LOCAL NEWS.

Calling cards for the ladies at the GAZETTE office.

The county Sunday school convention will meet in the Methodist church in this city, June 7th and 8th.

Lowe's Madison Square Theatre Company will entertain the public in the local opera house every night this week.

U. S. Grant, of Siletz, passed through Corvallis, Friday, enroute for Grande Ronde, where he has business for a few days.

Benjamin Battain and wife, of Box, Oregon, arrived in Corvallis, Friday to transact some business of importance. Mr. Battain is the merchant of Box and he took a load of merchandise back with him.

W. O. Heckart, who returned from Eugene recently, has many words of praise for our sister city. He says that there is much building of a substantial nature in progress there and on every hand there is an evidence of thrifty business enterprises.

There was a picnic at Hulbert's Grove, in Linn county, three miles east of Corvallis, Saturday. The day was ideal and quite a number of our citizens drove over and enjoyed their luncheon in the shade of the grove. Speeches and various other features were the order of the day and a fine time is reported.

The trainmen's excursion from Albany to The Dalles, Sunday, was a most successful affair. Quite a number of Corvallis citizens drove over to Albany early in the morning and took advantage of the opportunity to see the scenery along the Columbia river—the grandest natural scenery in the world.

S. R. Slayton returned Friday from Corvallis, where he has been sojourning for the past winter with relatives.—Prineville Journal. Mr. Slayton will be remembered by Lebanon people as the man whose wife was injured by falling from a grade in the mountains and who died in this city at the home of Mrs. W. H. Reed, last September.—Criterion.

Workmen have been busy for the past week remodeling the interior of the bakery and confectionery establishment of H. W. Hall. The partition separating the dining room and the front portion has been moved back. The room thus formed in the rear of the store will be used as an ice cream parlor. The whole interior has been repapered and repainted, and presents a neat and attractive appearance.

Friday, A. C. White, who came to Corvallis last fall and took up his residence with us, received a telegram from Denver, Colorado, announcing the death of his oldest brother, U. H. White. The death came unexpectedly to Mr. White, as he was not aware of his brother's illness. The deceased was 67 years of age and the oldest of nine children. His wife is the only member of his immediate family who survives him, as his children are dead. The remains were taken to Council Bluffs, Iowa, the home of the deceased, for interment.

Fred Herbold, the well known foot-ball coach who will have charge of O. A. C.'s eleven next fall, arrived in Corvallis last Friday and departed for Butte, Montana, the following morning. He left Butte the Sunday previous to come down to Lane county and attend business matters connected with a timber claim. While on the trip he embraced the opportunity to visit the boys whom he is to coach next fall. He speaks well of the outlook and the O. A. C. boys have all confidence in him. He is an experienced player and aside from his local reputation has a splendid record with teams in other states. He is a young fellow, large, active and muscular, and has a hearty, whole-souled manner that will inspire confidence and cause the boys to rally about him. He will be back here on the 18th of September.

The session of the Grand Lodge of Old Fellows of Oregon, held in Newport last week, were most enjoyable and entertaining throughout. It is estimated that 700 or 800 Odd Fellows, members of the Encampment and the Rebekahs were in attendance. The people of Newport are highly spoken of for the manner in which they entertained their visitors. Tuesday was consumed by the Rebekahs and members of the encampment, while Wednesday and Thursday was given over to the work of the Grand Lodge proper. One of the features of entertainment that is particularly spoken of was the drill of the United States life saving crew that is stationed at Newport. The various maneuvers of the drill, their work in the boat, the agile manner in which they went up the craft and right it and set it again, while afloat, caused much comment and was a very entertaining feature.

W. A. Sanders, Jeweler.

S. L. Kline returned Thursday from a visit of some length with his family in San Francisco.

J. F. Yates and wife, delegates to the State Grange, which convenes today, left for Salem yesterday to attend the meeting of that body.

Something for the ladies at the GAZETTE office. A fine line of calling cards. Come in and have some printed while you wait.

Charley Hornung, who has been in Corvallis attending business matters for the past two weeks, expects to leave in a few days for Ephrata, Douglas county, Washington.

Lowe's Madison Square Theatre Company are in the city and will present a series of plays in the local opera house during the week. The troupe comes well recommended.

