

MERCHANT MARINE.

The Portland Oregonian thinks the president has not given the subject of merchant marine sufficient reflection. As evidence that the Oregonian has, it says: "Europe pays us for our food-stuffs largely with her services in the carrying trade. If we take that away from her she must either buy less food of us or else pay us for it with some other commodity. If we do this work ourselves it is perfectly certain either that Europe will deny itself to the value of our products for which its carrying trade pays, or else that our home products will be cut off from home markets to the extent of an equivalent value which Europe will be obliged to send us in place of the freights it has been earning."

Europe takes of our foodstuffs—our grain, flour, fish, and meats because she needs them and cannot produce them in quantities sufficient to supply her need. Her necessity, not the amount of her freight bill against us, is the measure of her demand for our food products. Europe must have these in no less quantities whoever is the carrier. It is equally certain we shall take from Europe no greater quantity of "some other," or any commodity than we need whoever may be the carrier.

The cost of carriage is to the consumer. We pay European ship-owners for carrying foreign products to us; Europe pays them for carrying our products to her. In either case necessity, present or prospective, determines the magnitude of the carrying trade, and this is true, as well, throughout the commercial world. Ship owners do not knowingly "carry coals to Newcastle."

If we had the only merchant marine afloat and conducted the carrying trade of the world there would be no less of it to do. We should do our share of it, at all events, if we had a creditable merchant fleet. Once we bid fair to wrest the supremacy from England. The sails of our merchantmen whitened every sea and our adventurous sailors carried our flag to every port.

The civil war virtually destroyed our merchant marine. Since then our own carrying trade, for the greater part has been in the hands of foreigners, and we cut no figure whatever in the carrying trade of the world.

The president seems to have given the subject sufficient reflection to enable him to name some of the reasons why our merchant marine is so insignificant. He points out "that the original cost of building American ships is greater than is the case abroad; that the wages paid American officers and seamen are very much higher than those paid of foreign competing countries, and that the standard of living on our ships is far superior to the standard of living on the ships of our commercial rivals."

There are many cogent reasons beside those of patriotism and national pride why we should build up a powerful merchant marine. Congress will no doubt take some measures for this purpose. If granting subsidy is the best measure, subsidy will be given. Other nations find this a very efficient auxiliary in building up and maintaining a merchant marine and so may we.

Meanwhile the Oregonian may find time for the "sufficient reflection" it evidently has not given to the subject.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE LAW.

Speaking of this law the president in his message says:—"Experience has shown the wisdom of its purposes, but has also shown possibly that some of its requirements are wrong, certainly that the means devised for the enforcement of its provisions are defective."

Whatever may be the defects of the law, and they are regarded as serious—the chief instrument devised for its enforcement is not only defective but notoriously inadequate to the task. This is a commission known as the Interstate Commerce Commission. This was first formed with Judge Cooley of Michigan as chairman. He was a man of high legal attainments, of unblemished character and of stern, unyielding integrity. There has never been any question that he did not conscientiously do his duty and strive to have the commission give the law right interpretation and just application. He utterly failed. It has been charged, in general terms of course, repeatedly in the press and from the platform that the commission was bought, bribed, corrupted, controlled, owned by the railway companies; that Judge Cooley was placed at the head of the commission that his well known character might be a foil, a shield, a screen for the corrupt practices of the other members. However true or false these charges may have been there is no question but Judge Cooley was bitterly disappointed by the conduct of the commission, and almost heart broken in consequence of the unenviable reputation it bore. The railway companies made no serious complaint, at any time, and this fact served but to the discredit of the commission. In the public mind the commission is utterly discredited, and congress can make no greater mistake than to rely upon such instrumentality for the administration of such laws as may be enacted for the government of interstate railways. Let congress pass just and reasonable laws to be administered by the courts. It can provide that they shall be administered speedily, inexpensively and effectively? Our people never placed much confidence in such commissions, and our experience with them has been anything but reassuring. Oregon made trial of a railroad commission and it is safe to say that it will be long before we repeat the experience.

HOMER'S ILIAD.

Book I—A Literal Translation by C. Maclean, Ph. D.

Vv. 53-100. Hera's Interposition and the Declaration of Kalchas:

For nine days the missiles of the god went sweeping through the army, and on the tenth [day] Achilles caused the people to be summoned to a council, for Hera, the white-armed goddess, put this in his heart. For she was grieved for the Danai, because she saw them dying. When, therefore, they were assembled and were met together [for this form of expression see Prayer Book, page 4, "When we assemble and met together to etc."] Achilles, swift as his feet, rising up in the midst, addressed them:

"O son of Atreus, now I think that we, driven back, will return home again, if, indeed, we would escape death, since, as it now appears, war and pestilence have united to subdue the Achaeans [it, since war and pestilence together will subdue —]. But come now, let us consult some seer, or priest, or even an interpreter of dreams—for a dream also is from Zeus—who might tell why Phoebus Apollo conceived such anger; whether he finds fault on account of a vow neglected, or on account of a hecatomb not offered, or perchance, in some way, he, having partaken of the savor of the fat of lambs and of choice goats, will be willing to ward off ruin from us."

