

GERMAN TARIFFS.

Germany has enacted a tariff which is supposed will have the effect of prohibiting the importation of certain American products, especially of foodstuffs...

If it is the purpose of Germany to induce us to modify our tariff on their manufactures that we may sell our food supplies in her markets it will not avail her...

We supply about one third of the cereals and one seventh of the other foodstuffs Germany imports. She must either produce or import her food supplies...

We have demonstrated that though we are the greatest sugar consumers in the world we can produce beet sugar as easily as import it from Germany...

Selections from Roman History

A Literal Translation from Eutropius by C. MacLean, Ph. D.—The Rise of Octavianus—Second Triumvirate—Battle of Philippi.

About the seven hundredth year of the city and the ninth after the assassination of Caesar the civil wars were renewed, for the senate favored the murderers of Caesar...

When put to flight Antonius, having dismissed his army, fled to Lepidus who had been Master of the horse for Caesar and then had splendid forces of soldiers by whom he was welcomed [or received]...

Meanwhile Brutus and Cassius excited a great war. For many soldiers whom they had employed were in Macedonia and the East. Therefore Caesar Octavianus Augustus and Mark Antonia, for Lepidus had remained behind to protect Italy, marched against them...

Meanwhile Pompey violated the peace, and, conquered in a naval engagement, he was killed while fleeing to Asia. Antony, who was holding Asia and the East, having repudiated the sister of Caesar Augustus Octavianus, married Cleopatra, the queen of Egypt...
