

WORK FOR CONGRESS.

The approaching session of Congress promises to be a busy, possibly an eventful one. Many important measures are bound to come up for consideration and action.

Measures in repression of anarchy will be presented, and will doubtless give rise to much discussion. Some of this, it may be well supposed, will be quite acrimonious, for anarchists, under several names, are not without their sympathizers, even in congress. The political demagogue is certain to be in evidence on this question. However, there appears to be a well defined purpose to treat anarchists as public enemies and we feel assured that efficient measures will be enacted for their repression and punishment.

Reciprocity treaties will occupy much time in the senate, where several such treaties are already pending. It is remarkable that reciprocity meets most strenuous opposition by the opponents of protection. Free traders and "tariff-for-revenue only" adherents unite in opposition to reciprocity. They oppose all measures which are taken to enlarge our commerce with other nations by a system of reciprocal benefits because we do not wholly surrender the protective feature of our tariff laws. They studiously and determinedly labor to bring reciprocity into conflict with protection and so have held up several such treaties in the senate. Protection will be maintained, and reciprocity will be extended in spite of all opposition.

Legislation against trusts and corporations will be presented and discussed. It is difficult to see what congress can do in this connection even if it should appear that some of the great trusts and corporations are abusing their privileges. If protection aids them in this they will be divested of protection. This is about all congress can do. State legislatures, under our constitution, are the legislative bodies better able to deal efficiently with such organizations.

The construction of an isthmian canal will again come up and will as usual meet all the opposition the transcontinental railroads can arouse. We believe the measure has more determined friends now in congress than ever before. It is a measure of great importance to the Pacific Northwest, but we are not at all sanguine that this congress will do much to advance the project.

The shipping subsidy scheme will come up. Something should be done to encourage and build up our merchant marine. The cruisers and privateers of the Confederacy drove our carrying trade under the protection of foreign flags. It has been largely in the hands of foreigners ever since. Our navigation laws need revision, but it is doubtful if senator Frye's scheme of subsidy is the wisest plan. If it can be so modified as to be really beneficial and certainly instrumental in building up a merchant marine it should be adopted.

There will be some legislation relating to our insular possessions, and our relations with Cuba, but there is not likely to be much contention arise over it.

Appropriation bills will be subjected to the usual wrangling. We have a well-filled treasury. Revenue is flowing into the national coffers. We shall need it all, especially if we go forward with naval construction and build an isthmian canal. It is necessary to make large expenditures, but extravagance and waste must be avoided. The people will approve all useful and necessary appropriations of public moneys but there must be no squandering of their means.

What ever questions come before congress, Oregonians may confidently rest assured their delegation will be found active, vigilant and efficient.

Shooting Gallery Opened.

I have opened a shooting gallery one door north of Cameron's harness shop. Ladies are especially invited to try their skill with the rifle. Prizes will be given every Saturday night.

On Thanksgiving day I will hold a shooting match on the flat near Mary's river. Everybody is invited to take part.

BANNER SALVE

the most healing salve in the world.

Selections from Roman History

A Literal Translation from Eutropius by C. MacLean, Ph. D.—Caesar Conquers Gaul.—Civil War.

(Continued) In the six hundred and ninety-third year of the founding of the City, Caius Julius Caesar, who afterwards ruled as emperor, was made consul together with Lucius Bibulus. To him was decreed Gaul and Illyria with ten legions. He first conquered the Helvetians, who were called Sequani. Then by conquering in most serious war he advanced as far as the British Ocean. Moreover in nine years he subdued nearly all Gaul, which is between the Alps, the river Rhone, the Rhine and lies in a circuit about twice and thirty times a hundred thousand paces. He soon made war on the Britons, to whom before him not even the name of the Romans had been known. And when those were conquered, he, having received hostages, made [them] tributaries. But on Gaul he levied, under the name of tribute, an annual tax [of] four hundred times a hundred thousand sesterces each, and having attacked the Germans across the Rhine, he conquered [them] in very great battles. During so many successes he fought hardly thrice—once when present with the Avari and twice when absent in Germany. For his two lieutenants, Titurius and Aurunculeius, were killed by treachery.

From this time now followed the civil war—execrated and lamentable—by which besides calamities which happened in the battles even the state of the Roman people was changed. For Caesar, returning from Gaul, began to demand a second consulship [i. e. a second term,] and in such a manner that without any doubt it would be conferred on him. He was opposed by Marcellus, the consul, by Bibulus, by Pompey, by Cato, and his army being dismissed, he was ordered to return to the City. On account of this wrong, he came from Ariminum, where he kept his army collected, with an army against his native land. The consuls together with Pompey and the entire body of the Senate and all the nobility fled from the City, and crossed into Greece. In Epirus, Macedonia [and] Achaia the Senate, under the leadership of Pompey, prepared war against Caesar.

Denied the Dancers.

The city council met in regular session Monday evening, all members being present with the exception of Councilman Nolan.

The following emphatic communication was presented by Councilman Heckart. As soon as the fathers recovered from their consternation, a motion was made, making it necessary for all who wished the use of the hall to first get the consent of the council, and it was unanimously endorsed.

CORVALLIS, OR., Nov 11, 1901. Gentlemen:—To the city council: We as members of the Corvallis Fire Department appeal to the city council of Corvallis for the purpose to have the dances held by the said Social Club abolished. We firemen who oppose it are good active members and workers in the department. We sincerely object to the Social Club holding dances in our hall, because several members of the club are not firemen at all and they have as much right as we firemen, and we don't think it is just. So you, the council, had better see that those dances are not continued as several of the members will not work at any more fires, or else withdraw from the department. They mean just what they say, so you can choose for the welfare of the city a social club or a good fire department.

SEVERAL MEMBERS OF THE DEPARTMENT. The case of the city hall was placed in charge of the chief of police until the next meeting.

The matter of building a sidewalk in front of the Dr. Graham property on Seventh street was referred to the street committee.

Further time was given this committee in which to report on the matter of fixing crosswalks.

The fire and water committees adverse report in the matter of placing an electric light in front of the free reading room was adopted.

Only one bid was offered for the construction of a sewer in block 15, old town of Corvallis, that of J. R. Smith & Co. for $448.75. This was referred to the sewer committee.

The liquor license bonds of T. Whitehorn, J. G. Wuestefeld and B. R. Waldt were approved. Bills were allowed, amounting to $327.95 on the general, and $113.55 on the street fund.

Mrs. S. H. Allport, Johnstown, Pa., says: "Our little girl almost strangled to death with croup. The doctors said she couldn't live but she was instantly relieved by One Minute Cough Cure. Graham & Wells."
