Hawes $3.00 Hats.

The students now enrolled at the O. A. C. number over 400.

Mack Porter, of this county, practically had a walk-over with his Polled Angus cattle at the state fair and took quite a number of premiums.

Prof. Colvin is in the city. He is a dancing master and advertised to begin a dancing school in Burnett's hall last night. It is his intention to continue his teaching in this city until Saturday evening.

A few days ago C. A. Barnhart received a very fine mitring machine for use in his place of business. It is the latest invention of Brandon's and will be used by Charley for making picture frames, etc.

A large number of people visited the Benton County Prune Company's big dryer, Sunday. Everything down there was moving along nicely. There is about 12,000 bushels of fruit picked up to date. This shows something over 200,000 pounds of fruit dried.

Mr. and Mrs. John Holt and family have moved back from Corvallis, and have rented the Kelly farm, near Crabtree creek, and about a mile from Thomas station. They have been residents of Benton county seat of justice for the past couple of years.—Santiam News.

A drove of from 100 to 150 bunch-grass horses were driven through Corvallis, Sunday, by a man and a couple of girls. The outfit was headed north. The girls seemed to be used to stock driving, for they rode astride, wore large sombreros on their heads and spurs on their heels.

Miss Pauline Kline, accompanied by Mrs. E. R. Lake and Miss Emma Crawford, drove over to Albany, Sunday. It is near the anniversary of the death of Miss Kline's father, and fitting observance of this occasion was what took Miss Kline to Albany, where her father was buried.

Five new silos have been built at the college farm. They will be used for experimental purposes. One of the silos has already been filled with green corn. The remaining four will be used for sorghum, soil beans, corn and green peas. In storing the silos 1 per cent of salt is used.

Saturday, F. A. Sheasgreen discontinued picking prunes at his orchard across the river. There is quite a quantity of green fruit still on the trees, but no further picking will be done. Mr. Sheasgreen is quoted as saying that one reason that his prunes did not ripen more evenly is on account of cultivation. It is claimed by some growers that where the orchards have not been cultivated that the fruit matures more evenly.

China pheasants, which are such popular game birds in Oregon just now, were first introduced in this country eighteen years ago. O. N. Denay, who was U. S. Consul general at Tien Tsin, China, sent two pairs to his brother in Linn County. They were released near Albany and from them all our wild pheasants are descended. They have already spread over much of the state but are particularly numerous about their old starting place in Linn county.—Ex.

A bull that would grace a Spanish arena, or be worthy of a display line in a write-up of Quo Vadis, is the property of the Agricultural College. W. E. Yates, a half hundred students, Professor Horner or almost any other member of the faculty will subscribe to that. The animal, a splendid Jersey, has developed such a tendency for pure "cussedness" that the college authorities have decided to dispose of him to some butcher. Truly, the way of the transgressor is hard.

The Lincoln county fair will open tomorrow at Toledo. This will be the finest county fair ever held in that county. It is to be an exhibition of the various resources of the county and will embrace agricultural, horticultural, and floricultural features; also livestock, fisheries, natural and manufactured products of the county. Art will also be given prominence during the fair. It is not a money-making scheme in any sense of the term and Lincoln deserves to meet with success and encouragement in her undertaking, and beyond doubt she will.

So far during the present China shooting season no one has been reported accidentally shot in Benton county. According to the Lebanon Express Advance, the Linn county sportsman are not so lucky, or else not so careful. That paper says: It is not an uncommon thing these days for hunters of Chinese pheasants to shoot one another. Arthur Burkhardt has been hit twice this week by other hunters, some of the shot penetrating one of his hands. Fred Doud also knows what it is to be under fire, having been struck by several shot. These are only two of several like occurrences.

W. A. Sanders, Jeweler. Benton county has 2,000 acres of school land.

Lee Wade of Toledo was in town recently. He reports Mrs. J. T. Vincent's health improving.

The circuit court for Benton county will convene on the fourth Monday in November, the 25th.

Waldimar Kaupisch, manager of the Corvallis Creamery, went to Portland, Friday, and returned home on the Sunday passenger.

Capt. J. W. Crawford is again a familiar figure on the streets. The captain was confined to his room several days last week with a severe cold.

Corvallis has a preacher by name of Boozer, and a Northern California town has a saloon keeper by name of Chubb. Nearly every church however, has its boozer, but not every boozer has his church.—Albany Democrat.

We were misinformed when we stated in our last issue that Warren B. Hartley, failing to be reinstated at the O. A. C., had returned to his home in Bohemia. James Hartley was the student referred to and his home is in Lorane, Or.

On the 18th and 19th of this month Supt. Denman will hold a local teachers institute in Dusty. This will be the first local institute ever held in Dusty and every possible effort will be made to have the program one of unusual merit.

Charles Morgan will leave today, for Portland, where he will take passage on the steamer Columbia for San Francisco. He has been visiting in this city during the past two weeks with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Morgan, and goes to Oakland, where he has a position with the Pacific Press Publishing Co.

