WHY NOVEL?

During the discussion of Cuban affairs in the house, Representative Jenkins of Wisconsin declared that "Cuba is now and has been since the Paris treaty under the sovereignty of the United States. She may be permitted to erect a government but not one of sovereignty." This is spoken of as a "novel theory."

Surely the first proposition is not the statement of a theory, but of a fact. By the Paris treaty Spain relinquished her sovereign rights over Cuba to the United States. Since the ratification of that treaty we have possessed all the rights of sovereignty over both Cuba and Porto Rico that Spain formerly possessed—an absolute and perfect sovereignty. This transfer of sovereignty over a people or territory is nothing new in the history of nations.

Mr. Jenkin's second proposition, "Cuba may be permitted to erect a government but not one of sovereignty" is not a theory, but a false statement of fact as to what disposition the United States may make of its sovereignty over the island. We may relinquish it to the Cubans. This is just what we are going to do. We propose shortly to turn the government of the islands over to the Cubans and to acknowledge their political independence. The moment we do this we relinquish our sovereignty for Cuba connot be independent while we exercise sovereign power and authority over her. It is of little moment that she has framed her organic law so that she accepts our tutelage to the exclusion of other nations It is of no consequence that she enters into the closest treaty relations with us, as a sovereign, independent nation she may change her organic instrument and we would be unable to prevent it. Just here lies the possibility that at some time in the future we shall be compelled to take forcible possession of Cuba from the Cubans, allied, it may be, with some other nation. This, though seeming to be altogether improbable, will always be a possibility with Cuba a sovereign, independent nation among the nations of the world.

Were Cuba retained by us as our territory, or were she to become a state in the American union she would "be permitted to erect a government but not one of sovereignty." We cannot retain our sovereignty over her because we have promised to give her political independence. If she comes into the Union it must be of her own volition. We now begin to see the mischief wrought, and the possibility of greater to be incurred, when we chose to follow over-slopping sentiment rather than practical good sense in our intervention between Spain and Cuba.

Some men profess to believe that like Texas, Cuba will, after a brief national independence, apply for admission to the Union. We do not think it very probable. Texas was Americanized. It was Americans who achieved her independence. Naturally Texans looked to statehood in the Union as their highest political purpose. As a matter of fact Texas was Americanized and her independence wrested from Mexico that she might be brought into the Union in the interest of the slave holding states.

No such incentives to Americanize Cuba exist. She will be Americanized; but it will be through the avenues of trade and commerce. There can be little doubt if we gave Cuba no special commercial advantages with us the Cubans would take the only course then remaining to them of securing such advantages; that is they would become a state of the Union. But here again sentiment influences us to give them well-grounded hope that they may secure all the commercial advantages accruing from that relation and yet maintain an independent and sovereign status among the nations.

Our course is fatuitous. We are delaying the assumption on part of Cuba of the only relation to us that can most rapidly and surely promote all her best interests and would as surely be to our greatest advantage. Why, forsooth? That we may gratify our sentimental vanity; that a few ambitious Cubans may demonstrate to the world how unfitted they are to exercise national sovereignty. Fortunate indeed shall we be if, from the seed of flowery sentiment we have so foolishly sown, we do not reap a harvest of dragon's teeth.

CHILDREN ESPECIALLY LIABLE.

Burns, bruises and cuts are extremely painful and if neglected often result in blood poisoning. Children are especially liable to such mishaps because not so careful. As a remedy DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is unequalled. Draws out the fire, stops the pain, soon heals the wound. Beware of counterfeits. Sure cures for piles. "DeWitt's Witch Hazle Salve cured my baby of eczema after two physicians gave her up," writes James Meck N. Webster, Ind. "The sores were so bad she soiled two to five dresses a day."
