D. O. Thing, a timber buyer, of Minneapolis, Minn., is in Corvallis. He arrived a few days ago to make investigation regarding the timber that is held by Corvallis parties. It is thought that he will accompany the party that goes to Lake county from Corvallis next week to secure timber in that section. If the timber of Lake county suits Mr. Thing it is likely that he will make a flattering offer to those who have already secured claims in that section.

A sort of employment bureau has been instituted at the O. A. C. It is for the benefit of students who desire to secure employment to assist them in paying their way at the college. It is hoped that town people will patronize the bureau whenever they find themselves in need of help of any kind. Any information with reference to this matter will be gladly received at the bureau. It is believed that the bureau will prove of benefit to the students and town people alike.

It seems to be a question in the minds of some people whether there is money in chickens or not. A day or so ago A. C. White and J. M. Cameron were discussing this proposition and the former stated that his hens were not a source of profit by any means. Mr. White stated that he had fed his layers $12.50 worth of wheat and yet they did not lay. Mr. Cameron had taken the other side in the matter under discussion and this startling announcement of Mr. White's called for something extraordinary to offset it. In sheer desperation Mr. Cameron stated that he possessed twenty hens and one rooster. One of the hens is hovering over a brood of young ones, so she was not expected to lay. This left nineteen able-bodied hens to do the laying, and he declared that the day before he had gathered twenty-four eggs. For the benefit of curious ones, we are permitted to state that Mr. Cameron keeps black minorcas.

Geo. W. Thompson and family left, Tuesday for Roseburg, where it is probable they will spend the winter. Mr. Thompson has resided in this vicinity for the past eleven years, and he has many warm friends. His departure was not due to any dissatisfaction with this country, or the opportunities presented here for making a livelihood, but because Mr. Thompson has suffered much of late from rheumatism and he hopes that a change of climate may prove beneficial. It is quite probable that he will return to Corvallis in the spring.

Wednesday, Henry Ambler, the real estate dealer of Philomath, was in Corvallis assisting in some real estate transfers which he had negotiated. Mr. Ambler sold the H. J. Troup farm consisting of 135 acres, about two and a half miles south of Philomath, to Ernest Seechever. He also sold the Rufus Skipton place, about one and a half miles south of Philomath, to William Mettelstadt. The price paid for the Troup farm was $4,000, and the Skipton place was sold for $2,800. Messrs. Seechever and Mettelstadt are from Logwood, N. D., and have only been in this section for a short period. They state that they are most favorably impressed with the country. J. Wraga arrived home from a trip to Southern Oregon, last Monday. He accompanied a party of timber seekers to Western Lake county and located fourteen people on claims. Those who secure claims in this timber belt can file at Klamath Falls, but go to Lakeview to make final proof. Mr. Wraga reports great activity in that section on the part of people who are seeking claims. While he and his party were down there they encountered a party of twenty-one timber seekers. The latter were from Michigan, Minnesota and Iowa and they all located on claims. The timber of this belt is yellow pine and is said to be remarkably fine. Many of the trees are 15 or 16 feet in circumference and 80 or 90 feet to the first limb. H. S. Clodfelter, Mr. Wraga's partner in the business of locating parties on timber claims, expects to leave in company with another party some time next week.

Death has Claimed Him.

H. F. Fischer died at his home near this city Wednesday night, after a lingering illness with catarrh of the stomach. Every effort was made to prolong his life, but to no avail. Mr. Fischer returned but a few days ago from Tallman springs where he had spent the summer, and it was known then that the end was not far off.

The funeral occurred yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock, from the family residence, the services being conducted by Rev. Carrick in the presence of a great number of friends of the deceased. The mortal remains were laid to rest in Crystal Lake cemetery. All business houses of this city were closed during the services as a mark of respect to the deceased.

Henry Fred Fischer was born in Germany, March 25th, 1838. Coming to America while quite a child he grew to manhood in Illinois.

About 25 years ago he moved to Oregon with his family. On his arrival in Corvallis he purchased an interest in the Corvallis Flouring Mills, then owned by Gray & Korthaner. Later he purchased the interest of Mr. Korthaner and at the time of his death was sole proprietor of that valuable property.

Besides being a master of the miller's trade, Mr. Fischer was a mechanical genius. He was constantly studying and developing new processes and methods in his business, with the result that the product of his mills has become famous and has taken many high awards and medals at the great expositions. The mill, which was quite unpretentious when he first became interested in it, has been increased in capacity until its output is now 230 barrels per day.

These things stand as evidence of Mr. Fischer's untiring energy and excellent business ability. He was no small factor in the upbuilding of the material interests of this country. He had no time for social affairs, but he possessed the esteem and warmest regard of all with whom he came in contact. Honest, sincere, kind and generous, the community has lost in him a valued citizen.