Letters have been exchanged between the managers of football teams of O. A. C. and U. of O. It is understood that the Agricultural College boys wish to arrange for a game with the university "kickers," providing the game can be governed by the rules which have been adopted to govern athletic contests at the O. A. C.

A letter recently received from Mrs. Grace B. Hall, formerly of Corvallis, but now of Oregon City, bears the intelligence that she and her husband are now comfortably located in a neat dwelling and that Mr. Hall has employment at the Willamette paper mill. She also states that Albert Thornton, who learned the printer's trade in this city, is now running the Cheney Sentinel, at Cheney, Wash.

H. A. Brewer, son-in-law of Hon. W. P. Keady was in town Saturday. He says his three-months old baby is the finest boy in the state of Oregon. Mr. Keady has just left Portland for his gold mines in Eastern Oregon. After stopping there a week or so he intends going to Malheur county to look after his oil prospects. The company will spend $20,000 at this time in the development of these oil properties.

Levi Orin has just completed a 13-ton silo. He filled it with green corn that had been well chopped. The corn was prepared for the silo with a horse tread mill. The time required for chopping the 13 tons was two days and a-half. Mr. Orin says that when once opened there must be at least two inches fed off of the top of the silo every day or else it will spoil. In fact silo has to be handled a great deal after the manner of sour kraut.

A half tone of Miss Mary Smith Philbrick appeared in Friday's Oregonian. Miss Philbrick is in charge of the newly established course of music at the Oregon Agricultural College. She is from Tilton, N. H., and secured her musical education in Boston. She has had six years' experience as a teacher of music, a portion of which period was passed at Albemarle college, Virginia. Miss Philbrick has already entered upon her duties at the college.

On account of ill health Miss Mattie Lee a teacher in the Corvallis schools, was obliged to present her resignation to the board of directors a short time ago. The board selected Mrs. J. A. Cramer, of this city, to fill the position. Mrs. Cramer will teach the 7th grade, the same grade that was under the charge of Miss Lee. The newly elected teacher entered upon her duties Friday. It is unfortunate for Miss Lee that her health is so poor. A year or so ago she was obliged to give up her situation as principal of the Buena Vista schools on account of illness.

Saturday, G. A. Robinson, W. G. Davis, Mr. Peterson and others were down on Soap Creek looking over some land and ran onto a fine buck. The buck, on seeing them, turned his collar up and approached, seemingly with the intention of doing battle. He was "ehosed" away, but returned. On returning he was met by Capt. Robinson who attempted to kill the animal with a rock. In the meantime one of the party had gone for a gun, but returned too late, for the animal had gone to the timber and the captain and his command were obliged to leave for home. Later, however, parties started after the buck, but whether he was killed is not known.

A PRACTICAL VIEW.

Some Sensible Remarks Upon Intemperance, and Its Remedy.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union, of Corvallis, held a good meeting at the Baptist church last Sunday. The edifice was well filled with people and the exercises were interesting. Mrs. Sanders presided at the organ and the congregation joined heartily in the songs selected from the Gospel Hymns. Rev. Mark Noble conducted the Scriptural reading, after which Rev. F. L. Moore offered prayer, when Rev. R. L. Meily made an address upon the subject of temperance. The general outlines of his remarks were:

The curse of intemperance and the remedy for it. He began by saying that if he had no other reason than that of his own experience with intemperance, he would hate it. He had witnessed, while in college, the blight of its influence upon a fellow student who went from bad to worse in his work, and finally to his death, his bier being followed to the station by the student body with silent tread and uncovered heads—a sad lesson to all of the baneful power of this evil. He had known a child deserted by its inebriate parents; he had stood in Baltimore at the grave of that illustrious poet, Edgar Allen Poe, who died a raving drunkard. These instances, if no other knowledge were had, would convince him of the iniquity of intemperance.

The speaker then discussed methods to relieve the people from the pest. He said parents must begin with the home and fill the mind of the child with noble ambitions, with firmness to withstand the seductive influences of evil of every form found in society—especially liquor drinking. Build up character in the youth; make him noble, make him strong to resist temptation. Remove as much as possible all kinds of temptation, but depend more upon making real men and women of the children. Next, the people must have a strong public sentiment in favor of good and against the bad. They cannot depend upon any kind of legislation without a strong public sentiment to enforce the laws.

Let the church, let this organization, the noble Women's Christian Temperance Union, foster and build up such a public desire for law and order that all these evils will be abated. They must not pass a law and then give it over, but they must work in season and out of season for the upbuilding of a moral sentiment in the community. The speaker predicted that the time would eventually come when this hydra-headed monster would be driven from our land.

Horses Stolen.

On October 1st, Sheriff W. W. Withers, of Linn county, apprised Sheriff Burnett that a span of horses had been stolen at Eugene a short time before the date of the letter. One of the horses was a brown gelding, with a white stripe in face, small collar mark on top of neck, shed all around, branded on right shoulder with "F. E.," weight about 800 or 900 pounds. Also one brown gelding, about the same weight and with the same brand on right shoulder.

