Miss Edna Chandler has resigned her position at the Occidental hotel and expects to go to Albany in the immediate future.
The season for pheasant shooting will close Dec. 1st. During the last 15 days of November it will be lawful to sell the birds in the markets.
Hunters have only a few more days of the time prescribed by law for the killing of deer. The close season for these animals begins Nov. 1st.
A special freight train came up from Portland Wednesday. It arrives very early in the morning and the object of its run was to distribute empty cars along the line.
W. C. Corbett is doing a good business at his brick yard. There seems to be an unusual demand for brick at present for various purposes. Quite a number of wells are being sunk about the country and brick are demanded for curbing them.
The ladies of the Eastern Star had initiation of new members in their hall Tuesday night. During the evening vocal and instrumental music contributed to the pleasure of those present. Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the evening's festivities.
R. D. Burgess, who graduated with the class of '98 from O. A. C., has been visiting for the past week in this city. He goes from here to San Francisco. He spent last winter in Pennsylvania, but says nothing would induce him to reside in the East, after having learned to know the Pacific coast.

There was a double wedding solemnized last Sunday at the home of Mrs. Nancy Porter, near Monroe. The contracting parties were Fred Thad Thompson and Miss Nellie Porter, and Frank Porter and Miss Bertha Wigle. Rev. M. M. Waltz performed the ceremony. All parties are highly respected citizens of Monroe.
Monday, Dock Kiger sold his place in Blodgett's Valley to Mr. Van Alstein. The place comprises 175 acres of land and the consideration was $2,100, cash. Mr. Van Alstein has been residing in Monmouth during the past month or two, but he is a Michigan man and is a friend of Dr. Rowley, who recently arrived from that state.
A gentleman who hunts a great deal commented the other day on the difference between a bird and a rowl. A bluejay, a crow, or a pigeon we would class among the birds, while grouse, pheasants, quail, etc., are termed fowls. He stated that the difference lies in the fact that a bird carries food to its young, while a fowl takes its young to the food.

Students and citizens are reminded that there will be a game of football on the O. A. C. campus tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. The game is to be played between Albany and O. A. C. and is the first game played by the home boys in two years. That the contest will be interesting and exciting there is no doubt and everybody should support the boys in their athletic work.
Tuesday, Clerk Watters issued a marriage licence to Jasper G. Dennis and Miss Eva Loretta Zierolf, of Monroe. At nine o'clock the same morning, Father Jurek performed the ceremony at the Catholic church which made them man and wife. The bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Caspar Zierolf, a highly estimable young lady. Mr. Dennis is a business man of Monroe. We extend congratulations.
Talk about seeing things in a paper of tacks! Dick Smith, of J. R. Smith & Co., opened a box of these useful little articles the other day, and nicely stowed away was a note, written May 27, 1901, by Clell Miller at Madison, Indiana, in which the writer asked the finder to correspond with him regarding the country and its prospects. Dick is a democrat, but there are republicans in the firm and they will see that the note is answered.
E. A. Thayer came up from Salem, last Saturday, for a cruise about his old stamping grounds. He spoke of the exceptionally low stage of water in the Willamette this fall and said he would not be greatly surprised if no steamer reached Corvallis before the middle of next month. Mr. Thayer states that last fall the first boat reached Corvallis on the 25th day of October, just a year ago today. After a trip or two they were obliged to lay the boat off for a few days. Two years ago the Loats reached Corvallis on about the same date that they did last year, but were obliged to lay off for several weeks on account of low water. On Wednesday Mr. Thayer and his wife went up to Eugene for a brief visit.