Of the family, the following members survive him: The widow, August, Ernest, Fred and Martha Fischer, of Corvallis; Louis Fischer, of Silverton, and Mrs. Richard Kiger, of Corvallis.

Mrs. Christina Barker.

The death of Mrs. Christina Barker occurred in this city last Monday evening at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Emory Allen. She had been ill about six months prior to her death, but her illness was the result of old age more than anything else. The funeral services took place at the Allen residence Wednesday morning at ten o'clock and remains were interred in the Henkle cemetery. The services were conducted by Rev. A. Carrick.

The deceased was past 86 years of age at the time of her death. She was a pioneer of 1853, having crossed the plains with an ox team to Oregon in that year in company with her husband, and her brother, Ichabod Henkle. The latter survives her and has reached the age of 92 years. The Barkers settled on a farm near Philomath. After a residence of nearly 30 years they moved to Washington, where Mr. Barker died after a residence of a few years. After his death, Mrs. Barker returned to this county and made her home with Mr. and Mrs. E. Allen, of this city, until her death.

While en route across the plains her eyes became affected by alkali dust and a few years later she lost her sight. She was blind during the greater part of her life. Through all her life, despite the many afflictions that beset her, she remained a kind-hearted gentlewoman and won the esteem and affections of all. The surviving children are, Mrs. E. Allen, of Corvallis, Mrs. Bessie Witte, of Waitsburg, Wash., and William Barker, of Salem.

Be not Hypocrites.

"Remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy." This is what the churchmen teach us, and for more reasons than one it is a good rule to adhere to. But he who teaches it should be the last to break the rule. Not that it is any more sinful for him to break the Sabbath than for anyone else, but it is more noticeable. Again, if a churchman break this holy day, the effect of said act upon those around him is more a matter of regret than if he who is outside the pale of the church committed the same offense, if offense it is, for the simple reason that all eyes are upon the gentleman, and his regard or disregard for the sacredness of the day is greater in its effect than the actions of one who makes no profession of religion, even though he be religious.

In a certain residence block near the central part of this city we find nearly every resident a member of some church. Last Sabbath, a chance passer-by noted that all residents of this block were in an industrious mood. The work of improving their homes was being prosecuted with great diligence; the saw and hammer each gave forth its song, and weeds were being pulled and various particles of debris were being taken from the premises. All of this is very well, and the idea of beautifying and improving a home is highly commendable, but according to the professed ideas of the churchmen, it is wrong to do this work on the Sabbath. The worst part of it all is, that some of these people, good of intent though they be, had they chanced to find someone else working on the Sabbath when they, themselves, were having a day of rest and sacred commune, would have strictly condemned that party. We are too prone to lay down a rule or a law to govern some other party, no matter if he be in the church or out of it, but by a little judicious figuring we may be able to escape the charge of hypocrisy.

O. A. C. Athletics.

There is much enthusiasm out at the college over athletics this year. The boys are all taking hold with a will and everything is moving apace. Coach Herbold has taken charge of all available football timber and has the boys out doing preliminary work every evening. He is able to get from twenty to thirty young men to kick the pigskin on these occasions. At present they are working easily and are not attempting anything that will make them sore and stiffen them up.

Those who are managing football at the O. A. C. this year intend to issue season tickets, good for all games played on the college grounds. These tickets will be placed on sale down town. It is the intention of the managers to start a lot of small boys out to sell these tickets. They will allow the boys 5 per cent of all sales they make and give them every tenth ticket. At the end of the season the boy who has made the greatest sale of tickets will be given a cash prize of $5.

A number of important games are already scheduled for the season, which will open about November 11th. It is thought that at various times during the fall they will meet some of the strongest teams of the Pacific Northwest. They have already entered into arrangements for a game with Eugene.

The boys are doing everything in their power to assist in getting the grounds in good shape. It is thought that tomorrow a large number of students will donate work and give things on the grounds quite a boost. W. O. Heckart is rushing work on the grandstand.

W. G. Emory is visiting Corvallis for the time in seventeen years. As a boy and young man this was his home, but he has been employed in the sealing business for years and in that time has visited many cities. He is amazed at the wonderful growth of Corvallis during his absence, and the many changes that have taken place. Few of those whom he knew remain, and the younger people have outgrown his recollection. Mr. Emory will spend several days in this city and vicinity.

B. R. Woldt, whose saloon was destroyed by fire some two weeks ago, has lost no time in rebuilding. The contract for the woodwork was let to A. F. Peterson and B. J. Evers was given charge of the painting and papering. These gentlemen have pushed their work so rapidly that Mr. Woldt was able to open to his customers yesterday evening. The ground in the rear of the saloon, formerly occupied by the blacksmith shop and storeroom will be cleared off, and it is quite possible that Mr. Woldt will put a building there in the spring.