Now, when he had thus spoken, he sat down, and there stood up in the midst of them, Kalchas, the son of Thestor, by far the best of soothsayers. He knew the things that are, the things that will be, and the things that were before; and, by his knowledge of divination which Phoebus Apollo gave to him, he guided the ships of the Achaeans all the way to Ilium. This one took part in the business of the council and addressed them: "O Achilles, dear to Zeus, thou summonest me to explain the wrath of Apollo—the far-darter king. I shall, therefore, speak: But do thou give heed, and swear to me that thou wilt surely and truly aid me by word and by deed. For of a truth I am of the opinion that I shall enrage a man who powerfully rules the Argives and to whom the Achaeans submit. For a king is superior when he is angry with an inferior; for even if he suppress his anger at the time, yet he afterward holds his grudge in his heart until he can make it effective. But make thou clear to myself whether or not thou wilt protect me."

Then Achilles, swift as to his feet, made answer, and said: "Very courageously tell thou the prophecy, whatever thou knowest! For not by Apollo dear to Zeus, by praying to whom, thou, O Kalchas, makest known to the Danai the oracle, no one, while I live and behold the ground, will lay heavy hands on thee near the hollow ships—not even if thou tell Agamemnon himself who now boasts that he is by far the bravest of the Achaeans."

And so the blameless seer took courage and spoke out: "Not then, indeed, on account of a vow, nor on account of a hecatomb, but on account of his priest, whom Agamemnon dishonored, he is offended, nor did he release his daughter, and did not even accept his gifts. On this account, then, the far-darter sent trouble, and will still send [them]. Nor will he restrain his hands, heavy with pestilence, until we restore to her dear father the quick-glancing maiden unbought, without ransom, and lead a sacred hecatomb to Chrysa. Then, having propitiated [him] we might persuade [him]."

A Wise Woman Or a wise man, for that matter, will read the ad of W. B. Satterlee and select therefrom the books to be used for holiday presents. These books are beautifully and substantially bound, and are first-class publications throughout. Nothing will be better appreciated by a friend or relative.

The Children's Friend.

You'll have a cold this winter. Maybe you have one now. Your children will suffer, too. For cough, croup, bronchitis, grip and other winter complaints One Minute Cough Cure never fails. Acts promptly. It is very pleasant to the taste and perfectly harmless. C. B. George, Winchester, Ky., writes: "Our little girl was attacked with croup late one night and was so hoarse she could hardly speak. We gave her a few doses of One Minute Cough Cure. It relieved her immediately and she went to sleep. When she awoke next morning she had no signs of hoarseness or croup."—Graham & Wells.

The manufacturers of Banner Salve have always believed that no doctor or medicine can cure in every case, but never having heard where Banner Salve failed to cure ulcers, sores, tetter, eczema or piles, as a matter of curiosity would like to know if there are such cases. If so they will gladly refund the money Graham & Wortham.

Brain-Food Nonsense.

Another ridiculous fad has been branded by the most competent authorities. They have dispelled the silly notion that one kind of food is needed for brain, another for muscles, and still another for bones. A correct diet will not only nourish a particular part of the body, but it will sustain every other part. Yet, however good your food may be, its nutriment is destroyed by indigestion or dyspepsia. You must prepare for their appearance or prevent their coming by taking regular doses of Green's August Flower, the favorite medicine of the healthy millions. A few doses aids digestion, stimulates the liver to healthy action, purifies the blood, and makes you feel buoyant and vigorous. You can get Dr. G. Green's, reliable remedies at Graham & Wortham. Modern Surgery Surpassed.

"While suffering from a bad case of piles I consulted a physician who advised me to try a box of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve," says G. F. Carter, Atlanta, Ga. "I procured a box and was entirely cured. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is a splendid cure for piles, giving relief instantly, and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers." Surgery is unnecessary to cure piles. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will cure any case. Cuts, bruises and all other wounds are also quickly cured by it. Beware of counterfeits.—Graham & Wells.

Editor Lynch of "Daily Post" Phillipsburg, N. J., has tested the merits of Foley's Honey and Tar with this result: "I have used a great many patent remedies in my family for coughs and colds, and I can honestly say your Honey and Tar is the best thing of the kind I have ever used and I cannot say too much in praise of it." Good Advice.

The most miserable beings in the world are those suffering from Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint. More than seventy-five per cent. of the people in the United States are afflicted with these two diseases, and their effects: such as Sour Stomach, Sick Headache, Habitual Constiveness, Palpitation of the Heart, Heart Burn, Waterbrash, Gnawing and Burning Pains at the pit of the Stomach, Yellow Skin, Coated Tongue and Disagreeable Taste in the Mouth, Coming up of Food after Eating, Low Spirits, etc. Go to your Druggist and get a bottle of August Flower for 75 cents. Two doses will relieve you. Try it. Get Green's Prize Almanac. Graham & Wortham.

Reliable and Gentle.

"A pill's a pill," says the saw. But there are pills and pills. You want a pill which is certain, thorough and gentle. Mustn't gripe. DeWitt's Little Early Risers fill the bill. Purely vegetable. Do not force but assist the bowels to act. Strengthen and invigorate. Small and easy to take.—Graham & Wells.

J. W. Bryan of Lowder, Ills., writes: "My little boy was very low with pneumonia. Unknown to the doctor, we gave him Foley's Honey and Tar. The result was magical and puzzled the doctor, as it immediately stopped the racking cough and he quickly recovered." Graham & Wortham.
