Drivers of traction engines may be spared paying a fine if they give heed to this item. The law makes it a misdemeanor to drive one of these machines across a bridge unless plank is laid for the wheels to run upon, thus reinforcing the structure.

Clerk Watters is expected to return, tomorrow from his hunting trip on Grass Mountain. During his absence Victor Moses has had entire charge of the office. During the forepart of next month Victor expects to leave for Southern Oregon, where he will visit friends for a couple of weeks.

Tuesday was the 27th birthday of Rev. F. A. Lark, pastor of the M. E. church, South, and about twenty members of his congregation completely surprised him when they appeared at his residence in the evening. Each caller gave the pastor a present and the evening was delightfully passed in conversation.

On September 4th, Arthur Keady is to be married to a young lady of Olympia, Wash. Immediately after the marriage the young couple will take the train for Portland, and after a sojourn of a few days they will proceed to Corvallis for a visit with Mr. Keady's relatives. "Art" is a tip-top printer and holds a good position in the capital city of Washington.

During the last term of the circuit court Attorney E. R. Bryson was appointed to take testimony in the case of Tally vs. Flynn. The testimony was heard Monday, and George E. Chamberlain, prosecuting attorney of the fourth judicial district, came up from Portland to represent Judge Flynn in the matter. Judge Flynn was over from Albany. This is a case wherein the question of a title to property is involved.

J. H. Albright showed us some dewberries and blackberries raised on his place here in town, that would take the breath of anyone not an Oregonian. Some of them measured one and one-half inches in length by three inches in circumference, and were firm and glossy. Mr. Albright will sell at least $20 worth of these berries from a patch less than thirty feet square this season and still have all he wants for his own use. He tells us that he has already picked his first crop of figs and will have another crop to gather before the frosts come.

From what is learned it is in order to suppose that Benton county has furnished the principals in what is known as an elopement. George Armstrong disappeared from his usual haunts about a week ago and Miss Eva Lemaster was also missing at the same time. The father of the girl asked Sheriff Barnett to trace the pair and ascertain what had become of them. This he attempted, and found that they had tried to get married in Vancouver, Wash., but failed. They were also in Oregon City at one time. They were last heard from in Portland and the supposition is that they went to Astoria. The young lady is a little over 16 years of age.

W. A. Sanders, the watchmaker.

Lloyd Orin and family, and visiting relatives from the East are taking an outing at Sulphur Springs this week.

The tray cloth for the Benton County Prune Co. arrived Wednesday. There is 8,500 lineal feet of this material in this shipment to the company.

An elegant sample of Defiance wheat was left at this office this week by John Swick. It will appear in the Benton county exhibit at the state fair.

Raymond Henkle and Harry Withycombe left yesterday for San Francisco, where they will enter the school of pharmacy affiliated with the college at Berkeley.

Presbyterian Church, services at 11 A. M. and 8:00 P. M., Sunday School at 10 A. M.; Christian Endeavor at 7 P. M. All seats free, and you are cordially invited to be present.

During the past few days, many prospective OAC students have been canvassing the city for rooms during the coming school year. The College will open September 20th—less than a month. Everything indicates that the attendance this year will be large.

Professor Smith, lately of California, is in the city arranging for the production of a play by our amateurs, which he hopes to give in about two weeks. Mr. Smith is a very courteous and pleasant appearing gentleman, and has met with great success wherever he has given entertainments.

Do not miss the meetings in the big tent near the United Evangelical Church, beginning Saturday evening. Rev. C. C. Pelling Ph. D. conducts the services Saturday evening and Sunday morning, afternoon, and evening. Rev. D. M. Metzger and Rev. S. J. Lindsey will conduct the meetings all of next week. A cordial welcome awaits all who will attend. L. Myron Booser, pastor.

Dr. W. T. Rowley arrived in Corvallis, Wednesday, from St. John, Mich. He had only been here a few hours when he made up his mind to locate in this city and engage in his profession. The doctor is a graduate of Ann Harbor Medical College. In the early winter he expects his parents to join him in this city. The doctor is a very pleasant gentleman and will no doubt make many friends among Corvallis people.

Wednesday, Mrs. T. W. Dilley and daughter, Miss Bessie, went over to Sneed to attend the funeral of Mrs. Dilley's nephew, a little 5-year-old who lost his life by falling into the mill-race of the Boston Mills, last Monday evening. The mother of the little boy was with him and they were crossing the race on a foot-bridge when the child fell in. The mother sprang into the race to rescue him, but owing to an eddy or whirlpool she failed and was nearly drowned herself.

Monday evening quite a number of the members of the M. E. Church, South, met at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Michael and gave Mrs. Grace Wallace a farewell party. It was a perfect surprise to her. During her residence in this city she was a leader in church circles. She left yesterday for Albany, where she joins her husband, J. Sherman Wallace, and together they immediately start for Rochester, N. Y. When they arrive in Portland they will be met by Mr. Wallace's mother and sister, and the husband of the latter, who will accompany them East. They expect to pass next Sunday in Salt Lake City. They will also remain a few days in Chicago.