Waldimar Knappich, manager of the Corvallis Creamery, went to Portland, yesterday, to be absent several days.
The ladies of the Presbyterian church realized the neat sum of $35 from the tamale supper given by them last Wednesday afternoon and evening.
Don't forget Dr. Lowe, the well known oculoptician will be in Corvallis Nov. 4, 5 and to noon of the 6th. His glasses strengthen the eyes and brain.
Rev. Booser will preach in the United Evangelical church Sunday morning and evening. A cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend these services.
The contract for supplying the Corvallis public schools with stationery was awarded to Allen & Woodward. The other bidders were C. A. Gerhard and Graham & Wells.

The GAZETTE foregoes return abundant thanks to James Bier for a liberal supply of his delightful soda pop, also to A. Kisor for an equally kind remembrance in the way of sweet cider. Truly, this has been a memorable week with us.
Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Tapeoot, who were married October 18th by Rev. F. L. Moore at the residence of Capt. J. W. Crawford in this city, went to Portland to reside Tuesday. Mr. Tapeoot will probably be employed this winter as pursuer on the Rutli, which runs between this city and Portland.
Mr. and Mrs. Ed Zeis arrived in Corvallis, yesterday, after several years' absence, during which time they have resided in Reading, Calif. They came up via San Francisco and Portland, and will visit Corvallis friends for a few days before proceeding to Eugene, where they will visit Mrs. Zeis' brother, Albert Appger.
Frank Soits arrived in Corvallis, Wednesday, from his home in the Five Rivers country. He brought out some potatoes that were the talk of the town, so large and fine were they. One of the potatoes was exhibited at this office and it measured nearly fourteen inches in length by a little over nine inches in circumference. Other potatoes that he brought out are said to have been even larger than the one brought to this office.

On Wednesday evening, October 23rd, at 7:30 o'clock, Mr. O. F. Mulkey and Miss Ida May Hotchkies were united in marriage by Rev. L. Myron Booser. Only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties were present. After the ceremony supper was served to the guests. Mr. and Mrs. Mulkey are well known young people of our city and their best of friends unite in hearty congratulations and best wishes. Corvallis will be their future home.

A letter received in this city a few days ago bore the information that Mrs. Agnes Thompson and daughters had arrived safely in Boise City, Idaho. They report having found the weather at Boise quite similar to the weather here during the past week or two, excepting the fact that there was an absence of fog in Boise. While, at the time of writing, they had not seen very much of the place, they were very favorably impressed with their surroundings. Their present address is 1605 Tenth Street, Boise City, Idaho.
In our last issue, we made mention of an old book, the property of S. A. Hemphill, which was printed in 1764, but Mr. J. E. Fowells, of this city, has one which antedates Mr. Hemphill's by 24 years. It was written by Henry Braeken, M. D., and was published in 1737, for J. Clarke, London. It is entitled "Farriery improved, or a complete treatise upon the art of Farriery, wherein is fully explained the nature, structure and mechanism of that noble and useful creature, the horse." The composition and press work is excellent. The binding is the same as that of Mr. Hemphill's volume, and is so substantial, that it is in perfect condition today.

MADE TO BE ENFORCED.

