Will Fechter arrived in Corvallis, Tuesday morning, from Pendleton. He brought his young son down with him and left the little fellow with his grandfather, A. M. Witham. The boy has not been very well of late and Mr. Fechter brought him down here in hopes that the change would prove beneficial. Mr. Fechter is running a confectionary establishment and says he is doing a good business and is well pleased with his business prospects in Pendleton.

A young man, who has only been married a month or two, was told by his wife the other morning that if he would get her some butter-milk she would make him some hot cakes like his mother used to serve. He thought it would look a little too much like a family man to be seen carrying a jug of butter-milk on the streets in broad day, so he procured a glass fruit jar and placed it in a paper sack and proceeded to the Kaupisch creamery, where he was provided with the "mother" of hot cakes. He then started for home, this young married man. It was a rainy day and when Frank had reached a conspicuous spot combined dampness and the weight of the jar caused the bottom to drop out of the sack and the jar was broken to "smithereens" on the pavement. Frank did not tarry to gather up the milk or the pieces.

Herr Bahhorn, the magician and healer, visited our town last week, says the Oakville correspondent to the Albany Herald. He was accompanied by his small family, consisting of eight daughters and two sons, who are all actors and singers. They gave two free exhibitions and the doctor removed all the warts off the hands of the boys (girls don't have warts) in the large audience and sold an immense amount of Hamburg oil. He offered to cure the deaf and restore the sight of the blind. After giving us two free exhibitions, he charged an admission fee of ten cents for the third evening and the entertainment was well worth the money. The small girls are good actors and singers, and the Prof. is hard to beat as an actor. Come again, Herr! Mr. Bahhorn, and his family reside in this city.

Daniel Cameron, who was up from Portland to see his mother, who was not expected to live, returned home during the first of the week. His mother was so much improved that he felt that he could safely return home.

Mrs. Reavis, who, together with her husband, arrived recently in Corvallis, left Wednesday for Chehalis, Wash. Mr. Reavis purchased two acres of land in Wells and McElroy's addition shortly after coming here and has erected a neat cottage, which, our informant states, will be occupied by the old gentleman alone in the future.

Republican primaries were held in Benton county yesterday afternoon. The feeble flame of interest that made its appearance a couple of days ago was fanned into a blaze of good-natured rivalry when two sets of delegates for the convention were placed in nomination in a number of precincts in Corvallis. THE GAZETTE went to press too early to obtain the names of the successful candidates.

A gymnastic exhibition will be given at the armory this evening, in which the entire physical culture class will take part. The exercises will include three bouts in boxing between light, middle and heavy weights, and three similar bouts in wrestling for medals. The sophomore girls will give a drill in Swedish gymnastics, the second year boys' class will appear in the German drill system, and there will be horizontal and parallel bar and other exercises. The entertainment begins at eight.

J. D. Zuecher returned from Salem Wednesday, where he had been to attend a meeting of the executive committee of the Inter-collegiate Oratorical Association, called to determine the winner of the late contest. The committee decided not to interfere with the decision by which W. G. Hale, of Pacific University, was awarded the medal in the oratorical contest last Friday. The award having been made in accordance with the manifest intention of the judges, the committee did not deem it proper to change the decision because of a clerical error in transcribing intermediate figures.

Charged With Sheep Stealing.

Deputy Prosecuting Attorney E. R. Bryson was called to Alsea Tuesday to hear a case before Justice Abe Clark. A warrant had been sworn out for the arrest of J. R. Allen by A. J. Brown, charging the former with the crime of stealing sheep.

Attorney Bryson arrived at court in the Alsea Valley about 7 o'clock Tuesday evening, after a most fatiguing ride over the mountain, and found his honor and the various witnesses awaiting his coming. The defendant waived examination, but Attorney Bryson prosecuted his case, with the result that Allen is now in jail in this city awaiting trial at the coming term of Circuit court. The facts brought out at the preliminary hearing are about as follows:

A. J. Brown, who lives in Alsea, missed a lamb from his flock some time in October last. A few days later Mrs. Hogue informed Mr. Brown that his lamb was at J. R. Allen's place at Waldport. Mr. Brown made investigation and found his property. Mr. Allen offered him $5 for the lamb. It seems that the defendant drove a band of sheep past Brown's place about the time the lamb disappeared and the little animal became detached from its mother.

