Two of the principal musicians with the Portland Symphony orchestra, which rendered such splendid music during the Festival, were old Corvallis boys: H. H. Samuels, cornetist and Frank Martyn, double bass.

Dr. Lowe, the oculo-optician has been coming to Corvallis over ten years. If he did not give general satisfaction it would not pay him to continue his visits; therefore, he surely must be well qualified in his profession.

The various O A C societies having chosen their representatives on the editorial staff of the O A C Barometer for the next year. That body met last Tuesday and elected J. Edwin Johnson editor-in-chief and John Gault business manager.

Wednesday and Thursday afternoons the students of O A C were granted half holidays. Many of the professors, as well as the students, took part in the oratorios and were obliged to attend rehearsals and for this reason were granted time off.

It is evident from the arrangements that are in progress that the grange picnic that is to be given at Willamette Grange Hall, a week from tomorrow, will be a decided success in every way. It is quite likely that the O A C Band boys will be employed to furnish music for the occasion.

Mrs. T. W. Graves and Mrs. S. E. Harris, of Astoria, were the guests of Mrs. J. M. Cameron for a few days last week. They took their departure for home, Monday. Mrs. Graves recently took the civil service examination and has received an appointment as instructor in an Indian school in Wyoming. She will enter upon her duties at once.

W. Schult, a relative of John Schult of this city, arrived in Corvallis last Tuesday from Denver, Colorado. He has been in Denver for the past three years, but his home is in Iowa. He was accompanied to this city by F. W. Seck, of Iowa. They are both wide-awake young men, close friends, and are out here on a tour of inspection. It is possible that they may be persuaded to remain in Benton.

A recent letter from Ira Hunter, dated at Waterville, Wash., to a friend in this city, states that Mrs. Hunter is hovering between life and death. She has been confined to her bed for so long that she is little more than a skeleton. Little hope is entertained of her recovery. Mrs. Fred Hunter, who with her husband resides at the same place, is just recovering from the worst case of smallpox known in that country.

LOOKS GOOD FOR FURNISH.

He was given a Rousing Reception in Corvallis. A Large Audience Listened to the Addresses at the Opera House.

Comparisons may be odious, but resort to comparison is sometimes the best measure of a situation. No one who witnessed the small interest manifested in the coming of Mr. Chamberlain and the democratic campaign party to Corvallis during his stay here, can compare it with the rousing welcome given Mr. Furnish and Mr. Fulton, and the enthusiasm which prevailed during and after the exercises at the Opera House, Tuesday, and find in this comparison any evidence of a Chamberlain landslide or a ghost of a show for the success of the party he represents.

When the republican gubernatorial candidate and Mr. Fulton arrived on the noon train they were met by the cheers of an enthusiastic assemblage and the stirring music of the Cadet Band of the Oregon Agricultural College. Headed by this organization, the procession formed and escorted the distinguished visitors to the Occidental Hotel.

The addresses at the Opera House at 2:30 attracted an audience that over flowed the lower floor, and it was found necessary to throw open the gallery. County Chairman G. W. Denman called the meeting to order, and introduced Hon. E. H. Belknap who presided. Mr. Belknap made a stirring speech at the conclusion of which he presented Hon. W. J. Furnish, Oregon's next governor. The applause which greeted Mr. Furnish was hearty and prolonged. In a few brief words Mr. Furnish told what policy he would pursue if elected governor. He said: "I can promise the people of the state of Oregon that when I am elected governor their every right shall be deeply respected. I believe that I can truthfully say that when my term shall have expired the people will have no cause for complaint against my administration."

I have been told, said Mr. Furnish, that the report is being circulated that I will be disposed to divide the Agricultural College and start a branch institution in Eastern Oregon. Have no fear in this direction. I shall do all in my power to maintain the integrity of that splendid institution. At the close of Mr. Furnish's remarks, Hon. C. W. Fulton was introduced as the speaker of the day. A storm of applause welcomed Mr. Fulton, and during the course of his address, cheers interrupted his remarks. Mr. Fulton's throat is troubling him severely and it was necessary for him to come off of the platform on to the main floor, that he might speak with less exertion. The speaker began by calling the attention of his hearers to the character of campaign being carried on by the opposition. Mr. Chamberlain is going about the state with a paint pot in each hand. Out of one he is picturing himself as the paragon of public and private virtue, the cynosure of the democratic political constellation, the beau ideal of the royal and select order of hail fellows. Out of the other he is daubing a distorted picture in dirty colors and labeling it "W. J. Furnish." If Mr. Chamberlain had that sense of modesty common to ordinary people, said Mr. Fulton, I believe he would leave the task of eulogizing himself to some third party. I have been with Mr. Furnish throughout this campaign, and I have the first time to hear him say an unkind word, either privately or in public concerning his opponent.

Referring to Mr. Chamberlain's evasion of the Philippine plank in the democratic state platform and his statement that a party stood on one national platform until another had been adopted, Mr. Fulton called attention to the fact that by his own admission Mr. Chamberlain still stands on the democratic national platform of 1900 which declares for scuttling.

The speaker quoted Mr. Chamberlain's statement that the constitution of this state had been violated when its officers were receiving greater remuneration for their services than that document provided for, and then drew attention to Mr. Chamberlain's saving second thought when the idea dawned upon him that if by some mischance he should be elected he would want a greater salary than the $1500 provided by the constitution, and Mr. Chamberlain said: "I have no doubt that the legislature has the power to place each and all of the constitutional officers on flat salaries notwithstanding the apparent limitation contained in the constitution itself." After roaring about violation of the constitution, Mr. Chamberlain finally discovered that the constitutional limitation is only "apparent."

