

THE LESSON TAUGHT.

For the third time in our history the Chief Magistrate of the American people has been smitten down by the hand of an assassin. Not the assassination of Lincoln nor of Garfield gave the people a greater shock than they experienced when the telegraph flashed the sad news to every city, town and hamlet in telegraphic reach that President McKinley had been fatally shot. It was stunning. With blanched cheeks and speechless lips men looked questioningly in each others face, loath to believe, yet fearing the truth. It is safe to say that no president has been closer to the great heart of the American people. An able and wise executive, a man of unblemished character, of most humane and kindly disposition, the highest type of a Christian gentleman, a most admirable product of American institutions, President McKinley is beloved by all classes. We can ill spare such men. It is hoped he may recover. Thousands of devout men and women fervently implore the Eternal Arbitrator of life and death that he may live.

Whether the president survives or not we must learn the lessons of the hour. No longer may our chief executive safely travel from place to place and meet and greet the people. He must be continually attended by an armed guard, and unknown citizens must not find access to him. If he participate in any public function it is at peril of his life.

Who is responsible for such a state of affairs? The people are. We have given an asylum here to all men, scarcely denying the privilege to any. We have believed we could assimilate and Americanize races and men the most diverse and incongruous. The anarchist came. We gave him, poor, oppressed man, an asylum, vainly believing that here, where there is no political nor religious tyranny, nor titled class, he would become a happy man and useful citizen. We now discover our mistake. We learn that the anarchist is a desperate, vicious character, whose hand is ready to strike at every organized form of government. He is grouped with others such as himself. They are in constant communication with their fellows wherever they are organized. Assassination of rulers, utter destruction of all forms of government is their purpose. The most humane and broad-minded executive of the most liberal government on earth is as obnoxious to them as the veriest tyrant of an absolute monarchy.

What shall we do? No man fitted for the presidency of the American people is willing to be surrounded by a cordon of fixed bayonets and loaded rifles. The people will not long calmly endure such a condition. We are not anarchists, and anarchists should not long impose such a condition upon us. We will make our immigration laws more comprehensive and rigid, and we will enforce them. No longer shall our fair land be a dumping place for the vicious and undesirable. No longer shall Southern Europe be permitted to vomit her human refuse upon our shores. We will enact laws which shall enable us to pursue anarchy into its secret haunts and drag its devilish disseminators to prison or the gallows. Lawfully, orderly, surely, remorselessly we shall smite anarchy to death and extirpate it root and branch. We must do more. Public sentiment must be calmly and firmly arrayed against the expression of any unlawful purpose, whether by individuals or organizations. We have long been too patient, too lenient, too indifferent to wild appeals to lawlessness, and to abuse of our laws, our customs, our institutions. We must be Americans and insist that others shall be Americans or make haste to quit the country.

We must cease our indiscriminate abuse of public men. A just and righteous criticism of public measures and official conduct is necessary and commendable, but abuse, misrepresentation and vilification are utterly disreputable. How can we expect to reach the highest ideals of government on such debasing lines? The reputable press must rebuke this mischievous practice of indiscriminate abuse of public officials.

We speak plainly and earnestly as an American citizen. We should be recreant to all our traditions if we failed to do so. The lesson of the hour is that we must look more carefully to the character of our immigration; we must extirpate the anarchist as relentlessly as we would a man-eating tiger, or a cowardly, sneaking coyote.

Good Prices for Hops.

Discussing the outlook for hops, T. A. Livesley of Salem, a prominent grower and dealer in hops, said this week that there is no reason why the Oregon grower should receive less than a fair price for his hops.

"We hear a great cry about the large crop in England, and brewers think the growers are on the run and will sell for low prices. Some of the growers are scared and are ready to sell for less than 10 cents. I have known hops to be offered at 8 cents. Of course brewers want to buy at the lowest figure, and if growers are willing to sell for less than a fair price they will find plenty of buyers, but if they exercise good judgement they will get a fair price. If all try to sell at the same time prices will go down. There is no reason for a rush to sell.

"I have learned by observation that there has been created a demand for certain quality of Pacific coast hops in England, and we will supply them. Two years ago, when England had a larger crop than she has now, we exported 55,000 bales. We will export as much this year, and the remainder will be needed for home consumption."

When asked whether he thought hops should bring 14 or 15 cents this season, Mr. Livesley said: "I would not undertake to name prices at this time. I am going to watch the market and sell when conditions seem to indicate that it is best to sell. All growers must do the same. Every man should exercise his judgement and not hold his hops for a certain price nor sell regardless of price.