At a meeting of the Degree of Honor, Friday evening, Mrs. Taylor Porter was unanimously chosen as delegate to the meeting of the Grand Lodge of the A. O. U. W. of Oregon which convenes in Portland next month. Mrs. F. P. Shear-green was elected alternate.

There is talk of an excursion given in honor of the A. O. U. W. of Oregon some time in June. It is proposed to run a train over the West Side from Portland to Corvallis, thence across to Albany and down the East Side to Portland. This is a matter that is not yet fully determined upon.

Saturday afternoon, Bryant Young and son, Charley, who are to put up a warehouse and wood shed on the lot back of the GAZETTE office, furnished some diversion for a number of our citizens. Mr. Blakelee was employed to pull the upper portion of the old engine house bell tower over. For this purpose he used a horse and a capstair. The tower was pulled over in this manner without any mishap.

The remains of Ben Tracy, who was murdered at Junction City last week, were brought down to the Newton cemetery, Thursday for interment. Mr. Tracy was at one time a resident of this city and had many friends here. The reason for burying him there was on account of his first wife being buried at that place. In the absence of a clergyman W. E. Yates, of this city, delivered the funeral sermon, and he is said to have made some very appropriate remarks.

W. O. Heckart and W. W. Calkins returned from Eugene last Friday. Mr. Heckart has the contract for erecting a fine residence at Eugene for Mr. Calkins. While in Eugene Mr. Heckart let the contract for the construction of a stone basement, which will have a rise of three feet. There will be a 7-foot basement. The lumber was also contracted for. Mr. Heckart expects to go to Eugene to begin work about the middle of June.

Charles Morgan, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Morgan of this city, who enlisted in the U. S. navy some months ago and is stationed at Goat Island, San Francisco, writes home that he has made application for the position of fourth cook on some ship of the navy. If he receives a change of position he will have his salary raised from $16 to $25 per month with better rations, and a chance of advancement.

AN ABLE ADDRESS.

Hon. Wm. Colvig Speaks to Voters From a Jeffersonian Democratic Standpoint.

The address of Hon. Wm. Colvig at the court house Friday night, was one of the ablest political speeches ever delivered in this city in any campaign. The fact that Mr. Colvig was to speak on this date was not sufficiently advertised to attract the attention of voters, and the audience that greeted him was not one-third the number that the speaker deserved. He had the rapid attention of all present, and the only regrets are to be heard from those who failed to attend.

Mr. Colvig is a Jeffersonian democrat, not in the latter day acceptance of that term, but in firm adherence to the principles laid down by the father of old-time democracy, and which President Roosevelt so thoroughly embodies today. "I am being branded throughout this state today," said the speaker, as a renegade democrat; but let me tell you that there were lots of renegade democrats—if you wish to apply that term—in this state in 1896 and 1900. They saved the state of Oregon for the republican party, and thereby contributed to the success of those principles which kept inviolate the credit and fair name of this Republic, and brought to it the greatest measure of prosperity it has ever enjoyed.

The speaker said that a party was to be followed just so long as it advocated those principles which its members believed to be for the best interests of the nation, but when its leaders proposed a policy that was un-American, the individual's course was plain: The Republic is greater than any party, and he should be for his country.

Mr. Colvig said he was discussing principles, not men. He was personally acquainted with the candidates for state offices in both parties, and he believed them to be good, competent men. But they represent parties which advocate different policies in the government of this nation, and it is these policies that voters are to pass upon in the coming election, and not the personality of the men that represent them.

Mr. Chamberlain knows that he would have no possible chance of election in this state, if he went about making democratic speeches, so he is making his own personality the burden of his addresses. He is asking democrats to vote for him, because he is a democrat, and seeks to have republicans support him because he is a "good fellow." He does not endorse the Philippine plank in his own platform. He had written the plank offered by the minority, which had been rejected by the democratic convention.

