

SENATOR MITCHELL'S VIEWS.

It is no surprise to us, but no less gratifying to find Senator J. H. Mitchell not only in line with the best thought and purposes of the party but fearlessly and clearly defining his position.

In an interview published in the Oregonian he says of tariff revision: "I firmly believe nothing Congress could do would tend so strongly to the destruction of the good business conditions now prevailing as to enter upon a general revision of the tariff."

This is unquestionable true. Business conditions throughout the whole country were never better. There is very little of a merely speculative spirit entering into affairs.

Labor, skilled and unskilled never has been so fully employed nor so well remunerated as now. Prosperity is general, and since it is undoubtedly the result of republican policies and largely that of a protective tariff it would be most unwise for Congress to disturb any of the conditions which have contributed to it.

Trusts, demagogues and free traders declare, are products of protection. If it can be ascertained that the tariff creates, fosters or sustains trusts the senator would put their product on the free list, but he adds, "I apprehend that the tariff is not so responsible for the existence of the great trusts now in operation as many people suppose."

The senator knows what every intelligent man who has studied the subject knows that the great manufacturing trusts are necessary to the cheapest production and highest wage rate.

He favors reciprocity when it is truly reciprocal benefit, but he calls attention to the fact that nearly one-half of the commodities we now import is already embraced by the free list.

Something must be done to restore and strengthen our merchant marine. Senator Frye's scheme may be the best means, and if so, he says, "I should not be frightened at the word 'Subsidy,' but would support it."

He will favor the most drastic legislation within constitutional limitations for the suppression of anarchy and anarchists.

Oregon is fortunate in having an able, industrious and influential delegation in Congress. They know what they want and usually obtain as great a quantity of it for the state as many more populous states receive.

Trade Is Good.

During the past few days we have made inquiries of many of the leading merchants of Corvallis with a view to comparing business conditions of this year with those of a like period of last year. In no instance did one of our leading business men report a decline of trade.

making itself felt. Others have voiced the opinion that much of our increase in business is due to the many new comers who have located in Benton county during the past twelve months. That there is a reason for our industrial health and business growth none will dispute, and it is most likely due, not only to the location of many men of means who have located in this section during the past year, but to the fact that our farmers are getting their eyes open and doing business on progressive lines.

Selections from Roman History

A Literal Translation from Entropius by C. MacLean, Ph. D.—The First Punic War.

Although the city of Rome was now famous, yet its arms had not been carried beyond Italy for four hundred and seventy-seven years. That, therefore, it might be ascertained what the resources of the Romans were, a census was taken. Then there were found of citizens, although there had never ceased since the founding of the city, two hundred and ninety-two thousand, three hundred and thirty-four souls (lit. heads).

In the consulships of Lucius Manlius Vulso and Marcus Atilius Regulus the war was transferred to Africa. A battle was fought at sea against Hamilcar, the Carthaginian general, and he was conquered. For, having suffered the loss of sixty-four ships, he retreated. The Romans lost twenty-two [ships]. Moreover, having crossed into Africa, they accepted, upon its surrender, Clypea, a chief city of Africa. The consuls advanced as far as the neighborhood of Carthage, and after laying waste many strongholds, Manlius returned to Rome a conqueror and led back twenty-seven thousand prisoners of war. Atilius remained in Africa. He drew up his army in line of battle against the Carthaginians. Having fought three Carthaginian generals, he came out a conqueror. For he slew eighteen thousand of the enemy, captured five thousand with eighteen elephants, and received seventy-four cities under his protection [lit. in good faith].

Then the conquered Carthaginians asked for peace with the Romans. Whom Regulus was willing to grant peace only on severe terms, the Carthaginians asked aid from the Spartans. And under the leadership of Xanthipus, who had been sent by the Lacedaemonians, Regulus, the general of the Romans, was conquered with an exceedingly heavy loss. For only two thousand of all the Roman army escaped, [while] five hundred, together with Regulus, their commander, were captured; thirty thousand were slain, and Regulus himself was cast in chains.

AN AUSPICIOUS BEGINNING.

French E. Oliver, of Chicago, Assisted by His Brother as Musical Director at the M. E. Church.

Yesterday, a forward movement, which was planned some months ago, was begun. In the morning the audience room had to have chairs carried in to accommodate the crowd. The sermon was a logical, scholarly putting of genuine christianity in earnest as applied to the individual.

An interesting afternoon service was also held. In the evening the Evangelist lectured on "The Divine Origin of the Scriptures."

The main room was filled as also the annex to its full capacity. A choir of 25 presided over by W. R. Oliver was an interesting feature. He expects to add to the numbers. The lecture lasted for an hour and a half, and the congregation followed with interest from beginning to end. It was a clear, forcible putting of the question that elicited general expression of appreciation at the close of the service.

The pastor Rev. Frank L. Moon will be assisted each afternoon and evening this week by French E. Oliver, and W. R. Oliver will have charge of the music.