The ponies are supposed to have been stolen by horse traders. The animals belonged to an Indian and were taken out of their pasture during the night. Should anybody learn anything of the stolen animals, or the parties who stole them, Sheriff Burnett will consider it a special favor if they will communicate their knowledge to him.

River Rights.

During last spring a party, or parties, petitioned the Circuit court of the State of Oregon for Benton county, for certain rights and privileges on that portion of the Luckiamute river which lies in Benton county. The petition was refused on the ground that to grant it would be an interference with the rights of the general public.

The Chas. K. Spaulding Logging company, a corporation, complained to the county court at its last session that R. Dunn, C. A. Franz, T. B. Reed and W. H. Miller, doing business under the name of The Luckiamute River Improvement Association, had attempted to restrict the Spaulding company's rights, as loggers, on the Luckiamute river by obstructing the river harrassing and annoying the said Spaulding Co., etc., and prayed the court to issue a restraining order in the matter.

After due consideration, the court issued an order restraining The Luckiamute River Improvement Association from any further interference with the actions of the Spaulding Co. until a further order of the circuit court of the State of Oregon for Benton county, or the judge thereof.

It is further considered, ordered and adjudged that before any injunction order shall issue plaintiff shall be required to enter into an understanding, with one or more sufficient sureties to be approved by Judge Woodward, in the penal sum of $500 and conditioned as required by law, and it is further considered, ordered and adjudged that this order of injunction is returnable to the Circuit court of the State of Oregon for Benton county, wherein said suit was commenced and is pending, to be in said circuit court heard and determined, and that the same is issued by the said E. Woodward, as county judge, in the absence of the honorable judge of said circuit court.

The above order of restraint was issued Friday, Oct. 4th, 1901.

First of The Series.

The first of the series of five lectures to be delivered here under the direction of the California Lecture Bureau, was heard at the Opera House Saturday night.

The speaker was introduced to the large audience by Geo. W. Denman, who has charge of the course to be given in this city. "What time is it, and where are we?" is a text which gives Dr. Thos. A. Boyer opportunity for an interesting and edifying lecture, and he made the most of that opportunity. Dr. Boyer is not an orator, and his effort Saturday night is in no sense an oration, but he is a rare speaker, and his lecture was brimful of wit, humor and sound horse sense. There is not a dull moment in it. Dr. Boyer rivets attention with his first word, and keeps his audience expectant and amused while he edifies them. His delivery is graceful and devoid of posing, the treatment of his subject original, and his style forcible and convincing.

J. H. Gibson, a mighty hunter he, took a little turn with his gun yesterday morning while returning from Soap Creek. When he rode into Corvallis a few hours later, five Denny pheasants dangled from his hunting belt, and a fine fat deer, cold in death, gave evidence of his prowess.

Miss Sophie Wolfe an elocutionist from Silverton will give an evening of Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables" in the college chapel Oct. 18 under the auspices of the Pisitan Literary Society. Miss Wolfe is highly recommended by the Emerson College of Oratory and it is with pleasure we look forward to her coming.

The Reading Room building now presents a very neat appearance being entirely renovated inside and out. The W. C. T. U. were fortunate in securing Mr. and Mrs. Swan to occupy the lower floor, who will endeavor to make it pleasant to one and all who desire to come in and avail themselves of the Free Reading room. The ladies hope soon to add the Daily Oregonian to their room.

A smart carpet dummer met his match in this city last Friday. It appears that Mr. Blackledge, of the J. D. Mann Co., gave an order for some fine carpets and the drummer got into and attempted to "bilk" the firm. The outcome was that Mr. Smith, of the same firm, became somewhat heated and did about the proper thing by tearing the order from the drummer's book.

Dilley, "The Fixer," allowed $1,000 to escape him a couple of days ago. He was assured by an agent for the San Francisco Examiner that he would draw a prize worth that sum if he would subscribe for the paper. Dilley is pretty narrow-minded in some things and couldn't get this proposition through his head, or it may be that he would sooner do without the prize than subscribe for the paper.

T. W. Davenport, father of the famous cartoonist, Homer Davenport, is dying at his home near Silverton. The physicians have abandoned all hope of recovery, and the patient is gradually growing weaker, until at the time of writing there was comparatively no life remaining. Mr. Davenport was hurt in an accident, in which he was thrown from a buggy, his head being caught in the running gear of the vehicle.

Captain Bert Hatch, who has been steamboating on the Yukon during the past Summer, has returned to Portland, says the Oregonian, and looks as if he had spent the Summer at a health resort. He made the first trip down the Yukon last Spring on the steamer Lightning, covering the distance from Dawson to St. Michael about 1700 miles, in four days and 20 hours. He then took command of the steamer Leon, and with two heavily-loaded barges in tow, started for Dawson. It took him a month to get there, the current being swift. There was plenty of water, the lowest depth being about six feet. Some freight boats without barges made two round trips during the season, and some passenger boats made four round trips. Captain Hatch's wife and her sister are at Nome and have found the climate very healthful for them.