No man should come before the people and endorse a policy in which he, himself, does not believe. Turning his attention to Mr. Chamberlain's promises to bring about certain reforms, if elected governor, Mr. Colvig pointed out the fact that the governor has no power to initiate legislation. He can suggest certain measures to the legislature, but he is powerless to put them into effect. He may veto a bill passed by the legislature, and that body can pass it over his veto. Moreover, Mr. Chamberlain does not specify wherein he will practice economy. He talks in a general way of extravagance, but he never puts his finger on the place where he would if he had the power, lop off expense. Mr. Chamberlain says that the governor and other officers of this state are drawing greater salaries than the constitution provides. These officers draw just the salary provided by the constitution, but these salaries are augmented to proportions commensurate with the responsibility and dignity of the position by fees, and salaries for serving on boards and commissions, strictly within the constitution. If any one is to blame for this condition of affairs it is the people. They had an opportunity twelve years ago to call a constitutional convention to correct these things and they defeated it with their votes. No one will contend that $1,500 per annum is sufficient salary for the governor of this vigorous, young commonwealth. If Mr. Chamberlain were elected governor, he would take exactly the salary and fees now taken by Governor Geer, and if he were able to put state officers on flat salaries, he would see that the salary of the governor is equal to that of other officers now receiving in fees and salaries.

Mr. Colvig reviewed the expansion policy of Thos. Jefferson, and the Jeffersonian democratic presidents of the early days of the Republic, showing that they took in territory without asking the consent of the people who inhabited it. Where Jefferson thought there was a possibility that they would not consent, he prepared to send troops to make them consent. Many claim to be Jeffersonian democrats, who prate about all men being created free and equal and entitled to the inalienable right of liberty, un-mindful of the fact that when Jefferson penned these immortal words he owned a hundred slaves and they were toiling for him in his tobacco fields.

The democrats are trying to make capital out of the fact that Mr. Furnish is not an orator, yet Thos. Jefferson could not say an effective word from the platform in support of the Declaration of Independence which he had written. Jefferson, like Furnish, was a man of action, not words. Washington could write, but he was not an orator. Mr. Furnish is fully competent to discharge every duty required of him as governor by the constitution.

In conclusion, Mr. Colvig warned voters that unless they wished to encourage and foster the democratic policy of abandonment of the Philippine Islands, they should vote the republican ticket next June. If Mr. Chamberlain is elected the wires that Oregon has gone democratic, and that the policies advocated by Theodore Roosevelt and the republican party have failed of endorsement.

TONGUE HIGHLY REGARDED.

His Efforts to Secure a $10,000 Increase to the Good Roads Appropriation were Successful.

EDITOR GAZETTE: In view of the congressional election, people of the First Oregon District will, doubtless, be interested in knowing something of Mr. Tongue's reputation in the East, as a member of congress. I have taken some pains, recently to collect some public opinions regarding Mr. Tongue's words and works.

That Mr. Tongue can make a convincing speech, is shown in the fact that when the agricultural bill went through the house, with Mr. Cannon successfully resisting any effort to increase the appropriation, Mr. Tongue, by one speech, convinced even Mr. Cannon himself that $10,000 should be added to the amount allowed for good roads investigation, and the amendment was agreed to—the only one that was successful. After Mr. Tongue's talk, Mr. Cannon turned to him and remarked, with a good-natured smile, "That was a pretty good speech, Tongue; I think it deserves an increase of appropriation. I guess I will let it go in."

The good roads movement has an energetic and alert friend in the Oregon representative. Last month I attended a session of the National Good Roads Convention, held at Charlottesville, Virginia. There was a number of prominent speakers, including Senator Hanna, Representative Littlefield, of Maine, and Mr. Tongue, of Oregon; but the address of Mr. Tongue was the only one authorized to be printed. Returning on the train, Senator Hanna said, "Well, Tongue, they brought me down for a curiosity, but they depended on you for the solid business."

At the agricultural department, they say of Mr. Tongue, "None know him but to love him, none name him but to praise." There is a good reason for the high esteem in which Mr. Tongue is held in the "Farmer" division, for he has done excellent service in procuring appropriations for needed investigations. I was allowed to make a copy of the following letter which was sent to Mr. Tongue:

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, OFFICE OF PUBLIC ROAD INQUIRIES Washington, D. C., May 2, 1902.

Hon. Thos. H. Tongue, House of Representatives. My Dear Mr. Tongue:—Responding to your letter of April 30, I am pleased to hear that you are to have printed copies of your remarks made before the House on the subject of road improvement, and I shall be very much pleased to receive a number of copies here, so I may distribute them to some of our friends and to the Press. I am of the opinion that both of your speeches are the best that have ever been made in Congress on the subject, and I think they deserve wide circulation. Very truly, M. O. ELDREDGE, Acting Director.