KNOWN HIM SEVENTEEN YEARS.

W. H. Currin Pays a High Tribute to the Character and Business Ability of C. E. Woodson.

Corvallis, Ore., May 14, 1902. Editor GAZETTE: I understand that interested parties, in an attempt to injure Mr. C. E. Woodson in his candidacy for judge of this county in the coming election, are circulating the report that nobody in this county knows anything of Mr. Woodson previous to the time of his coming to Corvallis about three years ago; that it is being insinuated that he is weak and iratic in character and habits, and is a man of no business ability. These reports will, of course, have no weight with business men and citizens of Corvallis, who have learned to regard Mr. Woodson as a man of firm character, pure in his social life, and a leader in all public movements tending to the up-building of this community and Benton county. But those persons in distant parts of the county who have no personal acquaintance with Mr. Woodson, and whom these reports are designed to influence, should not be deceived by them.

A high regard for Mr. Woodson, which has grown out of an intimate acquaintance with him for the past seventeen years, moves me to write this article in his behalf. As I say, I have known Mr. Woodson for the past seventeen years. I have found him to possess qualities of sterling worth. My first acquaintance with him began in Clackamas county, where he had the confidence and esteem of all with whom he came in contact. I have watched him gradually work his way upward. I have known him as a farm laborer, as a stage driver, as a clerk in a general merchandise store, where all the duties and responsibilities of manager were reposed in him; as a student, as an instructor in the university, as a lawyer, and he has always been successful in his every undertaking.

FOURTH ANNUAL FESTIVAL.

A Grand Musical and Financial Success. The Event of the Year in this State.

When the Willamette Valley Choral Union was organized four years ago, its promoters did not dare to hope that their earnest wishes for its great success would in this May-morn of its youth reach so glorious a consummation as that realized at the Festival, which has just closed in this city.

When, through the efforts of Mr. Wallis Nash, Corvallis was selected as the place to hold the Festival in 1902, timid ones said "We cannot hope to equal what has been accomplished by Salem, Eugene and Albany." But Mr. Nash, Mr. B. W. Johnson and those other indomitable gentlemen into whose hand the management of this event was placed, answered: "A high standard has been set, the labor will be great and the responsibility is enormous, but with the people of old Corvallis at our back we will master the task imposed." Their success is manifest and the completion of their purpose is well worth the labor of attaining, and the result is a musical triumph for these gentlemen, for the performers, soloists, chorus and orchestra; for Corvallis, the state of Oregon and the Northwest. It is the musical event in the history of this section of the country.

The concert by the members of the Portland Symphony Orchestra, Tuesday night, was a most auspicious introduction to this feast of music and of song. The orchestra program included selections from Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Moszkowski and Greig. W. Gifford Nash conducted. Such music as these forty players rendered has rarely been equalled on this coast. The audience sat entranced. Moszkowski's "From Foreign Parts," drew such a storm of applause that it was repeated.

Mr. Frazer received an encore for his daintily-rendered piano solo. The soprano solo, from Tannhauser, by Mrs. Rose Bloch-Bauer was to many the event of the program and they waited with eager delight for her appearance. No higher compliment could have been paid Mrs. Bauer than the glad acclaim accorded her performance. Nature has endowed this little lady with a magnificent vocal organ, and been lavish in her bestowal of the dramatic instinct.

Near the close of the program the orchestra responded with two extras in recognition of the appreciation which had been shown by the audience. Lack of space precludes attention to the oratorios rendered Wednesday and Thursday nights, an account of which will appear in our next issue.

Mrs. Eliza Brooker.

The death of Mrs. Eliza Brooker occurred in this city last Sunday and the following day the remains were taken to Portland and interred in the Lone Fir cemetery. The cause of death was Bright's Disease, with which she had suffered for two months prior to her death. It had been the intention of Mr. and Mrs. Brooker to move to Portland during the fore part of next month to take up their residence, had Mrs. Brooker lived.

Mr. and Mrs. Brooker came from England to Corvallis in 1879, where they lived until 1891, when they moved to Portland. They made their home on East Side for several years, when they removed to Corvallis. Her husband, Richard Brooker, was in partnership with J. A. Wilson in an extensive sheep ranch near Corvallis. Mrs. Brooker was 65 years of age, and was a woman of highest worth. Her husband survives her.

Mrs. Icy Plummer.

Mrs. Icy Plummer died at the home of her sister, Mrs. Cathy, in this city, Saturday, after an illness of sixteen months. Twelve or thirteen years ago Mrs. Plummer fell a victim to cancer of the breast. Although a severe operation for its removal had been performed the dread disease refused to be conquered and death finally resulted. During all the period of pain and suffering which has followed the first appearance of this affliction, Mrs. Plummer was patient and uncomplaining. She bore it all with christian fortitude and womanly resignation, until God placed His finger on her and she slept.

The funeral occurred from the Cathy residence at 12 o'clock Sunday. Rev. L. R. Bond, of Sodusville, formerly Mrs. Plummer's pastor, conducted the service assisted by Rev. Moore and Rev. Moses. The remains were taken to Pomeroy, Wash., for interment, accompanied by two sisters of the deceased, Mrs. Cathy and Mrs. Hartford, of Salem, and a brother, James McFerron.

Wednesday and until noon of Saturday, May 21, 22, 23 and 24th, Dr. C. W. Lowe, the well-known oculo-optician who has been coming to Corvallis for over ten years, will be at the Occidental hotel.