There is going to be a string of first class horses here and the track owners promise to be clean and free from chicanery and dishonesty. The efforts of the State Fair Board along these lines during the past two years are well known and will be more stringently adhered to than ever this year. That fact will increase public interest in each event, as the public is fond of good horses and good racing, but very justly despises the system of "fixing" or "jockeying" which has too often obtained at all the tracks in recent years. The faithfulness with which the present Board has set its face against the foul practices on this track has brought public confidence and respect, and has brought more people to see the races.—Sam Statesman.

Word has reached this city to the effect that the McCaustland Bros. of Wilbur, Wash., recently suffered a $40,000 loss from fire. Luckily, they saved all of their books. Within a very short time they were in another building temporarily and doing business again. Along with this loss came the failure of a firm that owed them $8,000, so that, all told, their less amounts to $46,000. James McCaustland, of this city, a brother of the above gentlemen, is now keeping the books of a branch store located at Heartline, Wash. As soon as he gets well onto the run of the business he is to be made the manager of the branch establishment. McCaustland Bros. are now erecting a large brick building. The loss is very heavy, but as the brothers are worth $180,000, they will not be financially crippled by any means.

President Gatch returned to the coast yesterday.

Miss Martha Fischer returned from the coast yesterday.

Dr. Lester is home from a two weeks visit to Newport.

Miss Maude Laughlin returned from an outing at the coast, Tuesday.

Mordaunt Goodnough, the pianist, will leave today for a trip to Ashland.

Prof. F. L. Kent returned home Monday from a months absence in Portland.

Layton Smith, formerly of Corvallis, with his family visited in this city this week.

Dr. E. H. Taylor went over to Newport, Tuesday, to remain a week or such a matter.

Attorney and Mrs. W. N. Barrett were in Corvallis, Wednesday, enroute home from Newport.

Prof. Chas. Johnson returned Monday from a bicycle tour of Central Oregon, much improved in health.

The little threshing machine at the college farm was put in operation again yesterday. A small plot of wheat was threshed.

Kline's new clothing for fall has the self-retaining front, keeps your coat in shape, and does not wrinkle like the kind that is usually sold.

The Kerr-Huber camping party arrived from the coast, Tuesday evening. They had a delightful time and all returned in the best of health.

It is reported that a short time ago the family of Louis Edwards, residing near Dusty, had an attack of diphtheria. According to the rumor, antitoxin was used most successfully and nothing serious resulted.

To judge from the "scurrying" of people about town, one is inclined to believe that commodious dwellings are rather hard to rent in this city at present. This is a good indication that things about Corvallis are going to live up a bit.

Rev. Dr. Thompson, in a recent conversation, said he had married nearly a thousand couples, nearly 250 couples being in Corvallis alone. We doubt very much whether any other minister in the state can claim a similar record.—Independence Enterprise.

Mrs. C. J. Hawkins of North Yakima, who has been visiting her brother-in-law, E. H. Hawkins, of Eugene the past week is now visiting Mrs. W. T. Norton. Her niece, Clara Hawkins, came down from Eugene on a bicycle to join her aunt in a pleasure trip to Newport. It has been forty years since Mrs. Hawkins has visited the beautiful little city of Corvallis.

The Wilson-Hall threshing outfit, of Wells, was employed last week in the vicinity of Buena Vista. They threshed a 14-acre field of wheat for Mr. Praitner that furnished 42 wagon loads of wheat, in the bundle, to the machine. It is seldom, indeed, that such a heavy growth is found—some of the wheat straw was over six feet long. The field averaged about 30 bushels per acre.

The old soldier referred to in the following dispatch from Resburg to the Oregonian, was formerly a resident of Corvallis: An inmate of the Soldiers' Home of the name of John H. Parent, recently from The Dalles, attempted suicide this morning by cutting his throat with a razor. He cut into his windpipe, but did not sever it, and it is believed he will recover. He is a consumptive, and probably made the attempt upon his life while despondent. It is stated he shot himself at The Dalles two years ago with suicidal intent.

A couple of days ago Adams & Albright completed the work of putting a Corinthian arch in the dwelling of J. C. Taylor. What has heretofore been the parlor has been converted into a reception hall. This is something entirely new in this city and the workmanship is first-class. All the arch now lacks is the grill, and it is to come from Portland. The room and arch will be finished in red and black and the stairway, across from the hall, will be finished in ebony. The pillars supporting the arch forcibly remind one of the architecture of the old masters.

The visit of J. Lamphier and wife, of Portland, to Corvallis this week recalls an incident that occurred in this city away back in 1855. Mr. Lamphier, Thos. Whitehorn, Robt. Johnson and a number more of the boys were boarding at Mrs. Biddle's. They were all young fellows then. "Beb" had just been elected justice of the peace and his highest ambition was to perform a marriage ceremony. Mr. Lamphier was the only one in the crowd who had a sweetheart, and it is said that "Bob" kept after him so persistently that he and his girl got married in self defence months before they had intended to.

The Fossil Hunters.