"The laws are on the Statute Books and their Enforcement is the Duty of the Officers," says Councilman Henkle.
A meeting of the city council was held Monday evening, the real purpose of which was to give the city attorney an opportunity to reply to the communication made by the chief of police to the council at its regular October meeting, wherein the chief stated that the city attorney had refused to prepare the complaint necessary to the arrest of Adam Assel for alleged violation of the Sunday closing law. However, much of the time of the meeting was consumed in a desultory discussion of the law itself and its enforcement; matters which had no place before that body. In the language of councilman Henkle: "The laws are on the statute books and their enforcement is the duty of the officers, and the whole matter is out of place in the council." The kernel of the matter before the council is this: What is the power and authority of the council, and what is the duty and authority of police officers, and of the city attorney in the matter of enforcement of ordinances?
Under the charter of the city of Corvallis the common council has power and authority "to pass any ordinance not repugnant to the laws of the United States or the law of the state of Oregon necessary or convenient for carrying such power or authority, or any part thereof, into effect."
When the council has enacted an ordinance and it has gone into effect, the charter provides that police officers "may make arrests for breach of the peace or commission of a crime within the limits of the city with or without a warrant, as a peace officer may do under the laws of the state," and "must execute all processes issued by the police judge or directed to him by any magistrate in this state in criminal matters," and shall exercise such additional powers as may be conferred upon him by ordinances.
Here in substance is the duty and authority of council and police officers. An arrest having been made, the culprit must be taken before the police judge, who has jurisdiction of all crimes and misdemeanors defined by ordinance of the city of Corvallis, and has the authority of a justice of the peace within the limits of the city, in both civil and criminal matters. Should the defendant plead "not guilty" when arraigned before the police judge, the law provides that he may have a jury trial.
Then, and not till then, are the services of the city attorney really in demand. A prudent officer may seek advice from the city attorney where there is doubt that the law has been violated, but the city attorney is under no legal obligation to give it. And there is no service in his power to perform in the matter of assisting in the apprehension and arrest of offenders, which the statutes of the state do not confer upon any other attorney. He is simply an attorney retained by the city to "give his advice and opinion in writing concerning any matter in which the city is interested, when required by the mayor or council or any committee of the council" and to "attend to all actions, suits and proceedings in which the city is legally interested, and attend to the prosecution of all persons charged with a violation of a city ordinance."
We have gone to some length to explain these matters, which it would seem all should understand, but that they do not is clearly proved when the council is asked to mediate a difference between the city attorney and a police officer.
All this has nothing to do with the Sunday closing law, and should have nothing to do with it. The council has said plainly, by ordinance, that it shall not be lawful for any person to sell or in any wise dispose of, within the corporate limits of the city of Corvallis, any spirituous or fermented malt liquors, or to keep open any place where spirituous or malt liquors are sold, on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, and the council can do no more. It is the duty of an officer to arrest any person who violates this ordinance. If the defendant stands trial and the ordinance is found to be unconstitutional it can and should be repealed. If he is found guilty there is punishment provided for the offense. It is reasonable to suppose that the council was in earnest when it passed these ordinances, and that it will repeal them when it no longer intends to support its officers in enforcing them.

Coming November 11th.
The date of the appearance of the Fischer-Van Cleve Co. in this city has been changed to the week beginning November 11th. Their opening bill will be "Jerry, the Tramp." The company has been appearing in Albany this week to crowded houses, and the papers in that city speak highly of the work of the various members of the cast. The Herald says:
"Last night, after an absence of five years, Bert Van Cleve, a native Albany boy, returned to his old home with his own company of players and presented "Jerry, the Tramp," to a packed house. It was standing room only from early in the evening and not one in the entire audience regretted being present.
"Bert comes back to us a polished and genteel actor, and is accompanied by a clever lot of show people. They are young, energetic and industrious and do their best to please. "Jerry, the Tramp," is a melodrama with a tinge of humor running through the lines. It is the story of a beautiful young girl who suffers because she is loved by two men, one a true sweetheart, who is a man of few words, but acts at the proper time, and the other is a scheming scoundrel, with murderous plots in his mind at every turn. Miss Babe Fischer is a pleasing and winsome little lady and acts the part remarkably well. She won the approval of the audience from the first act and they welcomed her appearance on the stage during the remainder of the piece."
Basket Social at Kings Valley.
The basket social at Kings Valley was a grand success, financially as well as socially. At a very early hour the congregation had assembled and the pastor led the meeting which was opened by a few selections from the hymnal, and by prayer.
W. L. Price then took charge of affairs to act as auctioneer. The bidding was rapid and interesting. The first sale was closed at eighty cents, and was the beginning of a continuous series of surprises, which developed at the third sale, into something very exciting, when a representation of a guitar beautifully decorated was sold for $3.25. Sales followed rapidly at good prices, with various shapes and sizes. Some being of the shape of heart, squares, diamond, stars and many others, all handsomely decorated. The highest figure reached was $4.10 which was bid on the basket of Mrs. John Price. The buyer was the Haskins school teacher.
The average of all sales was $1.65, and total amount was $63.20. This was a very much greater return than was expected and all who furnished baskets were highly pleased.
A more sociable gathering would be hard to find. There was "Peace on earth, good will toward men" in abundance and there was not one who was not glad to have been there. X.

