Joseph Day, charged with assisting and aiding Chester Keedy and Harry Lyons to escape from the city jail in Corvallis, recently, was arrested in this city Friday. He pleaded "not guilty," when brought before Police Judge Greffoz, and his trial was set for 9 o'clock Saturday morning. Day refused to consult or engage counsel, or to produce witnesses, and the judge took the case under advisement. At one o'clock Saturday afternoon the prisoner was sentenced to 20 days in the city jail.

Governor Chamberlain has issued his first pardon to a convict. Executive clemency was extended to Hugh Patterson, and he was released from the penitentiary January 19th. Patterson is the S. P. brakeman who was sent up from Douglas county three years ago for five years on a conviction of rape, the victim being a Cottage Grove girl. B. F. Harvey, another brakeman, was charged with complicity in the same crime, but escaped conviction in the trial. The case excited great interest at the time.

Residents of the northern part of Benton county are exceedingly anxious that some action be taken immediately to relieve them of the burden of paying toll to cross the Willamette at Albany. To this end petitions were circulated in Corvallis and Albany last week. Dr. Leeper secured many signers in this city to a petition, the object of which was to precipitate some early action on the part of the courts of Linn and Benton counties, looking to a definite understanding concerning the matter in question.

The waters in the Willamette began subsiding at this city early yesterday morning, after reaching the highest stage since the flood of 1890, when a point was reached 29 feet and 6 inches above low water. In the present freshet the water reached 27 feet 8 inches above the low water mark. Trains ceased running on the east side of the river, and numerous railroad bridges were considered unsafe.

James H. Gilbert was elected president of the Intercollegiate Oratorical Association of Oregon, at a meeting of the executive committee of the association held at Monmouth, Friday. At this meeting, judges were chosen for the annual contest. The names of these gentlemen can not be announced until after the contest, but it is given out that the three judges on composition, reside outside of this state, while the judges on delivery are Oregon men.

The dramatic critic in Sunday's Portland Telegram has this to say of "The Gambler's Daughter," which appears at the opera house in this city tonight: "The Gambler's Daughter," the attraction at Corvallis this week, was patronized in accordance with the merit of the offering. It is a melodrama of an unmistakable type. To those glorying in the sensational drama "The Gambler's Daughter" came as a rare and palatable dish. As is customary with this class of plays, specialties were injected to restore a normal temperature after each heart-stopping situation, and these side plays were good. The company was as satisfactory as need be, and the melodrama was mounted in a manner that appealed to the eye by its ostentation.

FARMERS VICTORIOUS.

They Defeated Salem by a Score of 13 to 10, in First Game of Series.

Furious is the only word that will describe the basket ball game at the College Armory Friday evening, between the men's teams representing Willamette University and Oregon Agricultural College. No roughness was indulged in by the players, but the style of play was fast and strenuous. While the agricultural lads threw six goals from the field, and Salem had but two field goals to her credit when the game ended, the final score was, O A C, 13; W U, 10.

It was evident early in the game, that the farmers would have to defeat the umpires as well as the opposing team if they won. Salem's coach acted as one of these officials, both of which were W U men, and he called nine fouls on Corvallis during the game, and but one on Salem. The visitors were given a throw from the foul line in the first minute of play, and Parsons was loudly cheered as he converted the try into a point for Salem. Shortly after, the visitors were given another point on a foul. The university's coach continued presenting his team with points in this way until Salem had 5 points to her credit, and neither team had thrown a goal from the field.

The palpable fouls committed by his own team escaped the eye of this official, and the spectators began calling his attention to them. Corvallis was allowed one foul in the first half, the only one during the game. To this point, a goal from the field was added, and the half ended, Salem, 9; O A C, 3.

Supporters of the orange were not discouraged at this showing, for the visitors had thrown but one more basket from the field than the home team, and they hoped that the umpire's conscience would awaken during the rest between halves.

At the opening of the second half, the spectators were brought to their feet when the farmers made a pretty basket from the field. Each team played desperately, and the crowd only got its breath when the visitor's coach stopped the play to give his team a try from the foul line. Two of these were missed by Parsons, but he added a point on the third attempt. O A C had secured two more baskets from the field, and the score board read: Salem, 10; Corvallis, 9. Then Rinehart threw a beautiful basket, and as O A C took the lead for the first time during the game, the cheering of her supporters was fairly deafening.

But two minutes of play remained, and the visitors' only hope of escaping defeat lay in securing a point on a foul. The umpire promptly allowed this, and Parsons tried and missed. The gallery manifested its delight in yells. As the ball passed into play, brilliant passing carried it quickly to Salem's goal, and the farmers had added two points more to their score. Parsons demanded that the last basket made by O A C be not counted, and that he be allowed another try from the foul line, because of the disturbance in the gallery during his first attempt. Referee Dickey refused to grant this modest request, and Captain Pollard called his men from the field. The matter was discussed for some time, but the referee was firm, and said "play ball." O A C responded but the visitors refused to play. The game ended, O A C, 13; W U, 10; with 1½ minutes of play remaining.

The visitors played a clean game, and they are all gentlemanly fellows. It was not their place to object to the partiality shown them by the officials, and no one held them in any way responsible.

Additional Local.

Senator Daly has chosen Miss Eva Starr to be his clerk during the present session of the legislature.

Miss Eva Mattley died at the home of her parents in this city, Saturday evening, January 24th. Funeral services were conducted at the M. E. church yesterday afternoon at 2:30, by Rev. F. L. Moore, and interment was made at Odd Fellows cemetery. The deceased was 15 years of age at the time of her death. She was beloved by all who knew her.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to express our sincere gratitude to the many friends of Mrs. Phoebe Walden, who so kindly assisted us during her long illness. To part company with wife and mother is a heavy loss and goes to the deepest depth of sorrow. "It is just as natural to die as to be born," said Lord Bacon, a philosopher who seldom had a nebulous idea, yet it seems very hard for us to accept this statement without an admixture of doubt when brought face to face with the chasm of an open grave. But the soothing influence of kind friends wonderfully aid in allaying the pangs of this terrible affliction. We cordially thank the pastors, singers, and everybody that helped us, even in the slightest way, in the hour of our grief and bereavement.

EDWARD WALDEN.
