The Republic presumes too much upon the gullibility of the American people regarding democratic free trade promises. The presentation of the "truths" set forth in the Republic, throughout the campaign of 1892, presented or, subject to heavy fine. the democrats with a victory in the fall of that year. But the presentation did not stop there. The wage earners in the great factories of the country were presented with years of idleness; the masses in the great cities with free soup; farmers and producers with low prices for their products and high rates of interest on money borrowed on mortgages. Oar military establishment was presented with a "Coxey army," our national treasury with empty coffers, and the world with an invitation to buy United States ed in favor of paying the expenbonds in time of peace.