Campaign reports from Oregon are to the effect that Mr. Tongue will have a largely increased plurality in June. This will, no doubt, greatly please Mr. Tongue, but the material gain of the decisively increased vote of confidence will accrue to the people of the district, for a congressman's ability to do effective work is quite largely influenced by the degree of support he receives at home. H. L. HOLMATE. Washington, D. C., May 22, 1902.

MARION HAYDEN REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE FOR REPRESENTATIVE.

Marion Hayden, of Alsos, was the unanimous choice of the Benton county republican convention for the office of representative from this county. This was a high compliment to Mr. Hayden's fitness for the place, for there were other splendidly qualified men available in the party for the position. Aside from the fact that Mr. Hayden has the ability to represent Benton most efficiently, there is the urgent necessity of sending to the legislature a man who will vote next winter for a senator from this state who will uphold the policies of Theodore Roosevelt and the principles of the republican party. Again, Mr. Hayden, as a member of the majority party in the legislature will be able to accomplish far more, than an equally competent man could who was affiliated with the minority party.

What Does It Mean?

President Harrison, of the Southern Pacific, recently rode over the C. & E. railroad lines from Yacumba to the summit of the Cascade mountains. It is conjectured by railroad men that as President Harrison did not have time, while in Oregon, to attend certain other matters it points to something brewing relative to the absorption, by the Harriman system, of the C. & E. The Oregonian, speaking of this matter, says:

"Railroad men have taken notice of these acts of Mr. Harrison, and some of these men have reached the conclusion that they point unmistakably to negotiations that may mean the absorption of the Hammond railroad properties into the Harriman system. Neither Mr. Harriman nor Mr. Hammond will admit that such a deal is on foot, but Mr. Harriman's action in going out of his way to ride over such a railroad as the Corvallis & Eastern, when he could not spare the time to go over his own properties, is regarded as more significant than words. There is no doubt in any quarter that the Corvallis & Eastern is waiting for a purchaser, and if it should fall into the hands of interests unfriendly to Mr. Harriman it might make him a good deal of trouble. Therefore the presumption is strong that the Corvallis & Eastern will soon become incorporated in the Harriman system."

Men who are well acquainted with railroad matters aver that including this line in a transcontinental system could not well be otherwise than beneficial for Oregon. The C. & E. road has not yet realized its original mission, and in some respects is in a state of partial paralysis, or arrested development, and it is easy to believe that under the protection of a larger railroad system it would be a far more profitable line.

By joking this line up with some greater system there is no doubt that new life would be felt along the line and the country it traverses be benefited beyond expectation. Let us hope that the day is not remote when the line of the C. & E. will be a paying proposition from one terminus to the other and that said terminus will be much farther apart than at present.

JOHN D. DALY REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE FOR SENATOR.

Senator John D. Daly, by his wisdom and far reaching benefits of his legislative acts, has become a prominent figure in the politics of this state. Not only have the interests of Benton county and the Agricultural College been advanced by reason of his service as a legislator, but great good has resulted to the state at large. Sunday's Oregonian has this to say of Senator Daly's lieue land bill: "Now that the sales of lieue land are practically a thing of the past in this state, it is worthy of note that Oregon made $500,000 by a wise piece of legislation in 1895. The lieue land business has always been more or less in the control of attorneys, who grew rich off the business that has thus passed through their hands. This has been true regardless of the political complexion of the state government."

"Prior to 1895 lieue land was sold for $1.25 per acre, though it was worth much more than that. "In 1895 a bill was introduced to raise the price of lieue land to $2.50 per acre, just double what it had been before, and to provide for a lieue land agent to look after the state's interests. The lieue land attorneys fought the measure by every means known to professional lobbyists. They introduced other bills which they hoped to have substituted for the objectionable measure, and proposed all sorts of amendments. John D. Daly, the author of the bill, fought hard in its defense, and finally secured its passage. "The returns to the irreducible school fund from this source have just doubled what they would have been if the law had remained unchanged, and it is estimated that the school fund is $500,000 better off by reason of the advance in price."