Her Heart in Oregon.
Mrs. E. S. Murray, who is now a resident of Philadelphia, but who resided in Corvallis many years prior to 1900, has shown that her heart is still in Oregon by the active interest she has exhibited in the affairs of the state in general and old Benton in particular. Postmaster Johnson, vice-president of the Citizens' League, recently received the following letter from Mrs. Murray, which will prove interesting to her many friends in this city:
I have been watching with much interest the commendable work being done by the Citizen's League, and most especially in the descriptive Benton County Pamphlet. As it promised to be exactly the literature I have been needing in my little missionary work among the people whom I meet who show a desire for information about Oregon, "My Oregon" and have some inclination to seek a more general climate. I could raise a little colony to go to Oregon when we are ready to return, if I had the freedom of a man and could address them, and hold "Oregon meetings." I enclose fifty cents for five pamphlets.
Letter List.
For the week ending Oct. 19, 1901. Persons calling for these letters will please state date on which they were advertised. They will be charged at the rate of one cent each.

Selections from Roman History

A Literal Translation from Eutropius by C. Maclean, Ph. D.—The Heroism of Regulus.
After these misfortunes the Carthaginians requested Regulus, the general whom they had taken captive, to proceed to Rome, and to obtain peace from the Romans, and to exchange captives (lit. to make an exchange of captives). When he had come to Rome, and had been brought into the senate, he did not act at all as a Roman; but said that he had ceased to be a Roman from the day on which he had come into the power of the Africans. And consequently he released his wife from her marriage vows, and advised the senate that no peace should be made with the Carthaginians. For they, broken up with so many misfortunes, have no hope; (and as for himself) he is not of so much importance that so many thousands of captives should be returned on account of one, an old man, too, and a few men who had been taken captives from the Romans. And so he prevailed. For no one gave a hearing to the Carthaginians who had come to seek peace. He himself went back to Carthage, and when the Romans assured him that they would keep him at Rome, he said that he would not remain in that city in which, after he had served-as-a-slave the Carthaginians, he could not have the rights of an upright citizen. Having, therefore, returned to Africa he was put to death by all sorts of torture.
BATTLE OF LILYBAEUM—EXCHANGE OF CAPTIVES.
In the consulships of Cains Lutatius Catulus and Anlus Postumius Albinus, in the twenty-third year of the Punic war, a war was begun at the instance of Catulus against the Carthaginians. He (Catulus), set out with three hundred ships to Sicily; and the Carthaginians equipped four hundred against him. Never was a battle fought on the sea with such forces. Catulus embarked on his ship in a condition of bodily weakness, for he had been wounded in a former battle. The battle was fought with the skill and valor so characteristic of the Romans (lit. with the great bravery of the Romans—ingenti virtute Romanorum). For sixty-three ships of the Carthaginians were captured and one hundred and twenty-five sunk; thirty-two thousand of the enemy were captured and thirteen thousand killed; and an enormous quantity of gold, silver and other booty was brought into the possession (lit. power) of the Romans. Of the Roman fleet twelve ships were sunk. This battle was fought on the 10th of March. The Carthaginians at once sued for peace, and peace was granted to them. The Roman captives who were being held by the Carthaginians were returned. The Carthaginians also begged that those captives from Africa, whom the Romans were holding, should be allowed to be redeemed. The senate ordered that those who were in public custody should be given without a price, but that those who were held by private individuals might return to Carthage on the return of their masters of their price, and that this price should be paid out of the treasury rather than by the Carthaginians.