The innocents named by the board of regents to tour Wheeler County in search of fossils have been heard from. The latest issue of the Fossil Journal contains an account of an entertainment given the party—Professors Fulton, Pernot, Edwards and Phillips—by Senator Steiwer of that city. Besides the Steiwer and Hoover families, Ed Aldrich, a graduate of OAC, and a "chieft" among them takin' notes," were present to entertain and be entertained. Vocal solos were rendered by Professor Fulton and Miss Mand Hoover, accompanied by Miss Hattie Hoover at the piano.

The Journal says: "The fossil hunters did not find fossils by the carload, but they did make one valuable find, the fossilized head of an animal evidently larger than a horse or cow, with immense jaws and teeth, which will have to be worked on a good deal, and may have to be examined by experts, before classification."

"The young professors, who have enjoyed their outing immensely, are now on their way back to Corvallis over the Cascade mountains, in a wagon that looks just a trifle the worse for wear, with a leaf made out of an apple tree limb confiscated in a gloaming forage, a cottonwood tongue, and a bunch of willow wheel spokes that will probably sprout in foggy Webfoot. Their Willamette wagon was never made for Eastern Oregon lava beds, and it was lucky for the cause of science and the party that it included Prof. Phillips of the Mechanical Department, who is an adept at that kind of repairing, and will have the old cart converted into a pretty fair vehicle by the time the penitent prodigals disembark on the camp."

Removing Rock.

A gentleman who recently returned from Newport states that during his sojourn over there the work of blasting out the rock in the bottom of the entrance to the bay was in progress. This is necessarily slow work, as the diver who places the charge on the rock many feet under water can only work when the waters of the bar are comparatively calm. Quite often days will pass when it is impossible to accomplish anything. The dynamite that is used is not taken aboard the steamer that is detailed to assist in this work, but is placed in a small boat and towed out by the steamer. It is understood that the diver does no drilling in making the charge ready. He merely places the dynamite in the crevices of the rock. When all is in readiness for the discharge of the blast the steamer gets out of harms way and a few men in the small boat "touch the button" from what they consider a safe distance. Our informant states that he saw one blast let off and that it was as grand a sight of its kind as he ever expects to witness. Water and rock shot into the air hundreds of feet, when the mass appeared to separate and fall as two distinct columns. The violence of the blast gave the windows of the "city by the sea" quite a shock and made bathers' teeth chatter.

Biggest in the World.

The mammoth evaporator now under construction at the big prune orchard north of this city is claiming the attention of fruitmen all over the United States. Writing to the Oregon Agriculturist from Buffalo, N. Y. Henry N. Townsend has this to say: "In your issue of July 1st you quote from the Corvallis papers an item to the effect that the Corvallis and Benton County Prune Company are about to build the largest prune evaporator in the world. If memory serves me our evaporator at Canyon is about the same size and I think one of 36 tunnels east of the mountains is larger than either."

erected for drying prunes which has that capacity."

The "claim" of the Corvallis papers for the big dryer was very modest, for it meant simply to show the average daily capacity under ordinary atmospheric conditions. Everything being favorable, manager Johnson states that he expects to dry 2,000 bushels of prunes in from 24 to 36 hours.

Attracting Attention.

Situated on the farm of Thos. Baker, some eight or ten miles northwest of Corvallis, is a splendid sulphur spring. Each year it becomes better known and has a larger number of people camped about. There is a hotel there and many visitors take advantage of the accommodations offered by this hostelry. Quite a number of tents have been pitched there this summer. The fishing is good and not far away the sportsman can find work for a rifle, as deer are often seen in that vicinity. The citizens of Corvallis, Albany and other towns are beginning to realize that the waters of this spring are equal to the waters of any spring in the land. The Albany Herald has the following to say in favor of Mr. Baker's spring:

But few people outside of Albany and Benton county know anything about it, in fact know that there are some splendid sulphur springs within two and one-half hours buggy drive of Albany, where cold, crystal sulphur water is to be had in abundance and as free as the mountain stream. But such is a fact nevertheless. The springs are situated about fourteen miles by the road, a little north of west from the city. The distance by a direct line is less than ten miles. They are situated on the farm of Tom Baker on the headwaters of Soap creek, at the foot of the Coast range, and are in a delightfully cool and shady grove of fir, maple, alder and crabapple, and is both a picturesque and cool place beside a mountain stream.

If these springs were in some states their fame would be heralded to the farthest county, but here we say little about them. We have too many good things to fully appreciate them all.

The Ferry Went Down.

An accident, which fortunately did not terminate seriously, occurred to Johnny and Arthur Buchanan, Wednesday afternoon. They were hauling wheat to Peoria. They were crossing this river on the ferry near that place with two wagons heavily loaded with grain, and were near the east bank when they discovered that the boat was sinking. They made all haste to get the boat ashore, and succeeded in getting the horses on the bank when the ferry sank. One wagon was in such a position that the four horses were able to pull it out, but the other had to be partly unloaded before it could be moved. The wheat was not damaged. It was necessary for the boys to come by way of Corvallis in order to reach home and they arrived here by ten o'clock Wednesday night.

The cause of the boat's sinking is not known. This was the first time that a heavy load had crossed this season, and it will be thoroughly overhauled before again being put in operation.