The Furniture Factory.

The Corvallis Furniture Factory is at present inoperative, owing to the fact that the proprietors are unable to secure wood for the manufacture of furniture and for fuel to furnish power. Orders have been placed for both and it is hoped that ere long affairs will so shape themselves that the whirr of machinery will again be heard at this establishment. The proprietors are R. C. Colbert and W. L. Gregory. They got in here too late last season to place contracts for all the material they will need at present, but they have a bright outlook and are confident that in time they will be enabled to secure materials for their use so that they may operate their plant steadily.

A visit to the factory disclosed the fact that they have all of the latest and best machinery, including planer, sticker, joiner, tenon, mortising machine, shaper, band saw, lathe, rip and cut-off saws, sand-papering machine, etc. They have a 64-horse power, Nagle boiler, which drives a very neat engine. They have a dry kiln and the exhaust from the engine is piped through the kiln and furnishes an immense amount of heat, in fact, all that is necessary. When the factory is operated at its full capacity it will give employment to ten or twelve men.

Their aim is to manufacture furniture of oak and ash. They will make a specialty of various kinds of mouldings and will cater to the local market for job work in their line. They also have in view the manufacture of a unique refrigerator.

This new industry should receive all encouragement at the hands of our people. It is a new spoke in our industrial wheel and adds to the importance of our city and county. Every new whistle that blows, wheel or saw that turns, gives employment for labor, creates a demand for raw material and gives our community a pay roll. Therefore stand by all of them and on every possible occasion give them a "boost."

O. A. C. Items.

Mr. Chas. Conner, the student who was taken from Cauthorn Hall to Portland to undergo a surgical operation, is improving rapidly. His father was able to return to his home last week.

Ralph Thompson, an O. A. C. student from Heppner, Oregon, underwent a surgical operation in Portland, last week. A small bone was removed from the ear drum, and at last reports he was doing nicely.

Miss Chamberlain was a guest of Salem friends over Sunday.

The following ladies of Alpha Hall attended the oratorical contest in Salem: Misses Davis, Roberts, Stewart, Buxton, Gaffield, Ewing, Thompson, Yeager and Webb.

A pleasant event of the season was a Whist party, given by Miss Mabel Withycombe, last Friday evening, to a number of her friends. After a few games of whist, the guests retired to the dining room, which was beautifully decorated with daffodils, where dainty refreshments were served. Those present were: Misses Telfer, Sears, Kathleen Canfield and Messrs Paulson, Hirtzel, Bryant, Cupper and John Withycombe.

Mr. Will Smith, an O. A. C. student whose home is in Sheridan, is suffering from an attack of spinal meningitis. At last reports he was quite dangerously ill.

More About the Sword.

Further information regarding the sword that was recently found in the ice factory has been furnished by Louis Zeis. The sword was formerly the property of Lieut. G. F. Dennick and some seven or eight years ago the widow and her family moved over to Waldport. When the family left Corvallis the sword was casted off with a lot of rubbish and thrown away in the vicinity of Crystal Lake cemetery. A small boy found it and gave it to one of the younger Zeis boys. Nothing was thought of it and the youngster used it as a plaything at various intervals for years. The sword having been thrown away, it was not considered to have any value to anybody. There was never any intention on the part of the boys to secrete the sword and it occupied various niches and corners about the ice factory. Mr. Zeis kindly furnished us the above information regarding the matter, as he feared that those who were not acquainted with the younger brother might think that the matter reflected on him. In this Mr. Zeis is greatly mistaken, for any person who knows the family will vouch for the fact that they are, without exception, above any such suspicion.

Circuit Court.

Tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock Judge Hamilton will hold a preliminary term of court, at which time things will be arranged for the regular spring term of the Circuit court, which will open at 9 o'clock Monday morning. The docket for this term is the lightest in years, in fact, one of the lightest in the history of the county. There are only twenty cases on the docket. Ten of these were continued from the last term; so that in all there are only ten new cases. There are two state cases; one is the state against Chas. Thomas, for passing fraudulent checks, and the other is the case of Pearl Cooper, who shot a Summit party in the arm early last fall. Cooper was tried and acquitted at the last term of the Circuit court on the charge of assault and battery. Now he will again have to appear on the charge of carrying concealed weapons. The balance of the docket is made up of suits for divorce, to perfect titles, actions for foreclosure of mortgages, etc.

Sick Among Strangers.

David Meskimen, of Stafford, Kas., is lying dangerously ill with pneumonia at the Occidental hotel in this city. He arrived Tuesday on the noon train in a state of delirium. His actions attracted the attention of a number of business men, whose places he visited, and finally Chief Alexander, who was at dinner, was telephoned for. He questioned the stranger, but could get nothing rational from him, except that his name was David Meskimen. He was taken to the Occidental and Dr. Altman was called. The doctor found the patient suffering with a severe attack of pneumonia. In the presence of witnesses his pockets were searched. They were found to contain a draft for $1490, a promissory note and papers which showed that Mr. Meskimen's home was at Stafford, Kas. A telegram was immediately sent to that city and in the meantime the patient was receiving every attention. Yesterday about noon a telegram from Mr. Meskimen's son announced that he would start for Corvallis immediately.

A further search yesterday revealed $52.18 in Mr. Meskimen's pockets and papers in his trunk, showing him to be a veteran of the civil war, drawing a pension of $51 per quarter.

HOMER'S ILIAD.

Book II—A Literal Translation by C. MacLean, Ph. D.

Vv. 333-395.—The speech of Nestor and Agamemnon's reply:

Thus he spoke, and the Argives shouted exceedingly praising the speech of the divine Odysseus—so that the ships resounded terribly all around, by reason of the shouting of the Achaeans.

Then also Nestor, the Gerenian Knight, addressed them:

"O fie! Ye now talk in a manner befitting children—young children whom the conflicts of war do not at all concern. Whither now will our compact and solemn pledges go [i. e. What will become of compacts if no one will care to keep them? Note: The reference is to the solemn sacrifice at Aulis described in Vv. 286, etc.]? In the fire may fall both the counsels and the plans of men, both the libations of wine unmixed with water and the (extended) right hands (i. e. pledges given by the right hand) in which we trusted. For mark you, to no purpose do we contend with words, and are not at all able to find a way of relief (from this contest of words to come to deeds and the conquest of Troy), although we are here a long time. But do thou, son of Atreus, holding firmly to thy purpose (to conquer Troy) as in the past, so in the future lead the Argives to the mighty conflict, and do thou suffer those to perish, one and two (i. e. here, one or two), who plan apart from the Achaeans (Note: The reference is no doubt to such men as Thersites), but there will be no accomplishment of their plans, to go to Argos even before they know whether the promise of the Aegis-bearing Zeus is false, or so. For I say that the all-powerful son of Kronos certainly nodded assent on that day, when the Argives embarked in their swift ships carrying slaughter and death to the Trojans, sending lightning on our right, causing favorable omens to appear. For this reason let no one be in haste to return home before that each one has lain with the wife of a Trojan, and has avenged all the sorrow and the groans (of the Achaeans) for Helen. But if any one earnestly desires to return home, let him touch his well-decked, black ship [to draw it to the sea], that he may meet death and destruction before the rest [i. e. before those who remain to capture Troy]. But, O king, do thou both plan well thyself and be persuaded by another, not to be thrown away by these shall my word be, whatever I say. Agamemnon, separate the men according to their tribes, according to their clans (See Joshua 7:14—), in order that clan may aid its clan and tribe its tribe. If thou wilt thus do, and that the Achaeans will obey thee, thou wilt then know both who of the chieftains may be a coward, and who of the people, and who perchance may be brave: for they will fight by themselves. Then also thou mayest know whether by the decree of the gods thou destroyest not the city or only the cowardice of the men and want of skill in the art of war."
