Bogue place, three miles east of Corvallis, when some tempting peaches in the orchard attracted their attention. A member of the crew, Warren Hurlburt, so the story goes, experienced an uncontrollable desire for some of this luscious fruit. He started for the orchard. Frank Langley, who is running the place for Mr. Bogue, had a premonition that his peaches were in danger of being pilfered. "Halt!" He shouted to Hurlburt, but the latter kept coming. Mr. Langley was armed with a shotgun. Hurlburt climbed the fence approached an especially tempting tree and began giving an imitation of a man helping himself to another man's peaches under protest. Langley shouted to him to sneak, take a walk, get next, and like admonitions several times, but without avail. He then raised his shotgun and fired. The distance was 39 paces and the pattern of a lead of No. 7 shot came close enough to the bosom of Mr. Hurlburt's trousers to permit two stray grains to graze the inside of one leg and one other to enter the calf of a like member. Aside from the fact that the wounded man went up in the air, our informant knew nothing further about the incident.

Tribute to McElfresh.

Last Sunday's San Francisco Examiner devotes an entire page to an account of Professor McElfresh's thrilling rescue of Miss Bethel Rawson from death on Mt. Hood, July 15, together with cuts of hero and heroine and scenes on the mountain. While Professor McElfresh would probably be justified in bringing a damage suit against the Examiner for the counterfeit presentation of himself which appears in that journal, the narrative accompanying it is so flattering and deserving that the offense is in a measure atoned for. We reprint this paragraph:

He looks like a man who would prove himself a hero in an emergency, does this college professor. More than six feet tall, well knit and cleanly built, bright of eye and erect of carriage, he impresses one as a specimen of the man who does—when there is anything to be done. He is a graduate of the University of Illinois, and for the past two years has been instructor in zoology at the Oregon Agricultural College at Corvallis. Both in his own school days and since he has become a professor he has taken great interest in athletics, and his strength thus acquired stood him well in hand in the hour of his trial on Mount Hood.

Priest Who Plays Ball.

Saturday's Telegram contains a half-tonic of Father Geo. B. Doyle, of Grants Pass, the Catholic priest who is a member of the champion baseball team of Southern Oregon. The Telegram says of him:

Father Doyle is a pleasing conversationalist, a thorough gentleman and a genteel scholar. An hour spent with him is one of pleasure. The walls of his study are adorned with numerous photos of college football and baseball teams of which he was a member. Athletics is his favorite theme. With it he is thoroughly imbued. He believes there is no more innocent recreative, healthful pastime than a game of baseball, football or any other of the popular outdoor sports. As to Sunday playing, he is opposed to persons doing it who feel that they could more profitably be doing something else; but he believes that the young men who play baseball on Sunday are in most instances men who are busily engaged with their regular work during the week. After all he thinks that those who play ball on Sundays are not the ones spending their time at the card or gambling table or wasting the day in idleness.

KLINE'S WHITE HOUSE

Our Caesar was There.

A figure of conspicuous glory was "our Julius Caesar" at the great jubilee exercises on Mount Tabor, Saturday afternoon. Just preparatory to the formal opening of the exercises, and as the speakers of the day had taken their seats upon the platform, Julius made his appearance out of the crowd. His raiment was gorgeous as becomes the noted colored orator on all like occasions. He stalked knowingly to the edge of the platform, and in response to the general outcry for a speech, he stepped onto the platform, took his hat off with a sweeping flourish, and made a profound salaam. This dismayed the managers of the affair a trifle, but their anxiety was short lived. Julius returned to the crowd, and having been placated with a huge sandwich, he munched away with the utmost satisfaction, at intervals half rising to make deprecatory bows, declining more publicly to respond to the honor which the small-boy element thrust upon him.—Telegram.

Caesar is well known in Corvallis. He was brought here from the South many years ago by B. T. Taylor, deceased. All old-timers will remember this child of the Sunny South, for he was a perpetual source of amusement for old and young during the many years of his residence in this city.

Major-General James S. Negley, who died suddenly at Plainfield, N. J., August 7th, was an intimate friend of Col. Philips, of this city. Before the civil war Negley was a brigade commander in the militia of the state of Pennsylvania, and Mr. Philips served under him. When the war broke out Mr. Negley was given a commission in the West, while Col. Philips joined the army of the Potomac. In after years they were fast friends. Negley's only son was a resident of Oregon for a short time, but later went to Idaho where he became a member of the legislature of that state. He died six or eight years ago.
